And all we mourn for.

King. Do you think 'tis this?

Queen. It may be, very likely.

Pol. Hath there been such a time, I'd fain know that,
That I have positively said 'Tis so,'
When it proved otherwise?

King. Not that I know.

Pol. [Pointing to his head and shoulder.] Take this from this, if this be otherwise:
If circumstances lead me, I will find
Where truth is hid, though it were hid indeed
Within the centre.

King. How may we try it further?

Pol. You know, sometimes he walks four hours together
Here in the lobby.

Queen. So he does, indeed.

Pol. At such a time I'll loose my daughter to him:
Be you and I behind an arras then;
Mark the encounter: if he love her not,
And be not from his reason fall'n thereon,
Let me be no assistant for a state,
But keep a farm and carters.

King. We will try it.

Queen. But, look, where sadly the poor wretch comes reading.

Pol. Away, I do beseech you, both away:
I'll board him presently. [Attendants.

[Exeunt KING, QUEEN, and Enter HAMLET, reading.

O, give me leave:
How does my good Lord Hamlet?

Ham. Well, God-a-mercy.

Pol. Do you know me, my lord?

Ham. Excellent well; you are a fishmonger.

Pol. Not I, my lord. [honest a man

Ham. Then I would you were so

Pol. Honest, my lord!

Ham. Ay, sir; to be honest, as this world goes, is to be one man picked out of ten thousand.

Pol. That 's very true, my lord.

Ham. For if the sun breed maggots in a dead dog, being a god kissing carrion,—Have you a daughter?

Pol. I have, my lord.

Ham. Let her not walk i' the sun: conception is a blessing; but as your daughter may conceive,—friend, look to 't.

Pol. [Aside.] How say you by that? Still harping on my daughter: yet he knew me not at first; he said I was a fishmonger: he is far gone, far gone: and truly in my youth I suffered much extremity for love; very near this. I'll speak to him again.—What do you read, my lord?

Ham. Words, words, words.

Pol. What is the matter, my lord?

Ham. Between who?

Pol. I mean, the matter that you read, my lord.

Ham. Slanders, sir: for the satirical rogue says here that old men have grey beards; that their faces are wrinkled; their eyes purging thick amber and plum-tree gum; and that they have a plentiful lack of wit, together with most weak hams: all which, sir, though I most powerfully and potently believe, yet I hold it not honesty to have it thus set down; for yourself, sir, should be old as I am, if, like a crab, you could go backward.

Pol. [Aside.] Though this be madness, yet there is method in 't.—Will you walk out of the air, my lord?

Ham. Into my grave.

Pol. Indeed, that is out o' the air. [Aside.] How pregnant sometimes his replies are! a happiness that often madness hits on, which reason and sanity could not so prosperously be delivered of. I will leave him, and suddenly contrive the means of meeting between him and my daughter.—My honourable lord, I will most humbly take my leave of you.

Ham. You cannot, sir, take from me any thing that I will more willingly part withal; except my life, except my life, except my life.

Po. Fare you well, my lord.

Ham. These tedious old fools!

Enter ROSENCRANTZ and GUILDENSTERN.

Pol. You go to seek the Lord Hamlet; there he is.

Ros. [To POLONIUS.] God save you, sir! [Exit POLONIUS.

Guil. My honoured lord!

Ros. My most dear lord!

Ham. My excellent good friends! How dost thou, Guildenstern? Ah, Rosencrantz! Good lads, how do ye both? [the earth.

Ros. As the indifferent children of Guil. Happy, in that we are not over-happy; [button.

On Fortune's cap we are not the very

Ham. Nor the soles of her shoe?

Ros. Neither, my lord.

Ham. Then you live about her waist, or in the middle of her favours?

Guil. Faith, her privates we.

Ham. In the secret parts of Fortune? O, most true; she is a strumpet. What's the news?

Ros. None, my lord, but that the world 's grown honest.

Ham. Then is doomsday near: but your news is not true. Let me question more in particular: what have you, my good friends, deserved at the hands of Fortune, that she sends you to prison hither?

Guil. Prison, my lord!

Ham. Denmark 's a prison.

Ros. Then is the world one.

Ham. A goodly one; in which there are many confines, wards, and dungeons; Denmark being one o' the worst.

Ros. We think not so, my lord.

Ham. Why, then 'tis none to you; for there is nothing either good or bad, but thinking makes it so: to me it is a prison.

Ros. Why, then your ambition makes it one; 'tis too narrow for your mind.

Ham. O God, I could be bounded in a nut-shell, and count myself a king of infinite space, were it not that I have bad dreams.

Guil. Which dreams indeed are ambition; for the very substance of the ambitious is merely the shadow of a dream.

Ham. A dream itself is but a shadow.

Ros. Truly, and I hold ambition of so airy and light a quality that it is but a shadow's shadow.

Ham. Then are our beggar's bodies, and our monarchs and outstretched heroes the beggars' shadows. Shall we to the court? for, by my fay, I cannot reason.

Ros. } We'll wait upon you.
Guil. }

Ham. No such matter: I will not sort you with the rest of my servants; for, to speak to you like an honest man, I am most dreadfully attended. But, in the beaten way of friendship, what make you at Elsinore?

Ros. To visit you, my lord; no other occasion.

Ham. Beggar that I am, I am even poor in thanks; but I thank you: and sure, dear friends, my thanks are too dear a halfpenny. Were you not sent for? Is it your own inclining? Is it a free visitation? Come, deal justly with me: come, come; nay, speak.

Guil. What should we say, my lord?

Ham. Why, any thing, but to the purpose. You were sent for; and there is a kind of confession in your looks which your modesties have not craft enough to colour: I know the good king and queen have sent for you.

Ros. To what end, my lord?

Ham. That you must teach me. But let me conjure you, by the rights of our fellowship, by the consonancy of our youth, by the obligation of our ever-preserved love, and by what more dear a better proposer could charge you withal, be even and direct with me, whether you were sent for, or no.

Ros. [Aside to GUIL.] What say you?

Ham. [Aside.] Nay then, I have an eye of you.—If you love me, hold not off.

Guil. My lord, we were sent for.

Ham. I will tell you why; so shall my anticipation prevent your discovery, and your secrecy to the king and queen moult no feather. I have of late—but wherefore I know not—lost all my mirth, forgone all custom of exercises; and, indeed, it goes so heavily with my disposition that this goodly frame, the earth, seems to me a sterile promontory; this most excellent canopy, the air, look you, this brave o'erhanging firmament, this majestical roof fretted with golden fire, why, it appears no other thing to me than a foul and pestilent congregation of vapours. What a piece of work is a man! how noble in reason! how infinite in faculty! in form and moving how express and admirable! in action how like an angel! in apprehension how like a god! the beauty of the world! the paragon of animals! And yet, to me, what is this quintessence of dust? man delights not me; no, nor woman neither; though, by your smiling, you seem to say so.

Ros. My lord, there was no such stuff in my thoughts.

Ham. Why did you laugh then, when I said 'Man delights not me'?

Ros. To think, my lord, if you delight not in man, what Lenten entertainment the players shall receive from you: we coted them on the way; and hither are they coming, to offer you service.

Ham. He that plays the king shall be welcome; his majesty shall have tribute of me; the adventurous knight shall use his foil and target; the lover shall not sigh gratis; the humorous man shall end his part in peace; the clown shall make those laugh whose lungs are tickled o' the sere; and the lady shall say her mind freely, or the blank verse shall halt for 't. What players are they?

Ros. Even those you were wont to take such delight in, the tragedians of the city.

Ham. How chances it they travel? their residence, both in reputation and profit, was better both ways.

Ros. I think their inhibition comes by the means of the late innovation.

Ham. Do they hold the same estimation they did when I was in the city? are they so followed?

Ros. No, indeed, are they not.

Ham. How comes it? do they grow rusty?

Ros. Nay, their endeavour keeps in the wonted pace: but there is, sir, an eyrie of children, little eyases, that cry out on the top of question, and are most tyrannically clapped for 't: these are now the fashion, and so berattle the common stages—so they call them—that many wearing rapiers are afraid of goose-quills and dare scarce come thither.

Ham. What, are they children? who maintains 'em? how are they escoted? Will they pursue the quality no longer than they can sing? will they not say afterwards, if they should grow themselves to common players—as it is most like, if their means are no better—their writers do them wrong, to make them exclaim against their own succession?

Ros. Faith, there has been much to do on both sides; and the nation holds it no sin to tarre them on to controversy: there was, for awhile, no money bid for argument, unless the poet and the player went to cuffs in the question.

Ham. Is 't possible?

Guil. O, there has been much throwing about of brains.

Ham. Do the boys carry it away?

Ros. Ay, that they do, my lord; Hercules and his load too.

Ham. It is not very strange; for mine uncle is King of Denmark, and those that would make mows at him while my father lived, give twenty, forty, fifty, an hundred ducats a-piece, for his picture in little. 'Sblood, there is something in this more than natural, if philosophy could find it out.

Guil. There are the players.

Ham. Gentlemen, you are welcome to Elsinore. Your hands. Come, then; the appurtenance of welcome is fashion and ceremony: let me comply with you in this garb, lest my extent to the players, which, I tell you, must show fairly outward, should more appear like entertainment than yours. You are welcome: but my uncle-father and aunt-mother are deceived.

Guil. In what, my dear lord?

Ham. I am but mad north-north-west: when the wind is southerly I know a hawk from a handsaw.

Enter POLONIUS.

Pol. Well be with you, gentlemen!

Ham. Hark you, Guildenstern; and you too; at each ear a hearer: that great baby you see there is not yet out of his swaddling-clouts.

Ros. Happily he's the second time come to them; for they say an old man is twice a child.

Ham. I will prophesy he comes to tell me of the players; mark it.—You say right, sir: o' Monday morning; 'twas then, indeed. [you.

Pol. My lord, I have news to tell

Ham. My lord, I have news to tell you. When Roscius was an actor in Rome,— [my lord.

Pol. The actors are come hither,

Ham. Buz, buz!

Pol. Upon mine honour,— [ass,'—

Ham. 'Then came each actor on his

Pol. The best actors in the world, either for tragedy, comedy, history, pastoral, pastoral-comical, historical-pastoral, tragical-historical, tragical-comical-historical-pastoral, scene individable, or poem unlimited: Seneca cannot be too heavy, nor Plautus too light. For the law of writ and the liberty, these are the only men.

Ham. O Jephthah, judge of Israel, what a treasure hadst thou! [lord?

Pol. What a treasure had he, my

Ham. Why,

'One fair daughter, and no more,
The which he loved passing well.'

Pol. [Aside.] Still on my daughter.

Ham. Am I not i' the right, old Jephthah?

Pol. If you call me Jephthah, my lord, I have a daughter that I love passing well.

Ham. Nay, that follows not.

Pol. What follows then, my lord?

Ham. Why,

'As by lot, God wot,'

and then, you know,

'It came to pass, as most like it was,'— the first row of the pious chanson will show you more; for look, where my abridgment comes.

Enter four or five Players.

You are welcome, masters; welcome, all.—I am glad to see thee well.—Welcome, good friends.—O, my old friend! Why, thy face is valanced since I saw thee last; comest thou to beard me in Denmark?—What, my young lady and mistress! By 'r lady, your ladyship is nearer to heaven than when I saw you last, by the altitude of a chopine. Pray God, your voice, like a piece of uncurrent gold, be not cracked within the ring.—Masters, you are all welcome. We'll e'en to 't like French falconers, fly at any thing we see: we'll have a speech straight: come, give us a taste of your quality; come, a passionate speech. [lord?

First Play. What speech, my good

Ham. I heard thee speak me a speech once, but it was never acted; or, if it was, not above once; for the play, I remember, pleased not the million; 'twas caviare to the general: but it was—as I received it, and others, whose judgments in such matters cried in the top of mine—an excellent play; well digested in the scenes, set down with as much modesty as cunning. I remember, one said there were no sallets in the lines to make the matter savoury, nor no matter in the phrase that might indite the author of affection; but called it an honest method, as wholesome as sweet, and by very much more handsome than fine. One speech in it I chiefly loved: 'twas Æneas' tale to Dido; and thereabout of it especially, where he speaks of Priam's slaughter: if it live in your memory, begin at this line: let me see, let me see—

'The rugged Pyrrhus, like the Hyrcanian beast,'— [hus:'—

it is not so: it begins with 'Pyrr-

'The rugged Pyrrhus, he whose sable arms, [resemble
Black as his purpose, did the night
When he lay couched in the ominous horse, [plexion smear'd
Hath now this dread and black com-
With heraldry more dismal: head to foot
Now is he total gules; horridly trick'd
With blood of fathers, mothers, daughters, sons,

Baked and impasted with the parching streets, [light
That lend a tyrannous and a damned
To their lord's murder: roasted in wrath and fire, [gore,
And thus o'er-sized with coagulate
With eyes like carbuncles, the hellish Pyrrhus
Old grandsire Priam seeks.'
So, proceed you.

Pol. 'Fore God, my lord, well spoken; with good accent and good discretion.

First Play. 'Anon he finds him
Striking too short at Greeks; his antique sword, [falls,
Rebellious to his arm, lies where it
Repugnant to command: unequal match'd, [strikes wide;
Pyrrhus at Priam drives; in rage
But with the whiff and wind of his fell sword
The unnerved father falls. Then senseless Ilium, [ing top
Seeming to feel this blow, with flam-
Stoops to his base, and with a hideous crash [lo! his sword, Takes prisoner Pyrrhus' ear: for,
Which was declining on the milky head [to stick:
Of reverend Priam, seem'd i' the air
So, as a painted tyrant, Pyrrhus stood; [matter,
And like a neutral to his will and
Did nothing. [storm,
But, as we often see, against some
A silence in the heavens, the rack stand still, [orb below
The bold winds speechless and the
As hush as death; anon the dreadful thunder [Pyrrhus' pause,
Doth rend the region; so, after
Aroused vengeance sets him new a-work; [mers fall
And never did the Cyclops' ham-
On Mars's armour, forged for proof eterne, [bleeding sword
With less remorse than Pyrrhus'
Now falls on Priam.
Out, out, thou strumpet, Fortune! All you gods, [power;
In general synod, take away her
Break all the spokes and fellies from her wheel, [hill of heaven
And bowl the round nave down the
As low as to the fiends!'

Pol. This is too long.

Ham. It shall to the barber's, with your beard.—Prithee, say on: he's for a jig or a tale of bawdry, or he sleeps. Say on; come to Hecuba.

First Play. 'But who, O, who had seen the mobled queen'—

Ham. 'The mobled queen'?

Pol. That 's good; 'mobled queen' is good.

First Play. 'Run barefoot up and down, threatening the flames
With bisson rheum; a clout upon that head [for a robe,
Where late the diadem stood; and
About her lank and all o'er-teemed loins, [caught up;
A blanket, in the alarm of fear
Who this had seen, with tongue in venom steep'd,
'Gainst Fortune's state would treason have pronounced:
But if the gods themselves did see her then, [cious sport
When she saw Pyrrhus make mali-
In mincing with his sword her husband's limbs, [she made,
The instant burst of clamour that
Unless things mortal move them not at all, [eyes of heaven,
Would have made milch the burning
And passion in the gods.'

Pol. Look, whether he has not turned his colour and has tears in 's eyes. Prithee, no more.

Ham 'Tis well; I'll have thee speak out the rest of this soon.—Good my lord, will you see the players well bestowed? Do you hear, let them be well used; for they are the abstract and brief chronicles of the time: after your death you were better have a bad epitaph than their ill report while you live. [cording to their desert.

Pol. My lord, I will use them ac-

Ham. God's bodykins, man, much better: use every man after his desert, and who shall 'scape whipping? Use them after your own honour and dignity: the less they deserve, the more merit is in your bounty. Take them in.

Pol. Come, sirs.

Ham. Follow him, friends: we'll hear a play to-morrow.

[Exit POLONIUS, with all the Players but the First.

Dost thou hear me, old friend; can you play the Murder of Gonzago?

First Play. Ay, my lord.

Ham. We'll ha 't to-morrow night. You could, for a need, study a speech of some dozen or sixteen lines, which I would set down and insert in 't? could you not?

First Play. Ay, my lord.

Ham. Very well. Follow that lord; and look you mock him not.

[Exit First Player.

[To ROS. and GUIL.] My good friends, I'll leave you till night: you are welcome to Elsinore.

Ros. Good my lord!

Ham. Ay, so, God be wi' ye!

[Exeunt ROSENCRANTZ and GUILDENSTERN.

Now I am alone.
O, what a rogue and peasant slave am I! [here,
Is it not monstrous that this player
But in a fiction, in a dream of passion,
Could force his soul so to his own conceit [wann'd;
That from her working all his visage
Tears in his eyes, distraction in 's aspect, [suiting
A broken voice, and his whole function
With forms to his conceit? and all for nothing!
For Hecuba! [ba,
What 's Hecuba to him, or he to Hecu-
That he should weep for her? What would he do, [passion
Had he the motive and the cue for
That I have? He would drown the stage with tears [speech,
And cleave the general ear with horrid
Make mad the guilty and appal the free, [indeed
Confound the ignorant, and amaze
The very faculties of eyes and ears.
Yet I,
A dull and muddy-mettled rascal, peak,
Like John-a-dreams, unpregnant of my cause, [king,
And can say nothing; no, not for a
Upon whose property and most dear life [a coward?
A damn'd defeat was made. Am I
Who calls me villain? breaks my pate across? [my face?
Plucks off my beard, and blows it in Tweaks me by the nose? gives me the lie i' the throat, [me this?
As deep as to the lungs? who does Ha! [cannot be
'Swounds, I should take it: for it
But I am pigeon-liver'd and lack gal
To make oppression bitter; or ere this
I should have fatted all the region kites [villain!
With this slave's offal: bloody, bawdy
Remorseless, treacherous, lecherous, kindless villain!
O, vengeance! [most brave,
Why, what an ass am I! This is
That I, the son of a dear father murder'd, [and hell,
Prompted to my revenge by heaven
Must, like a whore, unpack my heart with words,
And fall a-cursing, like a very drab,
A scullion!
Fie upon 't! foh! About, my brain! I have heard
That guilty creatures sitting at a play
Have by the very cunning of the scene
Been struck so to the soul that presently [factions;
They have proclaim'd their male-
For murder, though it have no tongue, will speak [these players
With most miraculous organ. I'll have Play something like the murder of my father [looks;
Before mine uncle: I'll observe his
I'll tent him to the quick: if he but blench, [I have seen
I know my course. The spirit that May be the devil: and the devil hath power [perhaps
To assume a pleasing shape; yea, and
Out of my weakness and my melancholy,
As he is very potent with such spirits,
Abuses me to damn me. I'll have grounds [the thing
More relative than this. The play 's
Wherein I'll catch the conscience of the king. [Exit.

ACT III.

SCENE I.—Elsinore. A Room in the Castle.

Enter KING, QUEEN, POLANIUS, OPHELIA, ROSENCRANTZ, and GUILDENSTERN.

King. And can you, by no drift of conference, [fusion,
Get from him why he puts on this con-
Grating so harshly all his days of quiet

With turbulent and dangerous lunacy ?
Ros. He does confess he feels himself distracted ; [means speak.
But from what cause he will by no
Guil. Nor do we find him forward to be sounded ;
But, with a crafty madness, keeps aloof,
When we would bring him on to some confession
Of his true state.
Queen. Did he receive you well ?
Ros. Most like a gentleman.
Guil. But with much forcing of his disposition. [demands
Ros. Niggard of question, but of our Most free in his reply.
Queen. Did you assay him
To any pastime ? [tain players
Ros. Madam, it so fell out that cer-
We o'er-raught on the way : of these we told him ; [joy
And there did seem in him a kind of
To hear of it : they are about the court ; [order
And, as I think, they have already
This night to play before him.
Pol. 'Tis most true :
And he beseech'd me to entreat your majesties
To hear and see the matter.
King. With all my heart ; and it doth much content me
To hear him so inclined. [edge,
Good gentlemen, give him a further
And drive his purpose on to these delights.
Ros. We shall, my lord.
[Exeunt ROSENCRANTZ and GUILDENSTERN.
King. Sweet Gertrude, leave us too ;
For we have closely sent for Hamlet hither ; [here
That he, as 'twere by accident, may Affront Ophelia :
Her father and myself, lawful espials,
Will so bestow ourselves that, seeing, unseen, [judge ;
We may of their encounter frankly
And gather by him, as he is behaved,
If 't be the affliction of his love or no
That thus he suffers for.
Queen. I shall obey you.
And for your part, Ophelia, I do wish
That your good beauties be the happy cause [your virtues
Of Hamlet's wildness : so shall I hope
Will bring him to his wonted way again
To both your honours.
Oph. Madam, I wish it may.
[Exit QUEEN.
Pol. Ophelia, walk you here.—Gracious, so please you,
We will bestow ourselves. [To OPHELIA] Read on this book ;
That show of such an exercise may colour [blame in this,—
Your loneliness. We are oft to
'Tis too much proved—that with devotion's visage
And pious action we do sugar o'er
The devil himself.
King. [Aside.] O, 'tis too true !
How smart a lash that speech doth give my conscience ! [tering art,
The harlot's cheek, beautied with plas-
Is not more ugly to the thing that helps it [word :
Than is my deed to my most painted
O heavy burden !
Pol. I hear him coming : let 's withdraw, my lord.
[Exeunt KING and POLONIUS.

Enter HAMLET.

Ham. To be, or not to be : that is the question : [suffer
Whether 'tis nobler in the mind to
The slings and arrows of outrageous fortune, [troubles,
Or to take arms against a sea of
And by opposing end them ? To die : to sleep ; [end
No more ; and by a sleep to say we
The heart-ache and the thousand natural shocks [mation
That flesh is heir to, 'tis a consum-
Devoutly to be wish'd. To die, to sleep ; [there 's the rub ;
To sleep : perchance to dream : ay,
For in that sleep of death what dreams may come [coil,
When we have shuffled off this mortal
Must give us pause : there's the respect
That makes calamity of so long life ;
For who would bear the whips and scorns of time,
The oppressor's wrong, the proud man's contumely, [delay,
The pangs of despised love, the law's
The insolence of office, and the spurns
That patient merit of the unworthy takes, [make
When he himself might his quietus

With a bare bodkin? who would fardels bear, [life,
To grunt and sweat under a weary
But that the dread of something after death, [bourn
The undiscover'd country from whose
No traveller returns, puzzles the will,
And makes us rather bear those ills we have [of?
Than fly to others that we know not
Thus conscience does make cowards of us all;
And thus the native hue of resolution
Is sicklied o'er with the pale cast of thought, [ment
And enterprises of great pith and mo-
With this regard their currents turn awry, [you now!
And lose the name of action.—Soft
The fair Ophelia! Nymph, in thy orisons
Be all my sins remember'd.

Oph. Good my lord,
How does your honour for this many a day? [well, well.

Ham. I humbly thank you; well,

Oph. My lord, I have remembrances of yours,
That I have longed long to re-deliver;
I pray you, now receive them.

Ham. No, not I;
I never gave you aught.

Oph. My honour'd lord, you know right well you did;
And, with them, words of so sweet breath composed
As made the things more rich: their perfume lost, [mind
Take these again; for to the noble
Rich gifts wax poor when givers prove unkind.
There, my lord.

Ham. Ha, ha! are you honest?

Oph. My lord?

Ham. Are you fair?

Oph. What means your lordship?

Ham. That if you be honest and fair, your honesty should admit no discourse to your beauty.

Oph. Could beauty, my lord, have better commerce than with honesty?

Ham. Ay, truly; for the power of beauty will sooner transform honesty from what it is to a bawd than the force of honesty can translate beauty into his likeness: this was sometime a paradox, but now the time gives it proof. I did love you once.

Oph. Indeed, my lord, you made me believe so.

Ham. You should not have believed me; for virtue cannot so inoculate our old stock but we shall relish of it: I loved you not.

Oph. I was the more deceived.

Ham. Get thee to a nunnery: why wouldst thou be a breeder of sinners? I am myself indifferent honest; but yet I could accuse me of such things that it were better my mother had not borne me: I am very proud, revengeful, ambitious; with more offences at my beck than I have thoughts to put them in, imagination to give them shape, or time to act them in. What should such fellows as I do crawling between earth and heaven? We are arrant knaves, all; believe none of us. Go thy ways to a nunnery. Where 's your father?

Oph. At home, my lord.

Ham. Let the doors be shut upon him, that he may play the fool no where but in 's own house. Farewell.

Oph. O, help him, you sweet heavens!

Ham. If thou dost marry, I'll give thee this plague for thy dowry: be thou as chaste as ice, as pure as snow, thou shalt not escape calumny. Get thee to a nunnery, go: farewell. Or, if thou wilt needs marry, marry a fool; for wise men know well enough what monsters you make of them. To a nunnery, go; and quickly too. Farewell. [him!

Oph. O heavenly powers, restore

Ham. I have heard of your paintings too, well enough; God hath given you one face, and you make yourselves another: you jig, you amble, and you lisp, and nickname God's creatures, and make your wantonness your ignorance. Go to, I'll no more on 't; it hath made me mad. I say, we will have no more marriages: those that are married already, all but one, shall live; the rest shall keep as they are. To a nunnery, go. [Exit.

Oph. O, what a noble mind is here o'erthrown!
The courtier's, soldier's, scholar's, eye, tongue, sword; [state,
The expectancy and rose of the fair

The glass of fashion and the mould of form,
The observed of all observers, quite,
And I, of ladies most deject and wretched,
That suck'd the honey of his music vows,
Now see that noble and most sovereign reason,
Like sweet bells jangled, out of tune and harsh;
That unmatch'd form and feature of blown youth
Blasted with ecstasy: O, woe is me,
To have seen what I have seen, see what I see!

Re-enter KING and POLONIUS.

King. Love! his affections do not that way tend;
Nor what he spake, though it lack'd form a little,
Was not like madness. There 's something in his soul
O'er which his melancholy sits on brood;
And I do doubt the hatch and the disclose
Will be some danger: which for to prevent,
I have in quick determination
Thus set it down:—he shall with speed to England,
For the demand of our neglected tribute:
Haply the seas and countries different
With variable objects shall expel
This something-settled matter in his heart;
Whereon his brains still beating puts him thus
From fashion of himself. What think you on 't?

Pol. It shall do well: but yet I do believe
The origin and commencement of his grief
Sprung from neglected love. How now, Ophelia!
You need not tell us what Lord Hamlet said;
We heard it all. My lord, do as you please;
But, if you hold it fit, after the play,
Let his queen mother all alone entreat him
To show his grief: let her be round with him;
And I'll be placed, so please you, in the ear
Of all their conference. If she find him not,
To England send him, or confine him where Your wisdom best shall think.

King. It shall be so:
Madness in great ones must not unwatch'd go. Exeunt.

SCENE II.—The Same. A Hall in the Castle.

Enter HAMLET, and Players.

Ham. Speak the speech, I pray you, as I pronounced it to you, trippingly on the tongue: but if you mouth it, as many of your players do, I had as lief the town-crier spoke my lines. Nor do not saw the air too much with your hand, thus; but use all gently: for in the very torrent, tempest, and, as I may say, whirlwind of your passion, you must acquire and beget a temperance that may give it smoothness. O, it offends me to the soul to hear a robustious periwig-pated fellow tear a passion to tatters, to very rags, to split the ears of the groundlings; who, for the most part, are capable of nothing but inexplicable dumb-shows and noise: I would have such a fellow whipped for o'erdoing Termagant; it out-herods Herod: pray you, avoid it.

First Play. I warrant your honour.

Ham. Be not too tame neither, but let your own discretion be your tutor: suit the action to the word, the word to the action; with this special observance, that you o'erstep not the modesty of nature: for any thing so overdone is from the purpose of playing, whose end, both at the first and now, was and is, to hold, as 'twere, the mirror up to nature; to show virtue her own feature, scorn her own image, and the very age and body of the time his form and pressure. Now, this overdone, or come tardy off, though it make the unskilful laugh, cannot but make the judicious grieve; the censure of the which one must in your allowance o'erweigh a whole theatre of others. O, there be players that I have seen play, and heard others praise, and that highly, not to speak it profanely, that, neither having the accent of Christians nor the gait of Christian, pagan, nor man, have so strutted and bellowed that I have thought some of Nature's journeymen had made men, and not made them well, they imitated humanity so abominably.

First Play. I hope we have reformed that indifferently with us, sir.

Ham. O, reform it altogether. And let those that play your clowns speak no more than is set down for them for there be of them that will themselves laugh, to set on some quantity of barren spectators to laugh too; though, in the meantime, some necessary question of the play be then to be considered: that 's villanous, and shows a most pitiful ambition in the fool that uses it. Go, make you ready. [Exeunt Players.

Enter POLONIUS, ROSENCRANTZ, and GUILDENSTERN.

How now, my lord! will the king hear this piece of work?

Pol. And the queen too, and that presently.

Ham. Bid the players make haste. [Exit POLONIUS.

Will you two help to hasten them?

Ros. } We will, my lord.
Guil. }

Ham. What ho! Horatio!

Enter HORATIO.

Hor. Here, sweet lord, at your service. [a man

Danish March. A Flourish. Enter KING, QUEEN, POLONIUS, OPHELIA, ROSENCRANTZ, GUILDENSTERN, and Others.

King. How fares our cousin Hamlet?

Ham. Excellent, i' faith; of the chameleon's dish: I eat the air, promise-crammed: you cannot feed capons so.

King. I have nothing with this answer, Hamlet; these words are not mine.

Ham. No, nor mine now. [To POLONIUS.] My lord, you played once i' the university, you say?

Pol. That did I, my lord; and was accounted a good actor.

Ham. What did you enact?

Pol. I did enact Julius Cæsar: I was killed i' the Capitol; Brutus killed me.

Ham. It was a brute part of him to kill so capital a calf there.—Be the players ready?

Ros. Ay, my lord; they stay upon your patience.

Queen. Come hither, my dear Hamlet, sit by me.

Ham. No, good mother, here 's metal more attractive.

Pol. [To the KING.] O, ho! do you mark that?

Ham. Lady, shall I lie in your lap?

Ham. That 's a fair thought to lie between maids' legs.

Oph. What is, my lord?

Ham. Nothing.

Oph. You are merry, my lord.

Ham. Who, I?

Oph. Ay, my lord.

Ham. O God, your only jig-maker. What should a man do but be merry? for, look you, how cheerfully my mother looks, and my father died within these two hours. [my lord.

Oph. Nay, 'tis twice two months,

Ham. So long? Nay then, let the devil wear black, for I'll have a suit of sables. O heavens! die two months ago, and not forgotten yet? Then there 's hope a great man's memory may outlive his life half a year: but, by 'r lady, he must build churches then; or else shall he suffer not thinking on, with the hobby-horse, whose epitaph is 'For, O, for, O, the hobby-horse is forgot.'

Hautboys play. The Dumb-Show enters.

Enter a King and a Queen very lovingly; the Queen embracing him, and he her. She kneels, and makes show of protestation unto him. He takes her up, and declines his head upon her neck: lays him down upon a bank of flowers: she, seeing him asleep, leaves him. Anon comes in a fellow, takes off his crown, kisses it, and pours poison in the King's ears, and exit. The Queen returns; finds the King dead, and makes passionate action. The Poisoner, with some two or three Mutes, comes in again, seeming to lament with her. The dead body is carried away. The Poisoner wooes the Queen with gifts: she seems loth and unwilling awhile, but in the end accepts his love. [Exeunt.

Oph. What means this, my lord?

Ham. Marry, this is miching mallecho; it means mischief.

Oph. Belike this show imports the argument of the play.

Enter Prologue.

Ham. We shall know by this fellow: the players cannot keep counsel; they'll tell all. [meant?

Oph. Will he tell us what this show

Ham. Ay, or any show that you'll show him: be not you ashamed to show, he'll not shame to tell you what it means.

Ham. Is this a prologue, or the posy of a ring?

Oph. 'Tis brief, my lord.

And as my love is sized, my fear is so.

Where little fears grow great, great love grows there.

P. King. Faith, I must leave thee, love, and shortly too;

My operant powers their functions leave to do: [behind,
And thou shalt live in this fair world
Honour'd, beloved; and haply one as kind
For husband shalt thou—

P. Queen. Sleep rock thy brain;
And never come mischance between us twain! [Exit.
Ham. Madam, how like you this play?
Queen. The lady doth protest too much, methinks.
Ham. O, but she'll keep her word.
King. Have you heard the argument? Is there no offence in 't?
Ham. No, no, they do but jest, poison in jest; no offence i' the world.
King. What do you call the play?
Ham. The Mouse-trap. Marry, how? Tropically. This play is the image of a murder done in Vienna: Gonzago is the duke's name; his wife, Baptista: you shall see anon; 'tis a knavish piece of work: but what o' that? your majesty, and we that have free souls, it touches us not: let the galled jade wince, our withers are unwrung.

Enter Player, as LUCIANUS.

This is one Lucianus, nephew to the king. [my lord.
Oph. You are as good as a chorus,
Ham. I could interpret between you and your love, if I could see the puppets dallying. [are keen.
Oph. You are keen, my lord, you

Oph. Still better, and worse.

Ham. So you must take your husbands.—Begin, murderer; pox, leave thy damnable faces, and begin. Come: 'the croaking raven doth bellow for revenge.'

Ham. He poisons him i' the garden for his estate. His name 's Gonzago: the story is extant, and written in very choice Italian: you shall see anon how the murderer gets the love of Gonzago's wife.

Oph. The king rises.

Ham. What, frighted with false fire?

Queen. How fares my lord?

Pol. Give o'er the play.

King. Give me some light. Away!

All. Lights, lights, lights!

[Exeunt all but HAMLET and HORATIO.

Ham. 'Why, let the stricken deer go weep,
The hart ungalled play;
For some must watch, while some must sleep:
So runs the world away.'

Would not this, sir, and a forest of feathers—if the rest of my fortunes turn Turk with me—with two Provincial roses on my razed shoes, get me a fellowship in a cry of players, sir?

Hor. Half a share.

Ham. A whole one, I.

'For thou dost know, O Damon dear,
This realm dismantled was
Of Jove himself; and now reigns here
A very, very—pajock.'

Hor. You might have rhymed.

Ham. O good Horatio, I'll take the ghost's word for a thousand pound. Didst perceive?

Hor. Very well, my lord.

Ham. Upon the talk of the poisoning?

Hor. I did very well note him.

Ham. Ah, ha! Come, some music! come, the recorders!

For if the king like not the comedy,
Why then, belike,—he likes it not, perdy.
Come, some music!

Re-enter ROSENCRANTZ and GUILDENSTERN.

Guil. Good my lord, vouchsafe me a word with you.

Ham. Sir, a whole history.

Guil. The king, sir,—

Ham. Ay, sir, what of him?

Guil. Is in his retirement marvellous distempered.

Ham. With drink, sir?

Guil. No, my lord, rather with choler.

Ham. Your wisdom should show itself more richer to signify this to the doctor; for, for me to put him to his purgation would perhaps plunge him into far more choler.

Guil. Good my lord, put your discourse into some frame, and start not so wildly from my affair.

Ham. I am tame, sir: pronounce.

Guil. The queen, your mother, in most great affliction of spirit, hath sent me to you.

Ham. You are welcome.

Guil. Nay, good my lord, this courtesy is not of the right breed. If it shall please you to make me a wholesome answer, I will do your mother's commandment: if not, your pardon and my return shall be the end of my business.

Ham. Sir, I cannot.

Guil. What, my lord?

Ham. Make you a wholesome answer; my wit 's diseased: but, sir, such answer as I can make, you shall command; or rather, as you say, my mother: therefore no more, but to the matter: my mother, you say,—

Ros. Then thus she says; your behaviour hath struck her into amazement and admiration.

Ham. O wonderful son, that can so astonish a mother!—But is there no sequel at the heels of this mother's admiration? Impart.

Ros. She desires to speak with you in her closet, ere you go to bed.

Ham. We shall obey, were she ten times our mother. Have you any further trade with us?

Ros. My lord, you once did love me.

Ham. So I do still, by these pickers and stealers.

Ros. Good my lord, what is your cause of distemper? you do surely bar the door upon your own liberty, if you deny your griefs to your friend.

Ham. Sir, I lack advancement.

Ros. How can that be, when you have the voice of the king himself for your succession in Denmark?

Ham. Ay, sir, but 'While the grass grows,'—the proverb is something musty.

Re-enter Players with recorders.

O, the recorders! let me see one.—To withdraw with you:—why do you go about to recover the wind of me, as if you would drive me into a toil?

Guil. O, my lord, if my duty be too bold, my love is too unmannerly.

Ham. I do not well understand that. Will you play upon this pipe?

Guil. My lord, I cannot.

Ham. I pray you.

Guil. Believe me, I cannot.

Ham. I do beseech you.

Guil. I know no touch of it, my lord.

Ham. 'Tis as easy as lying: govern these ventages with your finger and thumb, give it breath with your mouth, and it will discourse most eloquent music. Look you, these are the stops.

Guil. But these cannot I command to any utterance of harmony; I have not the skill.

Ham. Why, look you now, how unworthy a thing you make of me! You would play upon me; you would seem to know my stops; you would pluck out the heart of my mystery; you would sound me from my lowest note to the top of my compass: and there is much music, excellent voice, in this little organ; yet cannot you make it speak. 'Sblood, do you think I am easier to be played on than a pipe? Call me what instrument you will, though you can fret me, yet you cannot play upon me.

Enter POLONIUS.

God bless you, sir!

Pol. My lord, the queen would speak with you, and presently.

Ham. Do you see yonder cloud that 's almost in shape of a camel?

Pol. By the mass, and 'tis like a camel, indeed.

Ham. Methinks it is like a weasel.

Pol. It is backed like a weasel.

Ham. Or like a whale?

Pol. Very like a whale.

Ham. Then will I come to my mother by and by. [Aside] They fool me to the top of my bent.—I will come by and by.

Pol. I will say so. [Exit.

Ham. 'By and by' is easily said. Leave me, friends.

[Exeunt all but HAMLET.

'Tis now the very witching time of night,
When churchyards yawn and hell itself breathes out
Contagion to this world: now could I drink hot blood,
And do such bitter business as the day
Would quake to look on. Soft! now to my mother.
O heart, lose not thy nature; let not ever
The soul of Nero enter this firm bosom:
Let me be cruel, not unnatural:
I will speak daggers to her, but use none;
My tongue and soul in this be hypocrites;
How in my words soever she be shent,
To give them seals never, my soul, consent! [Exit.

SCENE III.—The Same. A Room in the Castle.

Enter KING, ROSENCRANTZ, and GUILDENSTERN.

King. I like him not, nor stands it safe with us
To let his madness range. Therefore prepare you;
I your commission will forthwith dispatch,
And he to England shall along with you:
The terms of our estate may not endure
Hazard so near us as doth hourly grow
Out of his lunacies.

Guil. We will ourselves provide:
Most holy and religious fear it is
To keep those many many bodies safe
That live and feed upon your majesty.

Ros. The single and peculiar life is bound
With all the strength and armour of the mind
To keep itself from noyance; but much more
That spirit upon whose weal depend

The lives of many. The cease of majesty [draw
Dies not alone; but, like a gulf, doth
What 's near it with it: it is a massy wheel, [mount,
Fix'd on the summit of the highest
To whose huge spokes ten thousand lesser things [when it falls,
Are mortised and adjoin'd; which,
Each small annexment, petty consequence, [alone
Attends the boisterous ruin. Never Did the king sigh, but with a general groan. [speedy voyage;

King. Arm you, I pray you, to this
For we will fetters put upon this fear,
Which now goes too free-footed.

Ros. } We will haste us.
Guil. }

[Exeunt Rosencrantz and Guildenstern.

Enter Polonius.

Pol. My lord, he 's going to his mother's closet:
Behind the arras I'll convey myself,
To hear the process; I'll warrant she'll tax him home: [said,
And, as you said, and wisely was it
'Tis meet that some more audience than a mother,
Since Nature makes them partial, should o'erhear
The speech, of vantage. Fare you well, my liege:
I'll call upon you ere you go to bed,
And tell you what I know.

King. Thanks, dear my lord.

[Exit Pol.

O, my offence is rank, it smells to heaven;
It hath the primal eldest curse upon 't,
A brother's murder! Pray can I not,
Though inclination be as sharp as will:
My stronger guilt defeats my strong intent; [bound,
And, like a man to double business
I stand in pause where I shall first begin, [hand

Can serve my turn? 'Forgive me my foul murder'? [sess'd

Enter Hamlet.

Ham. Now might I do it pat, now he is praying; [heaven;
And now I'll do 't: and so he goes to

The KING rises, and advances.

King. My words fly up, my thoughts remain below :
Words without thoughts never to heaven go. [Exit.

SCENE IV.—The Same. The QUEEN'S Closet.

Enter QUEEN and POLONIUS.

Pol. He will come straight. Look you lay home to him :
Tell him his pranks have been too broad to bear with,
And that your grace hath screen'd and stood between [even here.
Much heat and him. I'll sconce me
Pray you, be round with him.
Ham. [Within.] Mother, mother, mother !
Queen. I'll warrant you ; fear me not. Withdraw, I hear him coming.
[POLONIUS hides behind the arras.

Enter HAMLET.

Ham. Now, mother, what 's the matter ?
Queen. Hamlet, thou hast thy father much offended.
Ham. Mother, you have my father much offended.
Queen. Come, come, you answer with an idle tongue.
Ham. Go, go, you question with a wicked tongue.
Queen. Why, how now, Hamlet !
Ham. What 's the matter now ?
Queen. Have you forgot me ?
Ham. No, by the rood, not so :
You are the queen, your husband's brother's wife ;
And—would it were not so !—you are my mother.
Queen. Nay, then, I'll set those to you that can speak.
Ham. Come, come, and sit you down ; you shall not budge ;
You go not till I set you up a glass
Where you may see the inmost part of you.
Queen. What wilt thou do ? thou wilt not murder me ?
Help, help, ho ! [help !
Pol. [Behind.] What, ho ! help, help,
Ham. [Drawing.] How now ! a rat ? Dead, for a ducat, dead !
[Makes a pass through the arras.
Pol. [Behind.] O, I am slain.
[Falls and dies.
Queen. O me, what hast thou done ?
Ham. Nay, I know not : is it the king ? [deed is this !
Queen. O, what a rash and bloody
Ham. A bloody deed !—almost as bad, good mother,
As kill a king, and marry with his brother.
Queen. As kill a king !
Ham. Ay, lady, 'twas my word.
[Lifts up the arras and discovers POLONIUS.
Thou wretched, rash, intruding fool, farewell ! [fortune ;
I took thee for thy better : take thy
Thou find'st to be too busy is some danger.—
Leave wringing of your hands : peace ! sit you down, [I shall,
And let me wring your heart ; for so
If it be made of penetrable stuff ;
If damned custom have not brass'd it so
That it be proof and bulwark against sense.
Queen. What have I done, that thou darest wag thy tongue
In noise so rude against me ?
Ham. Such an act
That blurs the grace and blush of modesty ; [rose Calls virtue hypocrite ; takes off the
From the fair forehead of an innocent love, [riage-vows
And sets a blister there ; makes mar-
As false as dicers' oaths : O, such a deed
As from the body of contraction plucks

The very soul, and sweet religion makes
A rhapsody of words: heaven's face doth glow;
Yea, this solidity and compound mass,
With tristful visage, as against the doom,
Is thought-sick at the act.
Queen. Ay me, what act,
That roars so loud and thunders in the index?
Ham. Look here, upon this picture, and on this,
The counterfeit presentment of two brothers.
See, what a grace was seated on this brow;
Hyperion's curls, the front of Jove himself,
An eye like Mars, to threaten and command;
A station like the herald Mercury
New-lighted on a heaven-kissing hill;
A combination and a form indeed,
Where every god did seem to set his seal,
To give the world assurance of a man:
This was your husband. Look you now, what follows:
Here is your husband; like a mildew'd ear,
Blasting his wholesome brother. Have you eyes?
Could you on this fair mountain leave to feed,
And batten on this moor? Ha! have you eyes?
You cannot call it love; for at your age
The hey-day in the blood is tame, it's humble,
And waits upon the judgment; and what judgment
Would step from this to this? Sense, sure, you have,
Else could you not have motion: but sure, that sense
Is apoplex'd: for madness would not err,
Nor sense to ecstasy was ne'er so thrall'd
But it reserved some quantity of choice,
To serve in such a difference. What devil was 't
That thus hath cozen'd you at hoodman-blind?
Eyes without feeling, feeling without sight,
Ears without hands or eyes, smelling sans all,
Or but a sickly part of one true sense
Could not so mope. O shame! where is thy blush? Rebellious hell,
If thou canst mutine in a matron's bones,
To flaming youth let virtue be as wax,
And melt in her own fire: proclaim no shame
When the compulsive ardour gives the charge,
Since frost itself as actively doth burn,
And reason panders will.
Queen. O Hamlet, speak no more:
Thou turn'st mine eyes into my very soul; and there I see such black and grained spots
As will not leave their tinct.
Ham. Nay, but to live
In the rank sweat of an enseamed bed,
Stew'd in corruption, honeying and making love
Over the nasty sty,—
Queen. O, speak to me no more;
These words, like daggers, enter in mine ears;
No more, sweet Hamlet!
Ham. A murderer and a villain;
A slave that is not twentieth part the tithe
Of your precedent lord; a vice of kings;
A cutpurse of the empire and the rule,
That from a shelf the precious diadem stole,
And put it in his pocket!
Queen. No more!
Ham. A king of shreds and patches—

Enter Ghost.

Save me, and hover o'er me with your wings,
You heavenly guards!—What would your gracious figure?
Queen. Alas, he 's mad!
Ham. Do you not come your tardy son to chide,
That, lapsed in time and passion, lets go by
The important acting of your dread command?
O, say!
Ghost. Do not forget: this visitation
Is but to whet thy almost blunted purpose.
But look, amazement on thy mother sits:
O, step between her and her fighting soul:
Conceit in weakest bodies strongest works:
Speak to her, Hamlet.
Ham. How is it with you, lady?
Queen. Alas, how is 't with you,
That you do bend your eye on vacancy
And with the incorporal air do hold discourse?
Forth at your eyes your spirits wildly peep;
And, as the sleeping soldiers in the alarm,

Your bedded hair, like life in excrements,
Starts up and stands on end. O gentle son,
Upon the heat and flame of thy distem-
Sprinkle cool patience. Whereon do you look?

Ham. On him, on him! Look you, how pale he glares!
His form and cause conjoin'd, preaching to stones,
Would make them capable. [To Ghost] Do not look upon me;
Lest with this piteous action you convert
My stern effects: then what I have to do
Will want true colour; tears perchance for blood.

Queen. To whom do you speak this?

Ham. Do you see nothing there?

Queen. Nothing at all; yet all that is I see.

Ham. Nor did you nothing hear?

Queen. No, nothing but ourselves.

Ham. Why, look you there! look, how it steals away!
My father, in his habit as he lived!
Look, where he goes, even now, out at the portal! [Exit Ghost.

Queen. This is the very coinage of your brain:
This bodiless creation ecstasy
Is very cunning in.

Ham. Ecstasy!
My pulse, as yours, doth temperately keep time,
And makes as healthful music: it is not madness
That I have utter'd: bring me to the test,
And I the matter will re-word; which madness
Would gambol from. Mother, for love of grace,
Lay not that flattering unction to your soul,
That not your trespass but my madness speaks:
It will but skin and film the ulcerous place,
Whiles rank corruption, mining all within,
Infects unseen. Confess yourself to heaven;
Repent what 's past; avoid what is to come;
And do not spread the compost on the weeds,
To make them ranker. Forgive me this my virtue;
For in the fatness of these pursy times
Virtue itself of vice must pardon beg;
Yea, curb and woo for leave to do him good.

Queen. O Hamlet, thou hast cleft my heart in twain.

Ham. O, throw away the worser part of it,
And live the purer with the other half.
Good night: but go not to mine uncle's bed;
Assume a virtue, if you have it not.
That monster, Custom, who all sense doth eat,
Of habits devil, is angel yet in this,
That to the use of actions fair and good
He likewise gives a frock or livery,
That aptly is put on. Refrain to-night;
And that shall lend a kind of easiness
To the next abstinence: the next more easy;
For use almost can change the stamp of nature,
And either curb the devil, or throw him out
With wondrous potency. Once more, good night:
And when you are desirous to be blest,
I'll blessing beg of you. For this same lord,
[Pointing to POLONIUS.
I do repent: but heaven hath pleased it so,
To punish me with this, and this with me,
That I must be their scourge and minister.
I will bestow him, and will answer well
The death I gave him. So, again, good night.
[Aside] I must be cruel, only to be kind:
Thus bad begins and worse remains behind.—
One word more, good lady.

Queen. What shall I do?

Ham. Not this, by no means, that I bid you do:
Let the bloat king tempt you again to bed;
Pinch wanton on your cheek; call you his mouse;
And let him, for a pair of reechy kisses,
Or paddling in your neck with his damn'd fingers,
Make you to ravel all this matter out,
That I essentially am not in madness,
But mad in craft. 'Twere good you let him know;
For who, that 's but a queen, fair, sober, wise,
Would from a paddock, from a bat, a gib,
Such dear concernings hide? who would do so?
No, in despite of sense and secrecy,

Unpeg the basket on the house's top,
Let the birds fly, and, like the famous ape,
To try conclusions, in the basket creep,
And break your own neck down.

Queen. Be thou assured, if words be made of breath,
And breath of life, I have no life to breathe
What thou hast said to me.

Ham. I must to England; you know that?

Queen. Alack,
I had forgot: 'tis so concluded on.

Ham. There's letters seal'd: and my two schoolfellows,
Whom I will trust as I will adders fang'd,
They bear the mandate; they must sweep my way,
And marshal me to knavery. Let it work;
For 'tis the sport to have the engineer
Hoist with his own petar: and 't shall go hard
But I will delve one yard below their mines,
And blow them at the moon: O, 'tis most sweet,
When in one line two crafts directly meet.
This man shall set me packing:
I'll lug the guts into the neighbour room.
Mother, good night. Indeed this counsellor
Is now most still, most secret, and most grave,
Who was in life a foolish prating knave.
Come, sir, to draw toward an end with you.
Good night, mother.

[Exeunt severally; HAMLET dragging in POLONIUS.

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—Elsinore. A Room in the Castle.

Enter KING, QUEEN, ROSENCRANTZ, and GUILDENSTERN.

King. There's matter in these sighs, these profound heaves:
You must translate: 'tis fit we understand them.
Where is your son?

Queen. Bestow this place on us a little while.
[Exeunt ROSENCRANTZ and GUILDENSTERN.
Ah, my good lord, what have I seen to-night!

King. What, Gertrude? How does Hamlet?

Queen. Mad as the sea and wind, when both contend
Which is the mightier: in his lawless fit,
Behind the arras hearing something stir,
Whips out his rapier, cries 'A rat, a rat!'
And, in this brainish apprehension, kills
The unseen good old man.

King. O heavy deed!
It had been so with us, had we been there:
His liberty is full of threats to all;
To you yourself, to us, to every one.
Alas, how shall this bloody deed be answer'd?
It will be laid to us, whose providence
Should have kept short, restrain'd, and out of haunt,
This mad young man: but so much was our love,
We would not understand what was most fit;
But, like the owner of a foul disease,
To keep it from divulging, let it feed
Even on the pith of life. Where is he gone?

Queen. To draw apart the body he hath kill'd:
O'er whom his very madness, like some ore
Among a mineral of metals base,
Shows itself pure; he weeps for what is done.

King. O Gertrude, come away!
The sun no sooner shall the mountains touch,
But we will ship him hence: and this vile deed
We must, with all our majesty and skill,
Both countenance and excuse.—Ho, Guildenstern!

Re-enter ROSENCRANTZ and GUILDENSTERN.

Friends both, go join you with some further aid:
Hamlet in madness hath Polonius slain,
And from his mother's closet hath he dragg'd him:
Go seek him out; speak fair, and bring the body
Into the chapel. I pray you, haste in this.

[Exeunt ROSENCRANTZST and GUILDENERN.

Come, Gertrude, we'll call up our wisest friends;
And let them know both what we mean to do,
And what 's untimely done: so, haply, slander,
Whose whisper o'er the world's diameter,

As level as the cannon to his blank,
Transports his poison'd shot, may miss our name, [away!
And hit the woundless air. O, come
My soul is full of discord and dismay.
[Exeunt.

SCENE II.—The Same. Another Room in the Castle.

Enter HAMLET.

Ham. Safely stowed.
Ros. } [Within.] Hamlet! Lord
Guil. } Hamlet!
Ham. But soft,—what noise? who calls on Hamlet?
O, here they come.

Enter ROSENCRANTZ and GUILDENSTERN.

Ros. What have you done, my lord, with the dead body?
Ham. Compounded it with dust, whereto 'tis kin.
Ros. Tell us where 'tis, that we may take it thence
And bear it to the chapel.
Ham. Do not believe it.
Ros. Believe what?
Ham. That I can keep your counsel and not mine own. Besides, to be demanded of a sponge! what replication should be made by the son of a king? [lord?
Ros. Take you me for a sponge, my
Ham. Ay, sir; that soaks up the king's countenance, his rewards, his authorities. But such officers do the king best service in the end: he keeps them, like an ape, in the corner of his jaw; first mouthed, to be last swallowed: when he needs what you have gleaned, it is but squeezing you, and, sponge, you shall be dry again.
Ros. I understand you not, my lord.
Ham. I am glad of it: a knavish speech sleeps in a foolish ear.
Ros. My lord, you must tell us where the body is, and go with us to the king.
Ham. The body is with the king, but the king is not with the body. The king is a thing—
Guil. A thing, my lord!
Ham. Of nothing: bring me to him. Hide fox, and all after. [Exeunt.

SCENE III.—The Same. Another Room in the Castle.

Enter KING, attended.

King. I have sent to seek him, and to find the body. [loose!
How dangerous is it that this man goes
Yet must not we put the strong law on him:
He 's loved of the distracted multitude,
Who like not in their judgment, but their eyes;
And where 'tis so, the offender's scourge is weigh'd,
But never the offence. To bear all smooth and even, [seem
This sudden sending him away must Deliberate pause: diseases desperate grown
By desperate appliance are relieved,
Or not at all.

Enter ROSENCRANTZ.

How now! what hath befall'n?
Ros. Where the dead body is bestow'd, my lord,
We cannot get from him.
King. But where is he?
Ros. Without, my lord; guarded, to know your pleasure.
King. Bring him before us. [lord.
Ros. Ho, Guildenstern! bring in my

Enter HAMLET and GUILDENSTERN.

King. Now, Hamlet, where 's Polonius?
Ham. At supper.
King. At supper! where?
Ham. Not where he eats, but where he is eaten: a certain convocation of politic worms are e'en at him. Your worm is your only emperor for diet: we fat all creatures else to fat us, and we fat ourselves for maggots: your fat king and your lean beggar is but variable service; two dishes, but to one table: that 's the end.
King. Alas, alas!
Ham. A man may fish with the worm that hath eat of a king, and eat of the fish that hath fed of that worm.
King. What dost thou mean by this?
Ham. Nothing but to show you how a king may go a progress through the guts of a beggar.
King. Where is Polonius?
Ham. In heaven; send thither to see: if your messenger find him not there, seek him i' the other place yourself. But indeed, if you find him not within this month, you shall nose him as you go up the stairs into the lobby.

King. [To some Attendants.] Go seek him there.

Ham. He will stay till you come.

[Exeunt Attendants.

King. Hamlet, this deed, for thine especial safety,— [grieve
Which we do tender, as we dearly
For that which thou hast done,—must send thee hence [thyself;
With fiery quickness: therefore prepare
The bark is ready, and the wind at help,
The associates tend, and every thing is bent
For England.

Ham. For England!

King. Ay, Hamlet.

Ham. Good.

King. So is it, if thou knew'st our purposes.

Ham. I see a cherub that sees them. But, come; for England! Farewell, dear mother.

King. Thy loving father, Hamlet.

Ham. My mother: father and mother is man and wife; man and wife is one flesh; and so, my mother. Come, for England! [Exit.

King. Follow him at foot; tempt him with speed aboard;
Delay it not; I'll have him hence to-night: [done
Away! for every thing is seal'd and
That else leans on the affair: pray you, make haste.

[Exeunt ROSENCRANTZ and GUILDENSTERN.

And, England, if my love thou hold'st at aught— [thee sense,
As my great power thereof may give
Since yet thy cicatrice looks raw and red [awe
After the Danish sword, and thy free
Pays homage to us—thou mayst not coldly set [at full,
Our sovereign process; which imports
By letters conjuring to that effect,
The present death of Hamlet. Do it, England; [rages,
For like the hectic in my blood he
And thou must cure me: till I know 'tis done,
Howe'er my haps, my joys were ne'er begun. [Exit.

SCENE IV.—A Plain in Denmark.

Enter FORTINBRAS, a Captain, and Soldiers, marching.

For. Go, captain, from me greet the Danish king;
Tell him that, by his license, Fortinbras
Craves the conveyance of a promised march [rendezvous.
Over his kingdom. You know the
If that his majesty would aught with us,
We shall express our duty in his eye;
And let him know so.

Cap. I will do 't, my lord.

For. Go softly on.

[Exeunt FORTINBRAS and Soldiers.

Enter HAMLET, ROSENCRANTZ, GUILDENSTERN, and Others.

Ham. Good sir, whose powers are these?

Cap. They are of Norway, sir.

Ham. How purposed, sir, I pray you?

Cap. Against some part of Poland.

Ham. Who commands them, sir?

Cap. The nephew to old Norway, Fortinbras. [Poland, sir,

Ham. Goes it against the main of
Or for some frontier? [addition,

Cap. Truly to speak, sir, and with no
We go to gain a little patch of ground
That hath in it no profit but the name.
To pay five ducats, five, I would not farm it;
Nor will it yield to Norway or the Pole
A ranker rate, should it be sold in fee.

Ham. Why, then the Polack never will defend it.

Cap. Yes, 'tis already garrison'd.

Ham. Two thousand souls and twenty thousand ducats
Will not debate the question of this straw: [and peace,
This is the imposthume of much wealth
That inward breaks, and shows no cause without [you, sir.
Why the man dies. I humbly thank

Cap. God be wi' you, sir. [Exit.

Ros. Will 't please you go, my lord?

Ham. I'll be with you straight. Go a little before.

[Exeunt all but HAMLET.

How all occasions do inform against me,

And spur my dull revenge! What is a man,
If his chief good and market of his time
Be but to sleep and feed? a beast, no more.
Sure, He that made us with such large discourse,
Looking before and after, gave us not
That capability and god-like reason
To fust in us unused. Now, whether it be Bestial oblivion, or some craven scruple
Of thinking too precisely on the event,—
A thought which, quarter'd, hath but one part wisdom
And ever three parts coward,—I do not know
Why yet I live to say 'This thing 's to do';
Sith I have cause and will and strength and means
To do 't. Examples gross as earth exhort me:
Witness this army of such mass and charge
Led by a delicate and tender prince;
Whose spirit with divine ambition puff'd
Makes mouths at the invisible event,
Exposing what is mortal and unsure
To all that fortune, death and danger dare,
Even for an egg-shell. Rightly to be great
Is not to stir without great argument,
But greatly to find quarrel in a straw
When honour 's at the stake. How stand I then,
That have a father kill'd, a mother stain'd,
Excitements of my reason and my blood,
And let all sleep, while, to my shame, I see
The imminent death of twenty thousand men,
That, for a fantasy and trick of fame,
Go to their graves like beds, fight for a plot
Whereon the numbers cannot try the cause,
Which is not tomb enough and continent
To hide the slain? O, from this time forth,
My thoughts be bloody, or be nothing worth! Exit.

SCENE V.—Elsinore. A Room in the Castle.

Enter QUEEN, HORATIO, and a Gentleman.

Queen. I will not speak with her.

Gent. She is importunate, indeed distract:
Her mood will needs be pitied.

Queen. What would she have?

Gent. She speaks much of her father; says she hears
There 's tricks i' the world; and hems, and beats her heart;
Spurns enviously at straws; speaks things in doubt,
That carry but half sense: her speech is nothing,
Yet the unshaped use of it doth move
The hearers to collection; they aim at it,
And botch the words up fit to their own thoughts;
Which, as her winks and nods and gestures yield them,
Indeed would make one think there might be thought,
Though nothing sure, yet much unhappily.

Hor. 'Twere good she were spoken with; for she may strew
Dangerous conjectures in ill-breeding minds.

Queen. Let her come in.

Exit Gentleman.

Aside To my sick soul, as sin's true nature is,
Each toy seems prologue to some great amiss:
So full of artless jealousy is guilt,
It spills itself in fearing to be spilt.

Re-enter Gentleman, with OPHELIA.

Oph. Where is the beauteous majesty of Denmark?

Queen. How now, Ophelia!

Oph. Sings.

'How should I your true love know
From another one?
By his cockle hat and staff,
And his sandal shoon.'

Queen. Alas, sweet lady, what imports this song?

Oph. Say you? nay, pray you, mark. Sings.

'He is dead and gone, lady,
He is dead and gone;
At his head a grass-green turf,
At his heels a stone.'

Queen. Nay, but, Ophelia,—

Oph. Pray you, mark. Sings.

'White his shroud as the mountain snow,'—

Enter KING.

Queen. Alas, look here, my lord.

Oph. Sings.

'Larded with sweet flowers;
Which bewept to the grave did go
With true-love showers.'

King. How do you, pretty lady?

Oph. Well, God 'ild you! They say the owl was a baker's daughter. Lord, we know what we are, but know not what we may be. God be at your table!

King. Conceit upon her father.

Oph. Pray you, let 's have no words of this; but when they ask you what it means, say you this: [Sings.

'To-morrow is Saint Valentine's day,
All in the morning betime,
And I a maid at your window,
To be your Valentine.
Then up he rose, and donn'd his clothes,
And dupp'd the chamber-door;
Let in the maid, that out a maid
Never departed more.'

King. Pretty Ophelia!

Oph. Indeed, la, without an oath, I'll make an end on't: [Sings.

'By Gis and by Saint Charity,
Alack, and fie for shame!
Young men will do't, if they come to't;
By cock, they are to blame.
Quoth she, before you tumbled me,
You promised me to wed.
So would I ha' done, by yonder sun,
An thou hadst not come to my bed.'

King. How long hath she been thus?

Oph. I hope all will be well. We must be patient: but I cannot choose but weep, to think they should lay him i' the cold ground. My brother shall know of it: and so I thank you for your good counsel. Come, my coach! Good night, ladies; good night, sweet ladies; good night, good night. [Exit.

King. Follow her close; give her good watch, I pray you. [Exit Gentleman.

O, this is the poison of deep grief; it springs [trude, Gertrude,
All from her father's death. O Ger-
When sorrows come, they come not single spies, [slain;
But in battalions. First, her father
Next, your son gone; and he most violent author [muddied,
Of his own just remove: the people
Thick and unwholesome in their thoughts and whispers,
For good Polonius' death; and we have done but greenly,
In hugger-mugger to inter him: poor Ophelia [ment;
Divided from herself and her fair judg-
Without the which we are pictures, or mere beasts: [these,
Last, and as much containing as all
Her brother is in secret come from France, [in clouds,
Feeds on his wonder, keeps himself
And wants not buzzers to infect his ear
With pestilent speeches of his father's death;
Wherein necessity, of matter beggar'd,
Will nothing stick our person to arraign
In ear and ear. O my dear Gertrude, this, [places
Like to a murdering-piece, in many Gives me superfluous death.

[A noise within.

Queen. Alack! what noise is this?

King. Where are my Switzers? Let them guard the door.

Enter another Gentleman.

What is the matter?

Gent. Save yourself, my lord:
The ocean, overpeering of his list,
Eats not the flats with more impetuous haste
Than young Laertes, in a riotous head,
O'erbears your officers. The rabble call him lord; [begin,
And, as the world were now but to Antiquity forgot, custom not known,
The ratifiers and props of every word,
They cry 'Choose we: Laertes shall be king!' [to the clouds,
Caps, hands, and tongues, applaud it
'Laertes shall be king, Laertes king!'

Queen. How cheerfully on the false trail they cry! [dogs!
O, this is counter, you false Danish

King. The doors are broke.

[Noise within.

Enter LAERTES, armed; Danes following.

Laer. Where is this king?—Sirs, stand you all without.

Danes. No, let 's come in.

Laer. I pray you, give me leave.

Danes. We will, we will.

[They retire without the door.

Laer. I thank you: keep the door.—O thou vile king,
Give me my father!

Queen. Calmly, good Laertes.

Laer. That drop of blood that's calm proclaims me bastard;
Cries cuckold to my father; brands the harlot [smirched brow
Even here, between the chaste un-
Of my true mother.

King. What is the cause, Laertes,
That thy rebellion looks so giant-like?
Let him go, Gertrude; do not fear our person: [king,
There's such divinity doth hedge a
That treason can but peep to what it would, [Laertes,
Acts little of his will.—Tell me,
Why thou art thus incensed:—let him go, Gertrude;—
Speak, man.

Laer. Where is my father?

King. Dead.

Queen. But not by him.

King. Let him demand his fill.

Laer. How came he dead? I'll not be juggled with:
To hell, allegiance! vows, to the blackest devil! [est pit!
Conscience and grace, to the profound-
I dare damnation. To this point I stand, [gence,
That both the worlds I give to negli-
Let come what comes; only I'll be revenged
Most throughly for my father.

King. Who shall stay you?

Laer. My will, not all the world:
And for my means, I'll husband them so well,
They shall go far with little.

King. Good Laertes,
If you desire to know the certainty
Of your dear father's death, is 't writ in your revenge,
That, swoopstake, you will draw both friend and foe,
Winner and loser?

Laer. None but his enemies.

King. Will you know them then?

Laer. To his good friends thus wide I'll ope my arms; [pelican,
And, like the kind life-rendering
Repast them with my blood.

King. Why, now you speak
Like a good child and a true gentlemar. [death,
That I am guiltless of your father's
And am most sensibly in grief for it,
It shall as level to your judgment pierce
As day does to your eye.

Danes. [Within.] Let her come in.

Laer. How now! what noise is that?

Re-enter OPHELIA, fantastically dressed with straws and flowers.

O heat, dry up my brains! tears seven times salt, [eye!
Burn out the sense and virtue of mine
By heaven, thy madness shall be paid by weight, [of May!
Till our scale turn the beam. O rose
Dear maid, kind sister, sweet Ophelia!
O heavens! is 't possible a young maid's wits [life?
Should be as mortal as an old man's Nature is fine in love; and where 'tis fine, [self
It sends some precious instance of it-
After the thing it loves.

Oph. [Sings.]

'They bore him barefaced on the bier;
Hey non nonny, nonny, hey nonny:
And in his grave rain'd many a tear,'—

Fare you well, my dove!

Laer. Hadst thou thy wits, and didst persuade revenge,
It could not move thus.

Oph. [Sings.]

'You must sing a-down a-down,
An you call him a-down-a.'

O, how the wheel becomes it! It is the false steward, that stole his master's daughter.

Laer. This nothing's more than matter.

Oph. [To LAERTES.] There's rosemary, that 's for remembrance; pray you, love, remember: and there is pansies, that 's for thoughts.

Laer. A document in madness; thoughts and remembrance fitted.

Oph. [To the KING.] There 's fennel for you, and columbines: [To the QUEEN] there's rue for you;—and here 's some for me: we may call it herb of grace o' Sundays:—O, you must wear your rue with a difference. There 's a daisy. [To HORATIO] I would give you some violets, but they withered all when my father died: they say 'a made a good end,— [Sings.

'For bonny sweet Robin is all my joy.'

Laer. Thought and affliction, passion, hell itself,
She turns to favour and to prettiness.

Oph. [Sings.]

'And will he not come again?
And will he not come again?
No, no, he is dead:
Go to thy death-bed:
He never will come again.

'His beard was as white as snow,
All flaxen was his poll:
He is gone, he is gone,
And we cast away moan:
God ha' mercy on his soul!'

And of all Christian souls, I pray God. God be wi' you! [Exit.

Laer. Do you see this, O God?

King. Laertes, I must commune with your grief, [apart,
Or you deny me right. Go but Make choice of whom your wisest friends you will,
And they shall hear and judge 'twixt you and me:
If by direct or by collateral hand
They find us touch'd, we will our kingdom give, [ours,
Our crown, our life, and all that we call
To you in satisfaction; but if not,
Be you content to lend your patience to us, [soul
And we shall jointly labour with your
To give it due content.

Laer. Let this be so;
His means of death his obscure funeral—
No trophy, sword, nor hatchment o'er his bones,
No noble rite nor formal ostentation—
Cry to be heard, as 'twere from heaven to earth,
That I must call 't in question.

King. So you shall;
And where the offence is let the great axe fall.
I pray you, go with me. [Exeunt.

SCENE VI.—The Same. Another Room in the Castle.

Enter HORATIO, and a Servant.

Hor. What are they that would speak with me?

Serv. Sailors, sir: they say they have letters for you.

Hor. Let them come in. [Exit Servant.

I do not know from what part of the world [Hamlet.
I should be greeted, if not from Lord

Enter Sailors.

First Sail. God bless you, sir.

Hor. Let him bless thee too.

First Sail. He shall, sir, an 't please him. There 's a letter for you, sir; it comes from the ambassador that was bound for England; if your name be Horatio, as I am let to know it is.

Hor. [Reads]

'Horatio, when thou shalt have overlooked this, give these fellows some means to the king: they have letters for him. Ere we were two days old at sea, a pirate of very warlike appointment gave us chase. Finding ourselves too slow of sail, we put on a compelled valour; and in the grapple. I boarded them: on the instant they got clear of our ship; so I alone became their prisoner. They have dealt with me like thieves of mercy; but they knew what they did; I am to do a good turn for them. Let the king have the letters I have sent; and repair thou to me with as much haste as thou wouldest fly death. I have words to speak in thine ear will make thee dumb; yet are they much too light for the bore of the matter. These good fellows will bring thee where I am. Rosencrantz and Guildenstern hold their course for England: of them I have much to tell thee. Farewell.

'He that thou knowest thine,
'HAMLET.'

Come, I will give you way for these your letters; [direct me
And do 't the speedier, that you may
To him from whom you brought them. [Exeunt.

SCENE VII.—The Same. Another Room in the Castle.

Enter KING and LAERTES.

King. Now must your conscience my acquittance seal, [friend,
And you must put me in your heart for Sith you have heard, and with a knowing ear, [slain
That he which hath your noble father
Pursued my life.

Laer. It well appears: but tell me
Why you proceeded not against these feats,
So crimeful and so capital in nature,
As by your safety, wisdom, all things else,
You mainly were stirr'd up.

King. O, for two special reasons;
Which may to you, perhaps, seem much unin-w'd,

But yet to me they're strong. The queen his mother [self—
Lives almost by his looks; and for my-
My virtue or my plague, be it either which— [soul,
She 's so conjunctive to my life and
That, as the star moves not but in his sphere, [motive,
I could not but by her. The other
Why to a public count I might not go,
Is the great love the general gender bear him; [affection;
Who, dipping all his faults in their
Would, like the spring that turneth wood to stone, [my arows,
Convert his gyves to graces; so that
Too slightly timber'd for so loud a wind,
Would have reverted to my bow again,
And not where I had aim'd them.

Laer. And so have I a noble father lost;
A sister driven into desperate terms,
Whose worth, if praises may go back again, [age
Stood challenger on mount of all the
For her perfections: but my revenge will come.

King. Break not your sleeps for that: you must not think
That we are made of stuff so flat and dull [with danger
That we can let our beard be shook
And think it pastime. You shortly shall hear more: [self;
I loved your father, and we love our-
And that, I hope, will teach you to imagine—

Enter a Messenger.

How now! what news? [Hamlet:

Mess. Letters, my lord, from
This to your majesty; this to the queen. [them?

King. From Hamlet! who brought

Mess. Sailors, my lord, they say; I saw them not:
They were given me by Claudio; he received them
Of him that brought them.

King. Laertes, you shall hear them:—
Leave us. [Exit Messenger.

[Reads.] 'High and mighty, You shall know I am set naked on your kingdom. To-morrow shall I beg leave to see your kingly eyes: when I shall, first asking your pardon thereunto, recount the occasion of my sudden and more strange return.

'HAMLET.'

What should this mean? Are all the rest come back? [thing?
Or is it some abuse, and no such

Laer. Know you the hand?

King. 'Tis Hamlet's character. 'Naked!'
And in a postscript here, he says 'alone.'
Can you advise me?

Laer. I'm lost in it, my lord. But let him come;
It warms the very sickness in my heart,
That I shall live and tell him to his teeth,
'Thus diddest thou.'

King. If it be so, Laertes,—
As how should it be so? how otherwise?—
Will you be ruled by me?

Laer. Ay, my lord;
So you will not o'errule me to a peace.

King. To thine own peace. If he be now return'd, [means
As checking at his voyage, and that he
No more to undertake it, I will work him
To an exploit, now ripe in my device,
Under the which he shall not choose but fall: [shall breathe;
And for his death no wind of blame
But even his mother shall uncharge the practice
And call it accident.

Laer. My lord, I will be ruled;
The rather, if you could devise it so
That I might be the organ.

King. It falls right.
You have been talk'd of since your travel much, [quality
And that in Hamlet's hearing, for a
Wherein, they say, you shine: your sum of parts [from him
Did not together pluck such envy
As did that one, and that, in my regard,
Of the unworthiest siege.

Laer. What part is that, my lord?

King. A very riband in the cap of youth, [comes Yet needful too; for youth no less be-
The light and careless livery that it wears [weeds,
Than settled age his sables and his
Importing health and graveness. Two months since, [mandy:—
Here was a gentleman of Nor-

I have seen myself, and served against, the French, [this gallant
And they can well on horseback : but
Had witchcraft in 't ; he grew unto his seat ; [his horse,
And to such wondrous doing brought
As he had been incorpsed and demi-natured [my thought,
With the brave beast : so far he topp'd
That I, in forgery of shapes and tricks,
Come short of what he did.
Laer. A Norman was 't ?
King. A Norman.
Laer. Upon my life, Lamond.
King. The very same.
Laer. I know him well : he is the brooch indeed
And gem of all the nation.
King. He made confession of you,
And gave you such a masterly report
For art and exercise in your defence,
And for your rapier most especially,
That he cried out, 'twould be a sight indeed, [of their nation,
If one could match you : the scrimers
He swore, had neither motion, guard, nor eye, [of his
If you opposed them. Sir, this report
Did Hamlet so envenom with his envy
That he could nothing do but wish and beg [you.
Your sudden coming o'er, to play with
Now, out of this,—
Laer. What out of this, my lord ?
King. Laertes, was your father dear to you ? [row,
Or are you like the painting of a sor-
A face without a heart ?
Laer. Why ask you this ?
King. Not that I think you did not love your father, [time ;
But that I know love is begun by
And that I see, in passages of proof,
Time qualifies the spark and fire of it.
There lives within the very flame of love
A kind of wick or snuff that will abate it ;
And nothing is at a like goodness still ;
For goodness, growing to a plurisy,
Dies in his own too-much : that we would do,
We should do when we would ; for this 'would' changes [many
And hath abatements and delays as
As there are tongues, are hands, are accidents ; [thrift sigh,
And then this 'should' is like a spend-
That hurts by easing. But, to the quick o' the ulcer :—
Hamlet comes back : what would you undertake, [deed
To show yourself your father's son in
More than in words ? [church.
Laer. To cut his throat i' the King. No place, indeed, should murder sanctuarize ;
Revenge should have no bounds. But, good Laertes, [chamber.
Will you do this, keep close within your

We'll put on those shall praise your
And set a double varnish on the fame
The Frenchman gave you ; bring you, in fine, together [remiss,
And wager on your heads : he, being
Most generous and free from all contriving, [with ease,
Will not peruse the foils ; so that
Or with a little shuffling, you may choose [tice
A sword unbated, and in a pass of prac-
Requite him for your father.
Laer. I will do 't ;
And, for that purpose, I'll anoint my sword.
I bought an unction of a mountebank,
So mortal that, but dip a knife in it,
Where it draws blood no cataplasm so rare, [virtue
Collected from all simples that have

That is but scratch'd withal : I'll touch
With this contagion ; that, if I gall him slightly,
It may be death.
King. Let's further think of this ;
Weigh what convenience both of time and means [fail,
May fit us to our shape : if this should
And that our drift look through our bad performance,
'Twere better not assay'd ; therefore this project [might hold,
Should have a back, or second, that
If this should blast in proof. Soft ! let me see : [cunnings :
We'll make a solemn wager on your
I ha 't : [dry—
When in your motion you are hot and
As make your bouts more violent to that end—

And that he calls for drink, I'll have preferr'd him [sipping,
A chalice for the nonce; whereon but If he by chance escape your venom'd stuck, [stay, what noise?
Our purpose may hold there. But Enter QUEEN.

How now, sweet queen!

Queen. One woe doth tread upon another's heel,
So fast they follow:—your sister's drown'd, Laertes.

Laer. Drown'd! O, where?

Queen. There is a willow grows aslant a brook,
That shows his hoar leaves in the glassy stream; [come
There with fantastic garlands did she
Of crow-flowers, nettles, daisies, and long purples, [name,
That liberal shepherds give a grosser
But our cold maids do dead men's fingers call them:
There, on the pendent boughs her coronet weeds [broke;
Clambering to hang, an envious sliver
When down her weedy trophies and herself [spread wide;
Fell in the weeping brook. Her clothes
And, mermaid-like, awhile they bore her up: [tunes,
Which time she chanted snatches of old
As one incapable of her own distress,
Or like a creature native and indued
Unto that element: but long it could not be [their drink,
Till that her garments, heavy with Pull'd the poor wretch from her melodious lay
To muddy death.

Laer. Alas, then, she is drown'd?

Queen. Drown'd, drown'd.

Laer. Too much of water hast thou, poor Ophelia, [yet
And therefore I forbid my tears: but It is our trick; Nature her custom holds, [are gone,
Let shame say what it will: when these
The woman will be out. Adieu, my lord: [blaze,
I have a speech of fire, that fain would
But that this folly douts it. [Exit.

King. Let 's follow, Gertrude:
How much I had to do to calm his rage!
Now fear I this will give it start again;
Therefore let 's follow. [Exeunt.

ACT V.

SCENE I.—Elsinore. A Churchyard.

Enter two Clowns, with spades, etc.

First Clo. Is she to be buried in Christian burial that wilfully seeks her own salvation?

Sec. Clo. I tell thee she is; and therefore make her grave straight: the crowner hath sat on her, and finds it Christian burial.

First Clo. How can that be, unless she drowned herself in her own defence?

Sec. Clo. Why, 'tis found so.

First Clo. It must be 'se offendendo;' it cannot be else. For here lies the point: if I drown myself wittingly, it argues an act: and an act hath three branches; it is, to act, to do, and to perform: argal, she drowned herself wittingly. [man delver,—

Sec. Clo. Nay, but hear you, good-

First Clo. Give me leave. Here lies the water; good: here stands the man; good: if the man go to this water and drown himself, it is, will he, nill he, he goes; mark you that: but if the water come to him and drown him, he drowns not himself: argal, he that is not guilty of his own death shortens not his own life.

Sec. Clo. But is this law?

First Clo. Ay, marry, is 't; crowner's quest law.

Sec. Clo. Will you ha' the truth on 't? If this had not been a gentlewoman, she should have been buried out o' Christian burial.

First Clo. Why, there thou sayest: and the more pity that great folk should have countenance in this world to drown or hang themselves, more than their even Christian. Come, my spade. There is no ancient gentlemen but gardeners, ditchers, and grave-makers: they hold up Adam's profession.

Sec. Clo. Was he a gentleman?

First Clo. 'A was the first that ever bore arms.

Sec. Clo. Why, he had none.

First Clo. What, art a heathen? How dost thou understand the Scripture? The Scripture says 'Adam digged:' could he dig without arms? I'll put another question to thee: if thou answerest me not to the purpose, confess thyself—

Sec. Clo. Go to.

First Clo. What is he that builds stronger than either the mason, the shipwright, or the carpenter?

Sec. Clo. The gallows-maker; for that frame outlives a thousand tenants.

First Clo. I like thy wit well, in good faith: the gallows does well; but how does it well? it does well to those that do ill: now thou dost ill to say the gallows is built stronger than the church: argal, the gallows may do well to thee. To 't again; come.

Sec. Clo. 'Who builds stronger than a mason, a shipwright, or a carpenter?'

First Clo. Ay, tell me that, and unyoke.

Sec. Clo. Marry, now I can tell.

First Clo. To 't.

Sec. Clo. Mass, I cannot tell.

Enter HAMLET and HORATIO, at a distance.

First Clo. Cudgel thy brains no more about it, for your dull ass will not mend his pace with beating; and when you are asked this question next, say 'a grave-maker:' the houses that he makes last till doomsday. Go, get thee to Yaughan, and fetch me a stoup of liquor. [Exit Sec. Clown.

First Clown digs and sings.

'In youth, when I did love, did love,
Methought it was very sweet,
To contract, O, the time, for, ah, my behove
O, methought, there was nothing meet.'

Ham. Has this fellow no feeling of his business, that he sings at grave-making?

Hor. Custom hath made it in him a property of easiness.

Ham. 'Tis e'en so: the hand of little employment hath the daintier sense.

First Clo. [Sings.]

'But age, with his stealing steps,
Hath claw'd me in his clutch,
And hath shipped me intil the land,
As if I had never been such.'

[Throws up a skull.

Ham. That skull had a tongue in it, and could sing once: how the knave jowls it to the ground, as if it were Cain's jaw-bone, that did the first murder! This might be the pate of a politician, which this ass now o'er-reaches; one that would circumvent God, might it not?

Hor. It might, my lord.

Ham. Or of a courtier, which could say 'Good-morrow, sweet lord! How dost thou, good lord?' This might be my Lord Such-a-one, that praised my Lord Such-a-one's horse, when he meant to beg it; might it not?

Hor. Ay, my lord.

Ham. Why, e'en so: and now my Lady Worm's; chapless, and knocked about the mazzard with a sexton's spade: here 's fine revolution, an we had the trick to see 't. Did these bones cost no more the breeding, but to play at loggats with 'em? mine ache to think on 't.

First Clo. [Sings.]

'A pick-axe, and a spade, a spade,
For and a shrouding sheet:
O, a pit of clay for to be made
For such a guest is meet.'

[Throws up another skull.

Ham. There 's another: why may not that be the skull of a lawyer? Where be his quiddities now, his quillets, his cases, his tenures, and his tricks? why does he suffer this rude knave now to knock him about the sconce with a dirty shovel, and will not tell him of his action of battery? Hum! This fellow might be in 's time a great buyer of land, with his statutes, his recognizances, his fines, his double vouchers, his recoveries: is this the fine of his fines, and the recovery of his recoveries, to have his fine pate full of fine dirt? will his vouchers vouch him no more of his purchases, and double ones too, than the length and breadth of a pair of indentures? The very conveyances of his lands will hardly lie in this box; and must the inheritor himself have no more, ha?

Hor. Not a jot more, my lord.

Ham. Is not parchment made of sheep-skins? [Skins too.

Hor. Ay, my lord, and of calf-

Ham. They are sheep and calves which seek out assurance in that. I will speak to this fellow. Whose grave 's this, sirrah?

First Clo. Mine, sir. [Sings.

'O, a pit of clay for to be made
For such a guest is meet.'

Ham. I think it be thine, indeed; for thou liest in 't.

First Clo. You lie out on 't, sir, and therefore 'tis not yours: for my part, I do not lie in 't, and yet it is mine.

Ham. Thou dost lie in 't, to be in 't and say it is thine: 'tis for the dead, not for the quick; therefore thou liest.

First Clo. 'Tis a quick lie, sir; 'twill away again, from me to you. [for?

Ham. What man dost thou dig it

First Clo. For no man, sir.

Ham. What woman, then?

First Clo. For none, neither.

Ham. Who is to be buried in 't?

First Clo. One that was a woman, sir; but, rest her soul, she 's dead.

Ham. How absolute the knave is! we must speak by the card, or equivocation will undo us. By the Lord, Horatio, these three years I have taken note of it; the age is grown so picked that the toe of the peasant comes so near the heel of the courtier, he galls his kibe.—How long hast thou been a grave-maker?

First Clo. Of all the days i' the year, I came to 't that day that our last King Hamlet o'ercame Fortinbras.

Ham. How long 's that since?

First Clo. Cannot you tell that? every fool can tell that: it was that very day that young Hamlet was born; he that is mad, and sent into England?

Ham. Ay, marry, why was he sent into England?

First Clo. Why, because 'a was mad: 'a shall recover his wits there; or, if 'a do not, 'tis no great matter there.

Ham. Why?

First Clo. 'Twill not be seen in him there; there the men are as mad as he.

Ham. How came he mad?

First Clo. Very strangely, they say.

Ham. How 'strangely'? [his wits.

First Clo. Faith, e'en with losing

Ham. Upon what ground?

First Clo. Why, here in Denmark: I have been sexton here, man and boy, thirty years. [earth ere he rot?

Ham. How long will a man lie i' the

First Clo. I' faith, if 'a be not rotten before 'a die—as we have many pocky corses now-a-days, that will scarce hold the laying in—'a will last you some eight year or nine year: a tanner will last you nine year.

Ham. Why he more than another?

First Clo. Why, sir, his hide is so tanned with his trade, that 'a will keep out water a great while; and your water is a sore decayer of your whoreson dead body. Here 's a skull now: this skull hath lain i' the earth three-and-twenty years.

Ham. Whose was it?

First Clo. A whoreson mad fellow's it was: whose do you think it was?

Ham. Nay, I know not.

First Clo. A pestilence on him for a mad rogue! 'a poured a flagon of Rhenish on my head once. This same skull, sir, was Yorick's skull, the king's jester.

Ham. This?

First Clo. E'en that.

Ham. Let me see. [Takes the skull.] Alas, poor Yorick! I knew him, Horatio: a fellow of infinite jest, of most excellent fancy: he hath borne me on his back a thousand times; and now, how abhorred in my imagination it is! my gorge rises at it. Here hung those lips that I have kissed I know not how oft. Where be your gibes now? your gambols? your songs? your flashes of merriment, that were wont to set the table on a roar? Not one now, to mock your own grinning? quite chap-fallen? Now get you to my lady's chamber, and tell her, let her paint an inch thick, to this favour she must come; make her laugh at that. Prithee, Horatio, tell me one thing.

Hor. What 's that, my lord?

Ham. Dost thou think Alexander looked o' this fashion i' the earth?

Hor. E'en so.

Ham. And smelt so? pah!

[Throws down the skull.

Hor. E'en so, my lord.

Ham. To what base uses we may return, Horatio! Why may not imagination trace the noble dust of Alexander, till he find it stopping a bung-hole?

Hor. 'Twere to consider too curiously, to consider so.

Ham. No, faith, not a jot; but to follow him thither with modesty enough, and likelihood to lead it: as thus; Alexander died, Alexander was buried, Alexander returneth into dust; the dust is earth; of earth we make loam; and why of that loam, whereto he was converted, might they not stop a beer-barrel?

Imperious Cæsar, dead and turn'd to clay,
Might stop a hole to keep the wind away:
O, that that earth, which kept the world in awe,
Should patch a wall to expel the winter's flaw!

But soft! but soft! aside: here comes the king,
The queen, the courtiers.—

Enter Priests, etc., in procession; the Corpse of OPHELIA, LAERTES and Mourners following; KING, QUEEN, their Trains, etc.

Who is this they follow?
And with such maimed rites? This doth betoken
The corse they follow did with desperate hand
Fordo its own life: 'twas of some estate.
Couch we awhile, and mark.

[Retiring with HORATIO.

Laer. What ceremony else?

Ham. That is Laertes,
A very noble youth: mark.

Laer. What ceremony else?

First Priest. Her obsequies have been as far enlarged
As we have warranty: her death was doubtful;
And, but that great command o'ersways the order,
She should in ground unsanctified have lodged
Till the last trumpet; for charitable prayers,
Shards, flints and pebbles should be thrown on her;
Yet here she is allow'd her virgin crants,
Her maiden strewments, and the bringing home
Of bell and burial.

Laer. Must there no more be done?

First Priest. No more be done:
We should profane the service of the dead,
To sing a requiem and such rest to her
As to peace-parted souls.

Laer. Lay her i' the earth:
And from her fair and unpolluted flesh
May violets spring! I tell thee, churlish priest,
A ministering angel shall my sister be,
When thou liest howling.

Ham. What, the fair Ophelia!

Queen. [Scattering flowers.] Sweets to the sweet: farewell!
I hoped thou shouldst have been my Hamlet's wife;
I thought thy bride-bed to have deck'd, sweet maid,
And not have strew'd thy grave.

Laer. O, treble woe
Fall ten times treble on that cursed head
Whose wicked deed thy most ingenious sense
Deprived thee of! Hold off the earth awhile,
Till I have caught her once more in mine arms:

[Leaps into the Grave.

Now pile your dust upon the quick and dead,
Till of this flat a mountain you have made,
To o'ertop old Pelion or the skyish head
Of blue Olympus.

Ham. [Advancing.] What is he whose grief
Bears such an emphasis? whose phrase of sorrow
Conjures the wandering stars, and makes them stand
Like wonder-wounded hearers? This is I,
Hamlet the Dane.

[Leaps into the Grave.

Laer. The devil take thy soul!

[Grappling with him.

Ham. Thou pray'st not well.
I prithee, take thy fingers from my throat;
For, though I am not splenitive and rash,
Yet have I in me something dangerous,
Which let thy wisdom fear. Hold off thy hand.

King. Pluck them asunder.

Queen. Hamlet, Hamlet!

All. Gentlemen,—

Hor. Good my lord, be quiet.

[The Attendants part them, and they come out of the Grave.

Ham. Why, I will fight with him upon this theme
Until my eyelids will no longer wag.

Queen. O my son, what theme?

Ham. I loved Ophelia: forty thousand brothers
Could not, with all their quantity of love,
Make up my sum.—What wilt thou do for her?

King. O, he is mad, Laertes.

Queen. For love of God, forbear him.

Ham. 'Swounds, show me what thou 'lt do:

Woo't weep? woo't fight? woo't fast? woo't tear thyself?
Woo't drink up eisel? eat a crocodile?
I'll do 't. Dost thou come here to whine? [grave?
To outface me with leaping in her
Be buried quick with her, and so will I:
And, if thou prate of mountains, let them throw
Millions of acres on us, till our ground,
Singeing his pate against the burning zone, [thou'lt mouth,
Make Ossa like a wart! Nay, an
I'll rant as well as thou.
Queen. This is mere madness:
And thus awhile the fit will work on him;
Anon, as patient as the female dove,
When that her golden couplets are disclosed,
His silence will sit drooping.
Ham. Hear you, sir;
What is the reason that you use me
thus?
I loved you ever: but it is no matter;
Let Hercules himself do what he may,
The cat will mew, and dog will have his
day. [Exit.
King. I pray you, good Horatio, wait upon him.
[Exit HORATIO.
[To LAERTES] Strengthen your patience in our last night's speech; [push.
We'll put the matter to the present
Good Gertrude, set some watch over your son. [ment:
This grave shall have a living monu-
An hour of quiet shortly shall we see;
Till then, in patience our proceeding be.
[Exeunt.

SCENE II.—The Same. A Hall in the Castle.

Enter HAMLET and HORATIO.

Ham. So much for this, sir: now shall you see the other;
You do remember all the circumstance?
Hor. Remember it, my lord!
Ham. Sir, in my heart there was a kind of fighting,
That would not let me sleep: methought I lay
Worse than the mutines in the bilboes.
Rashly,— [know,
And praised be rashness for it: let us
Our indiscretion sometimes serves us well [should teach us
When our deep plots do pall: and that
There's a divinity that shapes our ends,
Rough-hew them how we will,—
Hor. That is most certain.
Ham. Up from my cabin, [dark
My sea-gown scarf'd about me, in the Groped I to find out them; had my desire; [drew
Finger'd their packet, and in fine with-
To mine own room again; making so bold,
My fears forgetting manners, to unseal
Their grand commission; where I found, Horatio,—
O royal knavery!—an exact command,
Larded with many several sorts of reasons [England's too,
Importing Denmark's health and
With, ho! such bugs and goblins in my life,
That, on the supervise, no leisure bated,
No, not to stay the grinding of the axe,
My head should be struck off.
Hor. Is 't possible?
Ham. Here 's the commission: read it at more leisure. [ceed?
But wilt thou hear me how I did pro-
Hor. I beseech you.
Ham. Being thus be-netted round with villanies,— [brains
Ere I could make a prologue to my
They had begun the play,—I sat me down; [fair:
Devised a new commission; wrote it
I once did hold it, as our statists do,
A baseness to write fair, and labour'd much [now
How to forget that learning; but, sir,
It did me yeoman's service: wilt thou know
The effect of what I wrote?
Hor. Ay, good my lord.
Ham. An earnest conjuration from the king,
As England was his faithful tributary,
As love between them like the palm might flourish, [land wear
As peace should still her wheaten gar-
And stand a comma 'tween their ami-ties, [charge,
And many such like 'As'es of great
That, on the view and knowing of these contents, [less,
Without debatement further, more or

He should the bearers put to sudden death,
Not shriving-time allow'd.
Hor. How was this seal'd?
Ham. Why, even in that was heaven ordinant.
I had my father's signet in my purse,
Which was the model of that Danish seal; [other;
Folded the writ up in form of the
Subscribed it; gave 't the impression; placed it safely,
The changeling never known. Now, the next day
Was our sea-fight; and what to this was sequent
Thou know'st already.
Hor. So Guildenstern and Rosencrantz go to 't.
Ham. Why, man, they did make love to this employment;
They are not near my conscience; their defeat
Does by their own insinuation grow:
'Tis dangerous when the baser nature comes [points
Between the pass and fell incensed
Of mighty opposites.
Hor. Why, what a king is this!
Ham. Does it not, thinks 't thee, stand me now upon—
He that hath kill'd my king, and whored my mother; [hopes;
Popp'd in between the election and my
Thrown out his angle for my proper life, [fect conscience,
And with such cozenage—is 't not per-
To quit him with this arm? and is 't not to be damn'd,
To let this canker of our nature come
In further evil?
Hor. It must be shortly known to him from England
What is the issue of the business there.
Ham. It will be short: the interim is mine; [say 'One.'
And a man's life 's no more than to
But I am very sorry, good Horatio,
That to Laertes I forgot myself;
For, by the image of my cause, I see
The portraiture of his: I'll court his favours: [put me
But, sure, the bravery of his grief did
Into a towering passion.
Hor. Peace! who comes here?

Enter OSRIC.

Osr. Your lordship is right welcome back to Denmark.
Ham. I humbly thank you, sir. [Aside to HORATIO] Dost know this water-fly? [good lord.
Hor. [Aside to HAMLET.] No, my
Ham. [Aside to HORATIO.] Thy state is the more gracious, for 'tis a vice to know him. He hath much land, and fertile: let a beast be lord of beasts, and his crib shall stand at the king's mess: 'tis a chough; but, as I say, spacious in the possession of dirt.
Osr. Sweet lord, if your lordship were at leisure, I should impart a thing to you from his majesty.
Ham. I will receive it, sir, with all diligence of spirit. Put your bonnet to his right use; 'tis for the head.
Osr. I thank your lordship, it is very hot.
Ham. No, believe me, 'tis very cold; the wind is northerly. [indeed.
Osr. It is indifferent cold, my lord,
Ham. But yet, methinks, it is very sultry and hot for my complexion.
Osr. Exceedingly, my lord; it is very sultry,—as 'twere,—I cannot tell how. But, my lord, his majesty bade me signify to you that he has laid a great wager on your head: sir, this is the matter,—
Ham. I beseech you, remember—
[HAMLET moves him to put on his hat.
Osr. Nay, good my lord; for mine ease, in good faith. Sir, here is newly come to court Laertes; believe me, an absolute gentleman, full of most excellent differences, of very soft society and great showing: indeed, to speak feelingly of him, he is the card or calendar of gentry, for you shall find in him the continent of what part a gentleman would see.
Ham. Sir, his definement suffers no perdition in you; though, I know, to divide him inventorially would dizzy the arithmetic of memory, and wit but yaw neither, in respect of his quick sail. But, in the verity of extolment, I take him to be a soul of great article; and his infusion of such dearth and rareness, as, to make true diction of him, his semblable is his mirror; and who else would trace him, his umbrage, nothing more. [fallibly of him.
Osr. Your lordship speaks most in-

Ham. The concernancy, sir? why do we wrap the gentleman in our more rawer breath?

Osr. Sir? [in another tongue?

Hor. Is 't not possible to understand You will do 't, sir, really.

Ham. What imports the nomination of this gentleman?

Osr. Of Laertes?

Hor. His purse is empty already; all 's golden words are spent.

Ham. Of him, sir.

Osr. I know you are not ignorant—

Ham. I would you did, sir; yet, in faith, if you did, it would not much approve me. Well, sir?

Osr. You are not ignorant of what excellence Laertes is—

Ham. I dare not confess that, lest I should compare with him in excellence; but, to know a man well, were to know himself.

Osr. I mean, sir, for his weapon; but in the imputation laid on him by them, in his meed he 's unfellowed.

Ham. What 's his weapon?

Osr. Rapier and dagger.

Ham. That 's two of his weapons: but, well.

Osr. The king, sir, hath wagered with him six Barbary horses: against the which he has imponed, as I take it, six French rapiers and poniards, with their assigns, as girdle, hangers, and so: three of the carriages, in faith, are very dear to fancy, very responsive to the hilts, most delicate carriages, and of very liberal conceit.

Ham. What call you the carriages?

Hor. I knew you must be edified by the margent ere you had done.

Osr. The carriages, sir, are the hangers.

Ham. The phrase would be more german to the matter, if we could carry cannon by our sides: I would it might be hangers till then. But, on: six Barbary horses against six French swords, their assigns, and three liberal-conceited carriages; that 's the French bet against the Danish. Why is this 'imponed,' as you call it?

Osr. The king, sir, hath laid, sir, that in a dozen passes between yourself and him, he shall not exceed you three hits: he hath laid on twelve for nine; and it would come to immediate trial, if your lordship would vouchsafe the answer.

Ham. How if I answer 'no'?

Osr. I mean, my lord, the opposition of your person in trial.

Ham. Sir, I will walk here in the hall: if it please his majesty, 'tis the breathing time of day with me; let the foils be brought, the gentleman willing, and the king hold his purpose, I will win for him an I can; if not, I will gain nothing but my shame and the odd hits.

Osr. Shall I re-deliver you e'en so?

Ham. To this effect, sir; after what flourish your nature will.

Osr. I commend my duty to your lordship.

Ham. Yours, yours. [Exit OSRIC.] He does well to commend it himself; there are no tongues else for 's turn.

Hor. This lapwing runs away with the shell on his head.

Ham. He did comply with his dug, before he sucked it. Thus has he—and many more of the same bevy that I know the drossy age dotes on—only got the tune of the time and outward habit of encounter; a kind of yesty collection, which carries them through and through the most fond and winnowed opinions; and do but blow them to their trial, the bubbles are out.

Enter a Lord.

Lord. My lord, his majesty commended him to you by young Osric, who brings back to him, that you attend him in the hall: he sends to know if your pleasure hold to play with Laertes, or that you will take longer time.

Ham. I am constant to my purposes; they follow the king's pleasure: if his fitness speaks, mine is ready; now or whensoever, provided I be so able as now. [are coming down.

Lord. The king and queen and all

Ham. In happy time.

Lord. The queen desires you to use some gentle entertainment to Laertes before you fall to play.

Ham. She well instructs me.

[Exit Lord.

Hor. You will lose this wager, my lord.

Ham. I do not think so: since he went into France, I have been in continual practice; I shall win at the odds. But thou wouldst not think how ill all 's here about my heart: but it is no matter.

Hor. Nay, good my lord,—

Ham. It is but foolery; but it is such a kind of gain-giving as would perhaps trouble a woman.

Hor. If your mind dislike any thing, obey it: I will forestall their repair hither, and say you are not fit.

Ham. Not a whit; we defy augury: there 's a special providence in the fall of a sparrow. If it be now, 'tis not to come; if it be not to come, it will be now; if it be not now, yet it will come: the readiness is all: since no man knows aught of what he leaves, what is 't to leave betimes? Let be.

Enter KING, QUEEN, LAERTES, Lords, OSRIC, and Attendants with Foils, etc.

King. Come, Hamlet, come, and take this hand from me.

[The KING puts LAERTES' hand into HAMLET'S.

Ham. Give me your pardon, sir: I've done you wrong;
But pardon 't, as you are a gentleman.
This presence knows,
And you must needs have heard, how I am punish'd [done,
With sore distraction. What I have
That might your nature, honour and exception [madness.
Roughly awake, I here proclaim was
Was 't Hamlet wrong'd Laertes? Never Hamlet:
If Hamlet from himself be ta'en away,
And when he 's not himself does wrong Laertes, [denies it.
Then Hamlet does it not, Hamlet
Who does it then? His madness. If 't be so,
Hamlet is of the faction that is wrong'd;
His madness is poor Hamlet's enemy.
Sir, in this audience, [evil
Let my disclaiming from a purposed
Free me so far in your most generous thoughts, [house,
That I have shot mine arrow o'er the
And hurt my brother.

Laer. I am satisfied in nature,
Whose motive, in this case, should stir me most [honour
To my revenge: but in my terms of I stand aloof; and will no reconcilement, [honour
Till by some elder masters of known
I have a voice and precedent of peace,
To keep my name ungored. But till that time, [love,
I do receive your offer'd love like
And will not wrong it.

Ham. I embrace it freely;
And will this brother's wager frankly play.—
Give us the foils. Come on.

Laer. Come, one for me.

Ham. I'll be your foil, Laertes: in mine ignorance [est night,
Your skill shall, like a star i' the dark-
Stick fiery off indeed.

Laer. You mock me, sir.

Ham. No, by this hand.

King. Give them the foils, young Osric. Cousin Hamlet,
You know the wager?

Ham. Very well, my lord;
Your grace hath laid the odds o' the weaker side. [you both:

King. I do not fear it; I have seen
But since he 's better'd, we have therefore odds. [another.

Laer. This is too heavy; let me see

Ham. This likes me well. These foils have all a length?

[They prepare to play.

Osr. Ay, my good lord.

King. Set me the stoups of wine upon that table.
If Hamlet give the first or second hit,
Or quit in answer of the third exchange,
Let all the battlements their ordnance fire; [better breath;
The king shall drink to Hamlet's
And in the cup an union shall he throw,
Richer than that which four successive kings [me the cups;
In Denmark's crown have worn. Give
And let the kettle to the trumpet speak,
The trumpet to the cannoneer without,
The cannons to the heavens, the heavens to earth,
'Now the king drinks to Hamlet.'—
Come, begin:
And you, the judges, bear a wary eye.

Ham. Come on, sir.

Laer. Come, my lord. [They play.

Ham. One.

Laer. No.

Ham. Judgment.

Osr. A hit, a very palpable hit.

Laer. Well,—again.
King. Stay; give me drink. Hamlet, this pearl is thine;
Here 's to thy health.
[Trumpets sound, and Cannon shot off within.
Give him the cup.
Ham. I'll play this bout first; set it by awhile. [what say you?
Come. [They play.] Another hit;
Laer. A touch, a touch, I do confess.
King. Our son shall win. [breath.
Queen. He 's fat, and scant of Here, Hamlet, take my napkin, rub thy brows: [Hamlet.
The queen carouses to thy fortune,
Ham. Good madam!
King. Gertrude, do not drink.
Queen. I will, my lord; I pray you, pardon me.
King. [Aside.] It is the poison'd cup; it is too late.
Ham. I dare not drink yet, madam; by and by.
Queen. Come, let me wipe thy face.
Laer. My lord, I'll hit him now.
King. I do not think it.
Laer. [Aside.] And yet it is almost against my conscience.
Ham. Come, for the third, Laertes: you but dally; [lence;
I pray you, pass with your best vio-
I am afeard you make a wanton of me.
Laer. Say you so? come on.
[They play.
Osr. Nothing, neither way.
Laer. Have at you now!
[LAERTES wounds HAMLET; then, in scuffling, they change rapiers, and HAMLET wounds LAERTES.
King. Part them; they are incensed.
Ham. Nay, come, again.
[The QUEEN falls.
Osr. Look to the queen there, ho!
Hor. They bleed on both sides. How is it, my lord?
Osr. How is 't, Laertes?
Laer. Why, as a woodcock to mine own springe, Osric;
I am justly kill'd with mine own treachery.
Ham. How does the queen? [bleed.
King. She swounds to see them
Queen. No, no, the drink, the drink, —O my dear Hamlet,—
The drink, the drink! I am poison'd!
[Dies.
Ham. O villany! Ho! let the door be lock'd;
Treachery! seek it out.
[LAERTES falls.
Laer. It is here, Hamlet: Hamlet, thou art slain; [good;
No medicine in the world can do thee
In thee there is not half an hour of life;
The treacherous instrument is in thy hand, [practice
Unbated and envenom'd: the foul
Hath turn'd itself on me; lo, here I lie,
Never to rise again: thy mother 's poison'd: [to blame.
I can no more: the king, the king 's
Ham. The point!—envenom'd too!
Then, venom, to thy work.
[Stabs the KING.
All. Treason! treason!
King. O, yet defend me, friends; I am but hurt.
Ham. Here, thou incestuous, murderous, damned Dane,
Drink off this potion: is thy union here?
Follow my mother. [KING dies.
Laer. He is justly served;
It is a poison temper'd by himself.
Exchange forgiveness with me, noble Hamlet: [upon thee,
Mine and my father's death come not
Nor thine on me! [Dies.
Ham. Heaven make thee free of it! I follow thee. [adieu!—
I am dead, Horatio. Wretched queen,
You that look pale and tremble at this chance, [act,
That are but mutes or audience to this
Had I but time—as this fell sergeant, Death, [you—
Is strict in his arrest—O, I could tell
But let it be:—Horatio, I am dead;
Thou livest; report me and my cause aright
To the unsatisfied.
Hor. Never believe it:
I am more an antique Roman than a Dane:
Here 's yet some liquor left.
Ham. As thou'rt a man,
Give me the cup: let go; by heaven, I'll have it. [name,
O good Horatio, what a wounded
Things standing thus unknown, shall live behind me! [heart,
If thou didst ever hold me in thy
Absent thee from felicity awhile,

And in this harsh world draw thy breath in pain,
To tell my story.
[March afar off, and shot within.
What warlike noise is this?
Osr. Young Fortinbras, with conquest come from Poland,
To the ambassadors of England gives
This warlike volley.
Ham. O, I die, Horatio;
The potent poison quite o'er-crows my spirit:
I cannot live to hear the news from England;
But I do prophesy the election lights
On Fortinbras: he has my dying voice;
So tell him, with the occurrents, more and less,
Which have solicited——the rest is silence.
[Dies.
Hor. Now cracks a noble heart. Good night, sweet prince;
And flights of angels sing thee to thy rest!
[March within.
Why does the drum come hither?

Enter FORTINBRAS, the English Ambassadors, and Others.

Fort. Where is this sight?
Hor. What is it you would see?
If aught of woe or wonder, cease your search.
Fort. This quarry cries on havoc. O proud Death,
What feast is toward in thine eternal cell,
That thou so many princes at a shot
So bloodily hast struck?
First Amb. The sight is dismal;
And our affairs from England come too late:
The ears are senseless that should give us hearing,
To tell him his commandment is fulfill'd,
That Rosencrantz and Guildenstern are dead:
Where should we have our thanks?
Hor. Not from his mouth,
Had it the ability of life to thank you:
He never gave commandment for their death.
But since, so jump upon this bloody question,
You from the Polack wars, and you from England,
Are here arrived, give order that these bodies
High on a stage be placed to the view;
And let me speak to the yet unknowing world
How these things came about: so shall you hear
Of carnal, bloody, and unnatural acts;
Of accidental judgments, casual slaughters;
Of deaths put on by cunning and forced cause;
And, in this upshot, purposes mistook
Fall'n on the inventors' heads: all this can I Truly deliver.
Fort. Let us haste to hear it,
And call the noblest to the audience.
For me, with sorrow I embrace my fortune:
I have some rights of memory in this kingdom,
Which now to claim my vantage doth invite me.
Hor. Of that I shall have also cause to speak,
And from his mouth whose voice will draw on more:
But let this same be presently performed,
Even while men's minds are wild; lest more mischance,
On plots and errors, happen.
Fort. Let four captains
Bear Hamlet, like a soldier, to the stage;
For he was likely, had he been put on,
To have proved most royally: and, for his passage,
The soldiers' music and the rites of war
Speak loudly for him.
Take up the bodies: such a sight as this
Becomes the field, but here shows much amiss.
Go, bid the soldiers shoot.

SCENE, Britain.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—A Room of State in KING LEAR'S Palace.

Enter KENT, GLOUCESTER, and EDMUND.

Kent. I thought the king had more affected the Duke of Albany than Cornwall.

Glou. It did always seem so to us: but now, in the division of the kingdom, it appears not which of the dukes he values most; for equalities are so weighed, that curiosity in neither can make choice of either's moiety.

Kent. Is not this your son, my lord?

Glou. His breeding, sir, hath been at my charge: I have so often blushed to acknowledge him, that now I am brazed to it.

Kent. I cannot conceive you.

Glou. Sir, this young fellow's mother could: whereupon she grew round-wombed; and had, indeed, sir, a son for her cradle ere she had a husband for her bed. Do you smell a fault?

Kent. I cannot wish the fault undone, the issue of it being so proper.

Glou. But I have, sir, a son by order of law, some year elder than this, who yet is no dearer in my account: though this knave came something saucily into the world before he was sent for, yet was his mother fair; there was good sport at his making, and the whoreson must be acknowledged. Do you know this noble gentleman, Edmund?

Edm. No, my lord.

Glou. My Lord of Kent: remember him hereafter as my honourable friend.

Edm. My services to your lordship.

Kent. I must love you, and sue to know you better.

Edm. Sir, I shall study deserving.

Glou. He hath been out nine years, and away he shall again. The king is coming.

Sennet. Enter LEAR, CORNWALL, ALBANY, GONERIL, REGAN, CORDELIA, and Attendants.

Lear. Attend the lords of France and Burgundy, Gloucester.

Glou. I shall, my liege.

[Exeunt GLOUCESTER and EDMUND.

Lear. Meantime we shall express our darker purpose.
Give me the map there. Know we have divided [fast intent
In three our kingdom: and 'tis our
To shake all cares and business from our age, [while we Conferring them on younger strengths,
Unburden'd crawl toward death.
Our son of Cornwall,
And you, our no less loving son of Albany, [publish
We have this hour a constant will to

Our daughters' several dowers, that future strife
May be prevented now. The princes, France and Burgundy,
Great rivals in our youngest daughter's love, [amorous sojourn,
Long in our court have made their
And here are to be answer'd. Tell me, my daughters,— [rule,
Since now we will divest us, both of Interest of territory, cares of state,—
Which of you shall we say doth love us most?
That we our largest bounty may extend
Where nature doth with merit challenge. Goneril,
Our eldest-born, speak first.

Gon. Sir, I love you more than words can wield the matter;
Dearer than eyesight, space, and liberty; [rare;
Beyond what can be valued, rich or
No less than life, with grace, health, beauty, honour; [found;
As much as child e'er loved or father
A love that makes breath poor and speech unable; [you.
Beyond all manner of so much I love

Cor. [Aside.] What shall Cordelia do? Love, and be silent.

Lear. Of all these bounds, even from this line to this,
With shadowy forests and with champains rich'd, [meads,
With plenteous rivers and wide-skirted
We make thee lady. To thine and Albany's issue
Be this perpetual. What says our second daughter,
Our dearest Regan, wife to Cornwall? Speak. [as my sister,

Reg. I am made of that self metal
And prize me at her worth. In my true heart
I find she names my very deed of love;
Only she comes too short: that I profess
Myself an enemy to all other joys
Which the most precious square of sense possesses;
And find I am alone felicitate
In your dear highness' love.

Cor. [Aside.] Then poor Cordelia!
And yet not so; since I am sure my love 's
More richer than my tongue. [ever

Lear. To thee and thine hereditary
Remain this ample third of our fair kingdom;
No less in space, validity, and pleasure,
Than that conferr'd on Goneril.—Now, our joy, [young love
Although the last, not least; to whose
The vines of France and milk of Burgundy [say to draw
Strive to be interess'd; what can you
A third more opulent than your sisters? Speak.

Cor. Nothing, my lord.

Lear. Nothing!

Cor. Nothing. [speak again.

Lear. Nothing will come of nothing:

Cor. Unhappy that I am, I cannot heave [majesty
My heart into my mouth: I love your
According to my bond; nor more nor less. [your speech a little,

Lear. How, how, Cordelia! mend
Lest it may mar your fortunes.

Cor. Good my lord,
You have begot me, bred me, loved me:
I [fit,
Return those duties back as are right
Obey you, love you, and most honour you. [say
Why have my sisters husbands, if they
They love you all? Haply, when I shall wed,
That lord whose hand must take my plight shall carry
Half my love with him, half my care and duty: [sisters,
Sure, I shall never marry like my
To love my father all.

Lear. But goes this with thy heart?

Cor. Ay, good my lord.

Lear. So young, and so untender?

Cor. So young, my lord, and true.

Lear. Let it be so; thy truth then be thy dower:
For, by the sacred radiance of the sun,
The mysteries of Hecate and the night;
By all the operations of the orbs
From whom we do exist and cease to be;
Here I disclaim all my paternal care,
Propinquity and property of blood,
And as a stranger to my heart and me
Hold thee from this for ever. The barbarous Scythian,
Or he that makes his generation messes
To gorge his appetite, shall to my bosom
Be as well neighbour'd, pitied, and relieved,

As thou my sometime daughter.
Kent. Good my liege,—
Lear. Peace, Kent! [wrath.
Come not between the dragon and his
I loved her most, and thought to set my rest
On her kind nursery. [To CORDELIA] Hence, and avoid my sight!—
So be my grave my peace, as here I give
Her father's heart from her! Call France; who stirs?
Call Burgundy.—Cornwall and Albany,
With my two daughters' dowers digest this third: [marry her.
Let pride, which she calls plainness, I do invest you jointly with my power,
Pre-eminence, and all the large effects
That troop with majesty. Ourself, by monthly course, [knights
With reservation of an hundred
By you to be sustain'd, shall our abode
Make with you by due turns. Only we still retain [king;
The name and all the additions to a
The sway, revenue, execution of the rest, [firm,
Beloved sons, be yours: which to con-
This coronet part betwixt you.
[Giving the Crown.
Kent. Royal Lear,
Whom I have ever honour'd as my king, [follow'd,
Loved as my father, as my master
As my great patron thought on in my prayers,—
Lear. The bow is bent and drawn; make from the shaft.
Kent. Let it fall rather, though the fork invade [mannerly,
The region of my heart: be Kent un-
When Lear is mad. What wouldst thou do, old man?
Think'st thou that duty shall have dread to speak,
When power to flattery bows? To plainness honour 's bound,
When majesty stoops to folly. Reverse thy doom;
And, in thy best consideration, check
This hideous rashness: answer my life my judgment, [thee least;
Thy youngest daughter does not love
Nor are those empty-hearted whose low sound
Reverbs no hollowness.
Lear. Kent, on thy life, no more.
Kent. My life I never held but as a pawn [fear to lose it,
To wage against thine enemies; nor
Thy safety being the motive.
Lear. Out of my sight!
Kent. See better, Lear; and let me still remain
The true blank of thine eye.
Lear. Now, by Apollo,—
Kent. Now, by Apollo, king,
Thou swear'st thy gods in vain.
Lear. O, vassal! miscreant!
[Laying his hand on his sword.
Alb. } Dear sir, forbear.
Corn. }
Kent. Do;
Kill thy physician, and the fee bestow
Upon the foul disease. Revoke thy doom; [throat,
Or, whilst I can vent clamour from my
I'll tell thee thou dost evil.
Lear. Hear me, recreant!
On thine allegiance, hear me!
Since thou hast sought to make us break our vow,—
Which we durst never yet,—and with strain'd pride [power,—
To come betwixt our sentence and our
Which nor our nature nor our place can bear,— [reward.
Our potency made good, take thy
Five days we do allot thee, for provision [world;
To shield thee from diseases of the
And on the sixth to turn thy hated back [day following
Upon our kingdom: if on the tenth
Thy banish'd trunk be found in our dominions, [by Jupiter,
The moment is thy death. Away!
This shall not be revoked.
Kent. Fare thee well, king: sith thus thou wilt appear, [is here.
Freedom lives hence, and banishment
[To CORDELIA] The gods to their dear shelter take thee, maid,
That justly think'st, and hast most rightly said!
[To REGAN and GONERIL] And your large speeches may your deeds approve, [words of love.
That good effects may spring from
Thus Kent, O princes, bids you all adieu;
He'll shape his old course in a country new.
[Exit.

Flourish. Re-enter GLOUCESTER, with FRANCE, BURGUNDY, and Attendants.

Glou. Here 's France and Burgundy, my noble lord.

Lear. My Lord of Burgundy,
We first address towards you, who with this king [in the least,
Hath rivall'd for our daughter: what,
Will you require in present dower with her,
Or cease your quest of love?

Bur. Most royal majesty,
I crave no more than hath your highness offer'd,
Nor will you tender less.

Lear. Right noble Burgundy,
When she was dear to us, we did hold her so; [she stands:
But now her price is fall'n. Sir, there
If aught within that little seeming substance,
Or all of it, with our displeasure pieced,
And nothing more, may fitly like your grace,
She 's there, and she is yours.

Bur. I know no answer.

Lear. Sir, [owes,
Will you, with those infirmities she
Unfriended, new-adopted to our hate,
Dower'd with our curse, and stranger'd with our oath,
Take her, or leave her?

Bur. Pardon me, royal sir;
Election makes not up on such conditions.

Lear. Then leave her, sir; for, by the power that made me,
I tell you all her wealth. [To FRANCE] For you, great king,
I would not from your love make such a stray,
To match you where I hate; therefore beseech you [way
To avert your liking a more worthier
Than on a wretch whom Nature is ashamed
Almost to acknowledge hers.

France. This is most strange,
That she, that even but now was your best object, [your age,
The argument of your praise, balm of
Most best, most dearest, should in this trice of time [mantle
Commit a thing so monstrous, to dismiss
So many folds of favour. Sure, her offence
Must be of such unnatural degree,
That monsters it, or your fore-vouch'd affection [her,
Fall'n into taint: which to believe of
Must be a faith that reason without miracle
Could never p'ant in me.

Cor. I yet beseech your majesty,—
If for I want that glib and oily art,
To speak and purpose not; since what I well intend,
I'll do 't before I speak,—that you make known [ness,
It is no vicious blot, murder, or foul-
No unchaste action, or dishonour'd step, [and favour;
That hath deprived me of your grace
But even for want of that for which I am richer;
A still-soliciting eye, and such a tongue
That I am glad I have not, though not to have it
Hath lost me in your liking.

Lear. Better thou
Hadst not been born than not to have pleased me better.

France. Is it but this,—a tardiness in nature
Which often leaves the history unspoke
That it intends to do? My Lord of Burgundy, [not love
What say you to the lady? Love 's
When it is mingled with respects that stand [have her?
Aloof from the entire point. Will you
She is herself a dowry.

Bur. Royal Lear,
Give but that portion which yourself proposed,
And here I take Cordelia by the hand,
Duchess of Burgundy. [am firm.

Lear. Nothing: I have sworn; I

Bur. [To CORDELIA:] I am sorry, then, you have so lost a father
That you must lose a husband.

Cor. Peace be with Burgundy!
Since that respects of fortune are his love,
I shall not be his wife.

France. Fairest Cordelia, thou art most rich, being poor;
Most choice, forsaken; and most loved, despised! [upon Thee and thy virtues here I seize
Be it lawful I take up what 's cast away.
Gods, gods! 'tis strange that from their cold'st neglect

My love should kindle to inflamed respect. [to my chance,
Thy dowerless daughter, king, thrown
Is queen of us, of ours, and our fair France:
Not all the dukes of waterish Burgundy
Shall buy this unprized precious maid of me. [unkind:
Bid them farewell, Cordelia, though
Thou losest here, a better where to find.

Lear. Thou hast her, France: let her be thine, for we [see
Have no such daughter, nor shall ever
That face of hers again. [To CORDELIA] Therefore be gone [son.—
Without our grace, our love, our beni-
Come, noble Burgundy.

[Flourish. Exeunt all but FRANCE, GONERIL, REGAN, and CORDELIA.

France. Bid farewell to your sisters.

Cor. The jewels of our father, with wash'd eyes [you are;
Cordelia leaves you: I know you what
And, like a sister, am most loth to call
Your faults as they are named. Use well our father: [him:
To your professed bosoms I commit
But yet, alas, stood I within his grace,
I would prefer him to a better place.
So, farewell to you both.

Reg. Prescribe not us our duties.

Gon. Let your study
Be to content your lord; who hath received you [scanted,
At Fortune's alms. You have obedience
And well are worth the want that you have wanted.

Cor. Time shall unfold what plaited cunning hides: [derides.
Who cover faults, at last shame them
Well may you prosper!

France. Come, my fair Cordelia.

[Exeunt FRANCE and CORDELIA.

Gon. Sister, it is not a little I have to say of what most nearly appertains to us both. I think our father will hence to-night.

Reg. That 's most certain, and with you; next month with us.

Gon. You see how full of changes his age is; the observation we have made of it hath not been little: he always loved our sister most; and with what poor judgment he hath now cast her off appears too grossly.

Reg. 'Tis the infirmity of his age: yet he hath ever but slenderly known himself.

Gon. The best and soundest of his time hath been but rash; then must we look to receive from his age, not alone the imperfections of long-engraffed condition, but therewithal the unruly waywardness that infirm and choleric years bring with them.

Reg. Such unconstant starts are we like to have from him as this of Kent's banishment.

Gon. There is further compliment of leave-taking between France and him. Pray you, let 's hit together: if our father carry authority with such dispositions as he bears, this last surrender of his will but offend us.

Reg. We shall further think on 't.

Gon. We must do something, and i' the heat. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—A Hall in the EARL OF GLOUCESTER'S Castle.

Enter EDMUND, with a letter.

Edm. Thou, Nature, art my goddess; to thy law
My services are bound. Wherefore should I [permit Stand in the plague of custom, and
The curiosity of nations to deprive me,
For that I am some twelve or fourteen moonshines
Lag of a brother? Why bastard? wherefore base? [compact,
When my dimensions are as well
My mind as generous, and my shape as true, [they us
As honest madam's issue? Why brand
With base? with baseness? bastardy? base, base?
Who, in the lusty stealth of nature, take
More composition and fierce quality
Than doth, within a dull, stale, tired bed, [fops,
Go to the creating a whole tribe of Got 'tween asleep and wake? Well then, [land:
Legitimate Edgar, I must have your
Our father's love is to the bastard Edmund ['legitimate'!
As to the legitimate: fine word,
Well, my legitimate, if this letter speed,
And my invention thrive, Edmund the base [prosper:
Shall top the legitimate. I grow; I

Now, gods, stand up for bastards!

Enter Gloucester.

Glou. Kent banish'd thus! and France in choler parted!
And the king gone to-night! subscribed his power! [done
Confined to exhibition! All this
Upon the gad!—Edmund, how now! what news?

Edm. So please your lordship, none. [Putting up the letter.

Glou. Why so earnestly seek you to put up that letter?

Edm. I know no news, my lord.

Glou. What paper were you reading?

Edm. Nothing, my lord.

Glou. No? What needed then that terrible dispatch of it into your pocket? the quality of nothing hath not such need to hide itself. Let 's see: come, if it be nothing, I shall not need spectacles.

Edm. I beseech you, sir, pardon me: it is a letter from my brother, that I have not all o'erread; and for so much as I have perused, I find it not fit for your o'erlooking.

Glou. Give me the letter, sir.

Edm. I shall offend, either to detain or give it. The contents, as in part I understand them, are to blame.

Glou. Let 's see, let 's see.

Edm. I hope, for my brother's justification, he wrote this but as an essay or taste of my virtue.

Glou. [Reads.]

'This policy and reverence of age makes the world bitter to the best of our times; keeps our fortunes from us till our oldness cannot relish them. I begin to find an idle and fond bondage in the oppression of aged tyranny; who sways, not as it hath power, but as it is suffered. Come to me, that of this I may speak more. If our father would sleep till I waked him, you should enjoy half his revenue for ever, and live the beloved of your brother,

'Edgar.'

Hum! Conspiracy!—'Sleep till I waked him, you should enjoy half his revenue'!—My son Edgar! Had he a hand to write this? a heart and brain to breed it in?—When came this to you? Who brought it?

Edm. It was not brought me, my lord; there's the cunning of it; I found it thrown in at the casement of my closet. [your brother's?

Glou. You know the character to be

Edm. If the matter were good, my lord, I durst swear it were his; but, in respect of that, I would fain think it were not.

Glou. It is his.

Edm. It is his hand, my lord; but I hope his heart is not in the contents.

Glou. Hath he never heretofore sounded you in this business?

Edm. Never, my lord: but I have often heard him maintain it to be fit that, sons at perfect age, and fathers declining, the father should be as ward to the son, and the son manage his revenue.

Glou. O villain, villain! His very opinion in the letter! Abhorred villain! Unnatural, detested, brutish villain! worse than brutish!—Go, sirrah, seek him; I'll apprehend him: abominable villain! Where is he?

Edm. I do not well know, my lord. If it shall please you to suspend your indignation against my brother till you can derive from him better testimony of his intent, you shall run a certain course; where, if you violently proceed against him, mistaking his purpose, it would make a great gap in your own honour, and shake in pieces the heart of his obedience. I dare pawn down my life for him, that he hath writ this to feel my affection to your honour, and to no other pretence of danger.

Glou. Think you so?

Edm. If your honour judge it meet, I will place you where you shall hear us confer of this, and by an auricular assurance have your satisfaction; and that without any further delay than this very evening. [ster—

Glou. He cannot be such a mon-

Edm. Nor is not, sure.

Glou. To his father, that so tenderly and entirely loves him. Heaven and earth!—Edmund, seek him out; wind me into him, I pray you: frame the business after your own wisdom. I would unstate myself, to be in a due resolution.

Edm. I will seek him, sir, presently; convey the business as I shall find means, and acquaint you withal.

Glou. These late eclipses in the sun and moon portend no good to us: though the wisdom of nature can reason it thus and thus, yet nature finds itself scourged by the sequent effects: love cools, friendship falls off, brothers divide: in cities, mutinies; in countries, discord; in palaces, treason; and the bond cracked 'twixt son and father. This villain of mine comes under the prediction; there 's son against father: the king falls from bias of nature; there 's father against child. We have seen the best of our time: machinations, hollowness, treachery, and all ruinous disorders, follow us disquietly to our graves.—Find out this villain, Edmund; it shall lose thee nothing; do it carefully.—And the noble and true-hearted Kent banished! his offence, honesty! Strange! strange! [Exit.

Edm. This is the excellent foppery of the world, that when we are sick in fortune—often the surfeit of our own behaviour—we make guilty of our disasters the sun, the moon, and the stars: as if we were villains by necessity; fools by heavenly compulsion; knaves, thieves, and treachers, by spherical predominance; drunkards, liars, and adulterers, by an enforced obedience of planetary influence; and all that we are evil in, by a divine thrusting on: an admirable evasion of whoremaster man, to lay his goatish disposition to the charge of a star! My father compounded with my mother under the dragon's tail, and my nativity was under Ursa major; so that it follows I am rough and lecherous. Tut, I should have been that I am, had the maidenliest star in the firmament twinkled on my bastardizing. Edgar—and pat he comes, like the catastrophe of the old comedy: my cue is villanous melancholy, with a sigh like Tom o' Bedlam. O, these eclipses do portend these divisions! fa, sol, la, mi.

Edg. How now, brother Edmund! what serious contemplation are you in?

Edm. I am thinking, brother, of a prediction I read this other day, what should follow these eclipses.

Edg. Do you busy yourself with that?

Edm. I promise you the effects he writes of succeed unhappily; as of unnaturalness between the child and the parent; death, dearth, dissolution of ancient amities; divisions in state, menaces and maledictions against king and nobles; needless diffidences, banishment of friends, dissipation of cohorts, nuptial breaches, and I know not what. [tary astronomical?

Edg. How long have you been a sec-

Edm. Come, come; when saw you my father last?

Edg. Why, the night gone by.

Edm. Spake you with him?

Edg. Ay, two hours together.

Edm. Parted you in good terms? Found you no displeasure in him by word or countenance?

Edg. None at all.

Edm. Bethink yourself wherein you may have offended him: and at my entreaty forbear his presence till some little time hath qualified the heat of his displeasure; which at this instant so rageth in him, that with the mischief of your person it would scarcely allay.

Edg. Some villain hath done me wrong.

Edm. That 's my fear. I pray you, have a continent forbearance till the speed of his rage goes slower; and, as I say, retire with me to my lodging, from whence I will fitly bring you to hear my lord speak: pray ye, go; there 's my key: if you do stir abroad, go armed.

Edg. Armed, brother!

Edm. Brother, I advise you to the best; go armed: I am no honest man if there be any good meaning towards you: I have told you what I have seen and heard; but faintly, nothing like the image and horror of it: pray you, away.

Edg. Shall I hear from you anon?

Edm. I do serve you in this business. [Exit EDGAR.

A credulous father, and a brother noble,
Whose nature is so far from doing harms,
That he suspects none; on whose foolish honesty
My practice rides easy! I see the business. [by wit:
Let me, if not by birth, have lands
All with me 's meet that I can fashion fit.

[Exit.

SCENE III.—A Room in the DUKE OF ALBANY'S Palace.

Enter GONERIL, and OSWALD, her Steward.

Gon. Did my father strike my gentleman for chiding of his fool?

Osw. Ay, madam.

Gon. By day and night he wrongs me; every hour [other,
He flashes into one gross crime or
That sets us all at odds: I'll not endure it: [upbraids us
His knights grow riotous, and himself
On every trifle. When he returns from hunting, [sick:
I will not speak with him; say I am
If you come slack of former services,
You shall do well; the fault of it I'll answer.

Osw. He 's coming, madam; I hear him. [Horns within.

Gon. Put on what weary negligence you please,
You and your fellows; I'd have it come to question:
If he distaste it, let him to my sister,
Whose mind and mine, I know, in that are one,
Not to be overruled. Idle old man,
That still would manage those authorities [life,
That he hath given away! Now, by my Old fools are babes again, and must be used [are seen abused.
With checks as flatteries,—when they Remember what I tell you.

Osw. Very well, madam.

Gon. And let his knights have colder looks among you;
What grows of it, no matter; advise your fellows so:
I would breed from hence occasions, and I shall, [to my sister,
That I may speak: I'll write straight
To hold my very course. Prepare for dinner. [Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—A Hall in the Same. Enter KENT, disguised.

Kent. If but as well I other accents borrow, [intent
That can my speech diffuse, my good
May carry through itself to that full issue [banish'd Kent,
For which I razed my likeness. Now,
If thou canst serve where thou dost stand condemn'd,
So may it come, thy master, whom thou lovest,
Shall find thee full of labours.

Horns within. Enter LEAR, Knights, and Attendants.

Lear. Let me not stay a jot for dinner; go get it ready. [Exit an Attendant.] How now! what art thou?

Kent. A man, sir.

Lear. What dost thou profess? What wouldst thou with us?

Kent. I do profess to be no less than I seem; to serve him truly that will put me in trust; to love him that is honest; to converse with him that is wise, and says little; to fear judgment; to fight when I cannot choose; and to eat no fish.

Lear. What art thou?

Kent. A very honest-hearted fellow, and as poor as the king.

Lear. If thou be as poor for a subject as he is for a king, thou art poor enough. What wouldst thou?

Kent. Service.

Lear. Who wouldst thou serve?

Kent. You.

Lear. Dost thou know me, fellow?

Kent. No, sir; but you have that in your countenance which I would fain call master.

Lear. What 's that?

Kent. Authority.

Lear. What services canst thou do?

Kent. I can keep honest counsel, ride, run, mar a curious tale in telling it, and deliver a plain message bluntly: that which ordinary men are fit for, I am qualified in; and the best of me is diligence.

Lear. How old art thou?

Kent. Not so young, sir, to love a woman for singing; nor so old to dote on her for any thing: I have years on my back forty-eight.

Lear. Follow me; thou shalt serve me: if I like thee no worse after dinner, I will not part from thee yet. Dinner, ho, dinner! Where 's my knave? my fool? Go you, and call my fool hither. [Exit an Attendant.]

Enter OSWALD.

You, you, sirrah, where 's my daughter?

Osw. So please you,— [Exit.

Lear. What says the fellow there? Call the clotpoll back. [Exit a Knight.] Where 's my fool, ho? I think the world 's asleep.

Re-enter Knight.

How now! where 's that mongrel?

Knight. He says, my lord, your daughter is not well.

Lear. Why came not the slave back to me when I called him?

Knight. Sir, he answered me in the roundest manner, he would not.

Lear. He would not!

Knight. My lord, I know not what the matter is; but, to my judgment, your highness is not entertained with that ceremonious affection as you were wont; there 's a great abatement of kindness appears as well in the general dependants as in the duke himself also and your daughter.

Lear. Ha! sayest thou so?

Knight. I beseech you, pardon me, my lord, if I be mistaken; for my duty cannot be silent when I think your highness wronged.

Lear. Thou but rememberest me of mine own conception: I have perceived a most faint neglect of late; which I have rather blamed as mine own jealous curiosity than as a very pretence and purpose of unkindness: I will look further into 't. But where 's my fool? I have not seen him this two days.

Knight. Since my young lady's going into France, sir, the fool hath much pined away.

Lear. No more of that; I have noted it well.—Go you, and tell my daughter I would speak with her. [Exit an Attendant.] Go you, call hither my fool.

[Exit an Attendant.

Re-enter OSWALD.

O, you sir, you, come you hither, sir: who am I, sir?

Osw. My lady's father.

Lear. 'My lady's father'! my lord's knave: you whoreson dog! you slave! you cur!

Osw. I am none of these, my lord; I beseech your pardon.

Lear. Do you bandy looks with me, you rascal? [Striking him.

Osw. I'll not be struck, my lord.

Kent. Nor tripped neither, you base football player.

[Tripping up his heels.

Lear. I thank thee, fellow; thou servest me, and I'll love thee.

Kent. Come, sir, arise, away! I'll teach you differences: away, away! If you will measure your lubber's length again, tarry: but away! go to; have you wisdom? so.

[Pushes OSWALD out.

Lear. Now, my friendly knave, I thank thee: there 's earnest of thy service. [Giving KENT money.

Enter Fool.

Fool. Let me hire him too: here 's my coxcomb. [Offering KENT his cap.

Lear. How now, my pretty knave! how dost thou? [coxcomb.

Fool. Sirrah, you were best take my

Kent. Why, fool?

Fool. Why, for taking one's part that 's out of favour; nay, an thou canst not smile as the wind sits, thou 'lt catch cold shortly: there, take my coxcomb: why, this fellow hath banished two on 's daughters, and done the third a blessing against his will; if thou follow him, thou must needs wear my coxcomb.—How now, nuncle! Would I had two coxcombs and two daughters!

Lear. Why, my boy?

Fool. If I gave them all my living, I'd keep my coxcombs myself. There's mine; beg another of thy daughters.

Lear. Take heed, sirrah; the whip.

Fool. Truth 's a dog must to kennel; he must be whipped out, when Lady the brach may stand by the fire and stink.

Lear. A pestilent gall to me!

Fool. Sirrah, I'll teach thee a speech.

Lear. Do.

Fool. Mark it, nuncle:

Have more than thou showest,
Speak less than thou knowest,
Lend less than thou owest,
Ride more than thou goest,
Learn more than thou trowest,
Set less than thou throwest;
Leave thy drink and thy whore,
And keep in-a-door,
And thou shalt have more
Than two tens to a score.

Kent. This is nothing, fool.

Fool. Then 'tis like the breath of an unfee'd lawyer; you gave me nothing for 't. Can you make no use of nothing, nuncle?

Lear. Why, no, boy; nothing can be made out of nothing.

Fool. [To KENT.] Prithee, tell him, so much the rent of his land comes to: he will not believe a fool.

Lear. A bitter fool!

Fool. Dost thou know the difference, my boy, between a bitter fool and a sweet fool?

Lear. No, lad; teach me.

Fool. That lord that counsell'd thee
To give away thy land,
Come place him here by me,
And do thou for him stand:
The sweet and bitter fool
Will presently appear;
The one in motley here,
The other found out there.

Lear. Dost thou call me fool, boy?

Fool. All thy other titles thou hast given away; that thou wast born with.

Kent. This is not altogether fool, my lord.

Fool. No, faith, lords and great men will not let me; if I had a monopoly out, they would have part on 't: and ladies too, they will not let me have all fool to myself; they'll be snatching. Give me an egg, nuncle, and I'll give thee two crowns.

Lear. What two crowns shall they be?

Fool. Why, after I have cut the egg i' the middle, and eat up the meat, the two crowns of the egg. When thou clovest thy crown i' the middle, and gavest away both parts, thou borest thine ass on thy back over the dirt: thou hadst little wit in thy bald crown when thou gavest thy golden one away. If I speak like myself in this, let him be whipped that first finds it so.

[Singing.

Fools had ne'er less wit in a year;
For wise men are grown foppish,
And know not how their wits to wear,
Their manners are so apish.

Lear. When were you wont to be so full of songs, sirrah?

Fool. I have used it, nuncle, ever since thou madest thy daughters thy mother: for when thou gavest them the rod and puttest down thine own breeches, [Singing.

Then they for sudden joy did weep,
And I for sorrow sung,
That such a king should play bo-peep,
And go the fools among.

Prithee, nuncle, keep a schoolmaster that can teach thy fool to lie: I would fain learn to lie. [you whipped.

Lear. An you lie, sirrah, we'll have Fool. I marvel what kin thou and thy daughters are: they'll have me whipped for speaking true, thou'lt have me whipped for lying; and sometimes I am whipped for holding my peace. I had rather be any kind o' thing than a fool: and yet I would not be thee, nuncle; thou hast pared thy wit o' both sides and left nothing i' the middle: here comes one o' the parings.

Enter GONERIL.

Lear. How now, daughter! what makes that frontlet on? Methinks you are too much of late i' the frown.

Fool. Thou wast a pretty fellow when thou hadst no need to care for her frowning; now thou art an O without a figure: I am better than thou art now; I am a fool, thou art nothing. [To GONERIL.] Yes, forsooth, I will hold my tongue; so your face bids me, though you say nothing.

Mum, mum: [crumb,
He that keeps nor crust nor
Weary of all, shall want some.

[Pointing to LEAR] That 's a shealed peascod. [licensed fool,

Gon. Not only, sir, this your all-
But other of your insolent retinue

In rank and not-to-be-endured riots.

To have found a safe redress; but now grow fearful, [and done,
By what yourself too late have spoke
That you protect this course, and put it on [the fault
By your allowance; which if you should,
Would not 'scape censure, nor the redresses sleep, [weal,
Which, in the tender of a wholesome
Might in their working do you that offence, [necessity
Which else were shame, that then

Will call discreet proceeding.
Fool. For, you trow, nuncle,
The hedge-sparrow fed the cuckoo so long, [young.
That it had it head bit off by it
So out went the candle, and we were left darkling.
Lear. Are you our daughter?
Gon. Come, sir, [good wisdom
I would you would make use of that
Whereof I know you are fraught, and put away [form you
These dispositions which of late trans-

Saddle my horses; call my train together.
Degenerate bastard! I'll not trouble thee:
Yet have I left a daughter.
Gon. You strike my people; and your disorder'd rabble
Make servants of their betters.

Enter ALBANY.

Lear. Woe, that too late repents,—[To ALBANY] O, sir, are you come? [my horses.
Is it your will? Speak, sir.—Prepare
Ingratitude, thou marble-hearted fiend,
More hideous, when thou show'st thee in a child,
Than the sea-monster!
Alb. Pray, sir, be patient.
Lear. [To GONERIL.] Detested kite! thou liest: [parts,
My train are men of choice and rarest
That all particulars of duty know,
And in the most exact regard support
The worships of their name. O most small fault, [show!
How ugly didst thou in Cordelia
Which, like an engine, wrench'd my frame of nature
From the fix'd place; drew from my heart all love, [Lear!
And added to the gall. O Lear, Lear,
Beat at this gate, that let thy folly in, [Striking his head.
And thy dear judgment out! [To ALBANY] Go, go;—my people!
Alb. My lord, I am guiltless, as I am ignorant
Of what hath moved you.
Lear. It may be so, my lord.
Hear, Nature, hear; dear goddess, hear! [intend
Suspend thy purpose, if thou didst
To make this creature fruitful!
Into her womb convey sterility!
Dry up in her the organs of increase;
And from her derogate body never spring [teem,
A babe to honour her! If she must Create her child of spleen, that it may live [to her!
And be a thwart disnatured torment
Let it stamp wrinkles in her brow of youth; [cheeks;
With cadent tears fret channels in her
Turn all her mother's pains and benefits
To laughter and contempt; that she may feel [is How sharper than a serpent's tooth it

To have a thankless child! Away, away! [Exit.

Alb. Now, gods that we adore, whereof comes this?

Gon. Never afflict yourself to know the cause;
But let his disposition have that scope
That dotage gives it.

Re-enter Lear.

Lear. What, fifty of my followers at a clap!
Within a fortnight!

Alb. What 's the matter, sir?

Lear. I'll tell thee. [To Goneril] Life and death! I am ashamed [hood thus;
That thou hast power to shake my man-
That these hot tears, which break from me perforce,
Should make thee worth them. Blasts and fogs upon thee! [curse
The untented woundings of a father's Pierce every sense about thee! Old fond eyes,
Beweep this cause again, I'll pluck
And cast you, with the waters that you lose, [this?
To temper clay. Yea, is it come to Let it be so: yet have I left a daughter,
Who, I am sure, is kind and comfortable: [her nails
When she shall hear this of thee, with She'll flay thy wolvish visage. Thou shalt find [dost think
That I'll resume the shape which thou
I have cast off for ever: thou shalt, I warrant thee.

[Exeunt Lear, Kent, and Attendants.

Gon. Do you mark that, my lord?

Alb. I cannot be so partial, Goneril,
To the great love I bear you,—

Gon. Pray you, content. What, Oswald, ho!
[To the Fool] You, sir, more knave than fool, after your master.

Fool. Nuncle Lear, nuncle Lear! tarry, and take the fool with thee.
A fox, when one has caught her,
And such a daughter,
Should sure to the slaughter,
If my cap would buy a halter:
So the fool follows after. [Exit.

Gon. This man hath had good counsel: a hundred knights!
'Tis politic and safe to let him keep
At point a hundred knights: yes, that on every dream,
Each buz, each fancy, each complaint, dislike, [powers,
He may enguard his dotage with their
And hold our lives in mercy.—Oswald, I say!

Gon. Safer than trust too far:
Let me still take away the harms I fear,
Not fear still to be taken: I know his heart. [sister:
What he hath utter'd I have writ my
If she sustain him and his hundred knights,
When I have show'd the unfitness,—

Re-enter Oswald.

How now, Oswald!
What, have you writ that letter to my sister?

Osw. Ay, madam.

Gon. Take you some company, and away to horse:
Inform her full of my particular fear;
And thereto add such reasons of your own [gone;
As may compact it more. Get you
And hasten your return. [Exit Oswald.] No, no, my lord,
This milky gentleness and course of yours [pardon,
Though I condemn it not, yet, under
You are much more attask'd for want of wisdom
Than praised for harmful mildness.

Alb. How far your eyes may pierce I cannot tell: [well.
Striving to better, oft we mar what 's

Gon. Nay, then—

Alb. Well, well; the event. [Exeunt.

Scene V.—Court before the Same.

Enter Lear, Kent, and Fool.

Lear. Go you before to Gloucester with these letters. Acquaint my daughter no further with any thing you know than comes from her demand out of the letter. If your diligence be not speedy, I shall be there afore you.

Kent. I will not sleep, my lord, till I have delivered your letter. [Exit.

Fool. If a man's brains were in 's heels, were 't not in danger of kibes?

Lear. Ay, boy.

Fool. Then, I prithee, be merry; thy wit shall ne'er go slip-shod.

Lear. Ha, ha, ha!

Fool. Shalt see thy other daughter will use thee kindly; for though she 's as like this as a crab 's like an apple, yet I can tell what I can tell.

Lear. Why, what canst thou tell, boy?

Fool. She will taste as like this as a crab does to a crab. Thou canst tell why one's nose stands i' the middle on 's face?

Lear. No.

Fool. Why, to keep one's eyes of either side 's nose; that what a man cannot smell out, he may spy into.

Lear. I did her wrong—

Fool. Canst tell how an oyster makes his shell?

Lear. No.

Fool. Nor I neither; but I can tell why a snail has a house.

Lear. Why?

Fool. Why, to put 's head in; not to give it away to his daughters, and leave his horns without a case.

Lear. I will forget my nature. So kind a father!—Be my horses ready?

Fool. Thy asses are gone about 'em. The reason why the seven stars are no more than seven is a pretty reason.

Lear. Because they are not eight?

Fool. Yes, indeed: thou wouldst make a good fool.

Lear. To take 't again perforce! Monster ingratitude!

Fool. If thou wert my fool, nuncle, I'd have thee beaten for being old before thy time.

Lear. How 's that?

Fool. Thou shouldst not have been old till thou hadst been wise.

Lear. O, let me not be mad, not mad, sweet heaven! [mad! Keep me in temper; I would not be

Enter Gentleman.

How now! are the horses ready?

Gent. Ready, my lord.

Lear. Come, boy.

Fool. She that 's a maid now, and laughs at my departure, Shall not be a maid long, unless things be cut shorter. [Exeunt.

ACT II.

SCENE I.—A Court within the Castle of the EARL OF GLOUCESTER.

Enter EDMUND and CURAN, meeting.

Edm. Save thee, Curan.

Cur. And you, sir. I have been with your father, and given him notice that the Duke of Cornwall and Regan his duchess will be here with him this night.

Edm. How comes that?

Cur. Nay, I know not. You have heard of the news abroad; I mean the whispered ones, for they are yet but ear-kissing arguments? [they?

Edm. Not I: pray you, what are

Cur. Have you heard of no likely wars toward, 'twixt the Dukes of Cornwall and Albany?

Edm. Not a word.

Cur. You may do, then, in time. Fare you well, sir. [Exit.

Enter EDGAR.

My father watches: O sir, fly this place; [hid; Intelligence is given where you are You have now the good advantage of the night: [of Cornwall? Have you not spoken 'gainst the Duke He 's coming hither; now, i' the night, i' the haste, [thing said And Regan with him: have you no-Upon his party 'gainst the Duke of Albany? Advise yourself.

Edg. I am sure on 't, not a word.

Edm. I hear my father coming: pardon me; [upon you: In cunning I must draw my sword Draw; seem to defend yourself; now quit you well. [ho, here! Yield:—come before my father.—Light, Fly, brother.—Torches, torches!—So, farewell. [Exit EDGAR. Some blood drawn on me would beget opinion [Wounds his arm. Of my more fierce endeavour: I have seen drunkards [father! Do more than this in sport. Father, Stop, stop! No help?

Enter GLOUCESTER, and Servants with torches.

Glou. Now, Edmund, where's the villain? [sharp sword out,
Edm. Here stood he in the dark, his Mumbling of wicked charms, conjuring the moon
To stand 's auspicious mistress,— Glou. But where is he?
Edm. Look, sir, I bleed. [mund?
Glou. Where is the villain, Ed-
Edm. Fled this way, sir. When by no means he could—Glou. Pursue him, ho! Go after. [Exit some Servants.] By no means what?
Edm. Persuade me to the murder of your lordship;
But that I told him the revenging gods
'Gainst parricides did all their thunders bend; [a bond
Spoke with how manifold and strong
The child was bound to the father;—sir, in fine,
Seeing how loathly opposite I stood

But when he saw my best alarum'd spirits [the encounter,

Glou. Strong and fasten'd villain!
Would he deny his letter? I never got him. [Trumpets within.
Hark, the duke's trumpets! I know not why he comes.
All ports I'll bar; the villain shall not 'scape; [his picture
The duke must grant me that: besides,
I will send far and near, that all the kingdom [land,
May have due note of him; and of my Loyal and natural boy, I'll work the means
To make thee capable.

Enter CORNWALL, REGAN, and Attendants.

Corn. How now, my noble friend! since I came hither,
Which I can call but now, I have heard strange news.
Reg. If it be true, all vengeance comes too short
Which can pursue the offender. How dost, my lord?
Glou. O, madam, my old heart is crack'd, is crack'd!
Reg. What, did my father's godson seek your life? [Edgar?
He whom my father named? your

That tend upon my father?

Edmund, I hear that you have shown your father
A child-like office.
Edm. 'Twas my duty, sir.
Glou. He did bewray his practice; and received [hend him.
This hurt you see, striving to appre-

Glou. For him I thank your grace.
Corn. You know not why we came to visit you,—

SCENE II.—Before GLOUCESTER'S Castle.

Enter KENT and OSWALD, severally.

Osw. Good dawning to thee, friend: art of this house?
Kent. Ay.
Osw. Where may we set our horses?
Kent. I' the mire. [me.
Osw. Prithee, if thou lovest me, tell
Kent. I love thee not.
Osw. Why, then I care not for thee.
Kent. If I had thee in Lipsbury pinfold, I would make thee care for me.
Osw. Why dost thou use me thus? I know thee not.
Kent. Fellow, I know thee.
Osw. What dost thou know me for?
Kent. A knave; a rascal; an eater of broken meats; a base, proud, shallow, beggarly, three-suited, hundred-pound, filthy, worsted-stocking knave; a lily-livered, action-taking knave; a whoreson, glass-gazing, superserviceable, finical rogue; one-trunk-inheriting slave; one that wouldst be a bawd in way of good service, and art nothing but the composition of a knave, beggar, coward, pandar, and the son and heir of a mongrel bitch: one whom I will beat into clamorous whining, if thou deniest the least syllable of thy addition.
Osw. Why, what a monstrous fellow art thou, thus to rail on one that is neither known of thee nor knows thee!
Kent. What a brazen-faced varlet art thou, to deny thou knowest me! Is it two days ago since I tripped up thy heels and beat thee before the king? Draw, you rogue: for, though it be night, yet the moon shines; I'll make a sop o' the moonshine of you: draw, you whoreson cullionly barbermonger, draw. [Drawing his sword.
Osw. Away! I have nothing to do with thee.
Kent. Draw, you rascal: you come with letters against the king; and take Vanity the puppet's part against the royalty of her father: draw, you rogue, or I'll so carbonado your shanks: draw, you rascal; come your ways.
Osw. Help, ho! murder! help!
Kent. Strike, you slave; stand, rogue, stand; you neat slave, strike. [Beating him.
Osw. Help, ho! murder! murder!

Enter EDMUND, with his rapier drawn, CORNWALL, REGAN, GLOUCESTER, and Servants.

Edm. How now! What 's the matter? [Parting them.
Kent. With you, goodman boy, an you please: come, I'll flesh ye; come on, young master.
Glou. Weapons! arms! What 's the matter here?
Corn. Keep peace, upon your lives;

He dies that strikes again. What is the matter?

Reg. The messengers from our sister and the king.

Corn. What is your difference? speak.

Osw. I am scarce in breath, my lord.

Kent. No marvel, you have so bestirred your valour. You cowardly rascal, Nature disclaims in thee: a tailor made thee.

Corn. Thou art a strange fellow: a tailor make a man?

Kent. Ay, a tailor, sir: a stone-cutter or a painter could not have made him so ill, though they had been but two hours at the trade.

Corn. Speak yet, how grew your quarrel?

Osw. This ancient ruffian, sir, whose life I have spared at suit of his grey beard,—

Kent. Thou whoreson zed! thou unnecessary letter!—My lord, if you will give me leave, I will tread this unbolted villain into mortar, and daub the walls of a jakes with him.—Spare my grey beard, you wagtail?

Corn. Peace, sirrah! You beastly knave, know you no reverence?

Kent. Yes, sir; but anger hath a privilege.

Corn. Why art thou angry?

Kent. That such a slave as this should wear a sword,
Who wears no honesty. Such smiling rogues as these,
Like rats, oft bite the holy cords a-twain
Which are too intrinse to unloose; smooth every passion
That in the natures of their lords rebel;
Bring oil to fire, snow to their colder moods;
Renege, affirm, and turn their halcyon beaks
With every gale and vary of their masters,
As knowing nought, like dogs, but following.
A plague upon your epileptic visage!
Smile you my speeches, as I were a fool?
Goose, if I had you upon Sarum plain,
I'd drive ye cackling home to Camelot.

Corn. What, art thou mad, old fellow?

Glou. How fell you out? say that.

Kent. No contraries hold more antipathy
Than I and such a knave.

Corn. Why dost thou call him knave? What's his offence?

Kent. His countenance likes me not.

Corn. No more, perchance, does mine, nor his, nor hers.

Kent. Sir, 'tis my occupation to be plain:
I have seen better faces in my time
Than stands on any shoulder that I see
Before me at this instant.

Corn. This is some fellow,
Who, having been praised for bluntness, doth affect the garb
A saucy roughness; and constrains
Quite from his nature: he cannot flatter, he,—
An honest mind and plain,—he must speak truth!
An they will take it, so; if not, he 's plain.
These kind of knaves I know, which in this plainness
Harbour more craft and more corruption
Than twenty silly ducking observants,
That stretch their duties nicely.

Kent. Sir, in good sooth, in sincere verity,
Under the allowance of your great aspect,
Whose influence, like the wreath of radiant fire
On flickering Phœbus' front,—

Corn. What mean'st by this?

Kent. To go out of my dialect, which you discommend so much. I know, sir, I am no flatterer: he that beguiled you in a plain accent was a plain knave; which, for my part, I will not be, though I should win your displeasure to entreat me to 't.

Corn. [To Osw.] What was the offence you gave him?

Osw. I never gave him any:
It pleased the king his master very late
To strike at me, upon his misconstruction;
When he, conjunct, and flattering his displeasure,
Tripp'd me behind; being down, insulted, rail'd,
And put upon him such a deal of man,
That worthied him, got praises of the king
For him attempting who was self-subdued;
And, in the fleshment of this dread exploit,
Drew on me here again.

Kent. None of these rogues and cowards
But Ajax is their fool.

Corn. Fetch forth the stocks!
You stubborn ancient knave, you reverend braggart,

We'll teach you—
Kent. Sir, I am too old to learn:
Call not your stocks for me: I serve the king;
On whose employment I was sent to you:
You shall do small respect, show too bold malice
Against the grace and person of my master,
Stocking his messenger.
Corn. Fetch forth the stocks!
As I have life and honour, there shall he sit till noon.
Reg. Till noon! till night, my lord; and all night too.
Kent. Why, madam, if I were your father's dog,
You should not use me so.
Reg. Sir, being his knave, I will.
Corn. This is a fellow of the selfsame colour
Our sister speaks of. Come, bring away the stocks!
[Stocks brought out.
Glou. Let me beseech your grace not to do so:
His fault is much, and the good king his master
Will check him for 't: your purposed low correction
Is such as basest and contemned'st wretches
For pilferings and most common trespasses
Are punish'd with: the king must take it ill,
That he, so slightly valued in his messenger,
Should have him thus restrain'd.
Corn. I'll answer that.
Reg. My sister may receive it much more worse,
To have her gentleman abused, assaulted,
For following her affairs.—Put in his legs.
[KENT is put in the Stocks.
Come, my good lord, away.
[Exeunt all but GLOUCESTER and KENT.
Glou. I am sorry for thee, friend; 'tis the duke's pleasure,
Whose disposition, all the world well knows,
Will not be rubb'd nor stopp'd: I'll entreat for thee.
Kent. Pray, do not, sir: I have watch'd and travell'd hard;
Some time I shall sleep out, the rest I'll whistle.
A good man's fortune may grow out at heels:
Give you good-morrow!
Glou. The duke 's to blame in this;
'twill be ill taken. [Exit.

Kent. Good king, that must approve the common saw,
Thou out of heaven's benediction comest
To the warm sun! [globe,
Approach, thou beacon to this under
That by thy comfortable beams I may
Peruse this letter!—Nothing almost sees miracles [delia;
But misery:—I know 'tis from Cor-
Who hath most fortunately been inform'd [find time
Of my obscured course; and shall
From this enormous state,—seeking to give [o'erwatch'd, Losses their remedies.—All weary and Take vantage, heavy eyes, not to behold
This shameful lodging.
Fortune, good night: smile once more; turn thy wheel! [He sleeps.

SCENE III.—A Part of the Heath.

Enter EDGAR.

Edg. I heard myself proclaim'd;
And by the happy hollow of a tree
Escaped the hunt. No port is free; no place,
That guard, and most unusual vigilance,
Does not attend my taking. Whiles I may 'scape,
I will preserve myself: and am bethought
To take the basest and most poorest shape,
That ever penury, in contempt of man,
Brought near to beast: my face I'll grime with filth; [knots;
Blanket my loins; elf all my hair in
And with presented nakedness outface
The winds and persecutions of the sky.
The country gives me proof and precedent [voices,
Of Bedlam beggars, who, with roaring
Strike in their numb'd and mortified bare arms [rosemary;
Pins, wooden pricks, nails, sprigs of
And with this horrible object, from low farms, [mills,
Poor pelting villages, sheep-cotes and
Sometime with lunatic bans, sometime with prayers, [poor Tom!
Enforce their charity. Poor Turlygood!
That 's something yet: Edgar I nothing am. [Exit.

1 This passage is probably defective.

SCENE IV.—Before GLOUCESTER'S Castle. KENT in the Stocks.

Enter LEAR, Fool, and Gentleman.

Lear. 'Tis strange that they should so depart from home,
And not send back my messenger.
Gent. As I learn'd,
The night before there was no purpose in them
Of this remove.
Kent. Hail to thee, noble master!
Lear. Ha!
Makest thou this shame thy pastime?
Kent. No, my lord.
Fool. Ha, ha! he wears cruel garters. Horses are tied by the head, dogs and bears by the neck, monkeys by the loins, and men by the legs: when a man 's over-lusty at legs, then he wears wooden nether-stocks.
Lear. What 's he that hath so much thy place mistook
To set thee here?
King. It is both he and she;
Your son and daughter.
Lear. No.
Kent. Yes.
Lear. No, I say.
Kent. I say, yea.
Lear. No, no; they would not.
Kent. Yes, they have.
Lear. By Jupiter, I swear, no.
Kent. By Juno, I swear, ay.
Lear. They durst not do 't;
They could not, would not do 't; 'tis worse than murder,
To do upon respect such violent outrage: [which way
Resolve me, with all modest haste,
Thou mightst deserve, or they impose, this usage,
Coming from us. [home
Kent. My lord, when at their
I did commend your highness' letters to them, [show'd
Ere I was risen from the place that
My duty kneeling, came there a reeking post, [panting forth
Stew'd in his haste, half breathless,
From Goneril his mistress salutations;
Deliver'd letters, spite of intermission,
Which presently they read: on whose contents,
They summon'd up their meiny, straight took horse;
Commanded me to follow, and attend
The leisure of their answer; gave me cold looks:
And meeting here the other messenger,
Whose welcome, I perceived, had poison'd mine—
Being the very fellow that of late
Display'd so saucily against your highness— [drew:
Having more man than wit about me,
He raised the house with loud and coward cries. [pass worth
Your son and daughter found this tres-
The shame which here it suffers.
Fool. Winter's not gone yet, if the wild-geese fly that way.
Fathers that wear rags
Do make their children blind;
But fathers that bear bags
Shall see their children kind.
Fortune, that arrant whore,
Ne'er turns the key to the poor.
But, for all this, thou shalt have as many dolours for thy daughters as thou canst tell in a year.
Lear. O, how this mother swells up toward my heart! [sorrow,
Hysterica passio! down, thou climbing
Thy element 's below! Where is this daughter? [in.
Kent. With the earl, sir, here within.
Lear. Follow me not; stay here. [Exit.
Gent. Made you no more offence but what you speak of?
Kent. None. [small a train?
How chance the king comes with so
Fool. An thou hadst been set i' the stocks for that question, thou hadst well deserved it.
Kent. Why, fool?
Fool. We'll set thee to school to an ant, to teach thee there 's no labouring i' the winter. All that follow their noses are led by their eyes but blind men; and there 's not a nose among twenty but can smell him that 's stinking. Let go thy hold when a great wheel runs down a hill, lest it break thy neck with following it; but the great one that goes up the hill, let him draw thee after. When a wise man gives thee better counsel, give me mine again: I would have none but knaves follow it, since a fool gives it.
That sir which serves and seeks for gain,
And follows but for form,

Will pack when it begins to rain,
And leave thee in the storm.
But I will tarry; the fool will stay,
And let the wise man fly:
The knave turns fool that runs away;
The fool no knave, perdy.

Kent. Where learn'd you this, fool?

Fool. Not i' the stocks, fool.

Re-enter LEAR, with GLOUCESTER.

Lear. Deny to speak with me? They are sick? they are weary?
They have travell'd all the night? Mere fetches;
The images of revolt and flying off.
Fetch me a better answer.

Glou. My dear lord,
You know the fiery quality of the duke;
How unremoveable and fix'd he is
In his own course. [confusion!

Lear. Vengeance! plague! death!
Fiery? what quality? Why, Gloucester, Gloucester,
I'd speak with the Duke of Cornwall and his wife.

Glou. Well, my good lord, I have inform'd them so.

Lear. Inform'd them! Dost thou understand me, man?

Glou. Ay, my good lord.

Lear. The king would speak with Cornwall; the dear father
Would with his daughter speak, commands her service:
Are they inform'd of this?—My breath and blood! [duke that—
Fiery? the fiery duke?—Tell the hot
No, but not yet: may be he is not well:
Infirmity doth still neglect all office
Whereto our health is bound; we are not ourselves
When Nature, being oppress'd, commands the mind
To suffer with the body: I'll forbear;
And am fall'n out with my more headier will,
To take the indisposed and sickly fit
For the sound man. [Looking on KENT.]
Death on my state! wherefore
Should he sit here? This act persuades me
That this remotion of the duke and her
Is practice only. Give me my servant forth. [with them,
Go tell the duke and 's wife I'd speak
Now, presently: bid them come forth and hear me, [drum
Or at their chamber-door I'll beat the Till it cry sleep to death.

Glou. I would have all well betwixt you. [Exit.

Lear. O me, my heart, my rising heart! but down!

Fool. Cry to it, nuncle, as the cockney did to the eels when she put 'em i' the paste alive; she knapped 'em o' the coxcombs with a stick, and cried 'Down, wantons, down!' 'Twas her brother that, in pure kindness to his horse, buttered his hay.

Enter CORNWALL, REGAN, GLOUCESTER, and Servants.

Lear. Good-morrow to you both.

Corn. Hail to your grace! [KENT is set at liberty.

Reg. I am glad to see your highness.

Lear. Regan, I think you are; I know what reason
I have to think so: if thou shouldst not be glad, [tomb,
I would divorce me from thy mother's Sepulchring an adultress. [To KENT] O, are you free? [Regan,
Some other time for that.—Beloved
Thy sister 's naught: O Regan, she hath tied [ture, here,— Sharp-tooth'd unkindness, like a vul- [Points to his heart.
I can scarce speak to thee; thou'lt not believe [Regan!
With how depraved a quality—O

Reg. I pray you, sir, take patience: I have hope
You less know how to value her desert
Than she to scant her duty.

Lear. Say, how is that?

Reg. I cannot think my sister in the least [chance
Would fail her obligation: if, sir, per-
She have restrain'd the riots of your followers, [wholesome end,
'Tis on such ground, and to such
As clears her from all blame.

Lear. My curses on her!

Reg. O, sir, you are old;
Nature in you stands on the very verge
Of her confine: you should be ruled and led [state
By some discretion that discerns your
Better than you yourself. Therefore I pray you

That to our sister you do make return;
Say you have wrong'd her, sir.
Lear. Ask her forgiveness?
Do you but mark how this becomes the house:
[that I am old;
[Kneeling.] 'Dear daughter, I confess
Age is unnecessary; on my knees I beg
That you'll vouchsafe me raiment, bed, and food.'
Reg. Good sir, no more; these are unsightly tricks:
Return you to my sister.
Lear. [Rising.] Never, Regan:
She hath abated me of half my train;
Look'd black upon me; struck me with her tongue, [heart:—
Most serpent-like, upon the very
All the stored vengeances of heaven fall
On her ingrateful top! Strike her young bones,
You taking airs, with lameness!
Corn. Fie, sir, fie!
Lear. You nimble lightnings, dart your blinding flames
Into her scornful eyes! Infect her beauty, [powerful sun,
You fen-suck'd fogs, drawn by the
To fall and blast her pride!
Reg. O the blest gods! so will you wish on me,
When the rash mood is on.
Lear. No, Regan, thou shalt never have my curse: [give Thy tender-hefted nature shall not
Thee o'er to harshness: her eyes are fierce; but thine [in thee
Do comfort and not burn. 'Tis not
To grudge my pleasures, to cut off my train, [sizes,
To bandy hasty words, to scant my
And, in conclusion, to oppose the bolt
Against my coming in: thou better know'st [hood,
The offices of nature, bond of child-
Effects of courtesy, dues of gratitude;
Thy half o' the kingdom hast thou not forgot,
Wherein I thee endow'd.
Reg. Good sir, to the purpose.
Lear. Who put my man i' the stocks?
[Tucket within.
Corn. What trumpet 's that?
Reg. I know 't; my sister's: this approves her letter,
That she would soon be here.

Enter OSWALD.

Is your lady come?
Lear. This is a slave whose easy-borrow'd pride [follows.
Dwells in the fickle grace of her he
Out, varlet, from my sight!
Corn. What means your grace?
Lear. Who stock'd my servant? Regan, I have good hope
Thou didst not know on 't.—Who comes here?

Enter GONERIL.

O heavens,
If you do love old men, if your sweet sway
Allow obedience, if yourselves are old,
Make it your cause; send down, and take my part!
[To GONERIL] Art not ashamed to look upon this beard?— [hand?
O Regan, wilt thou take her by the
Gon. Why not by the hand, sir? How have I offended?
All 's not offence that indiscretion finds
And dotage terms so.
Lear. O sides, you are too tough;
Will you yet hold?—How came my man i' the stocks?
Corn. I set him there, sir: but his own disorders
Deserved much less advancement.
Lear. You! did you?
Reg. I pray you, father, being weak, seem so.
If, till the expiration of your month,
You will return and sojourn with my sister, [to me:
Dismissing half your train, come then
I am now from home, and out of that provision [tainment.
Which shall be needful for your enter-
Lear. Return to her, and fifty men dismiss'd? [choose
No, rather I abjure all roofs, and
To wage against the ennity o' the air;
To be a comrade with the wolf and owl,
Necessity's sharp pinch!—Return with her?— [dowerless took
Why, the hot-blooded France, that
Our youngest born, I could as well be brought [pension beg
To knee his throne, and, squire-like,
To keep base life afoot.—Return with her?—[sumpter
Persuade me rather to be slave and
To this detested groom.
[Pointing at OSWALD.

Gon. At your choice, sir.
Lear. I prithee, daughter, do not make me mad: [well:
I will not trouble thee, my child; fare-
We'll no more meet, no more see one another:— [my daughter;
But yet thou art my flesh, my blood,
Or rather a disease that 's in my flesh,
Which I must needs call mine: thou art a boil,
A plague-sore, an embossed carbuncle,
In my corrupted blood. But I'll not chide thee; [call it:
Let shame come when it will, I do not
I do not bid the thunder-bearer shoot,
Nor tell tales of thee to high-judging Jove: [thy leisure:
Mend when thou canst; be better at
I can be patient; I can stay with Regan,
I and my hundred knights.
Reg. Not altogether so:
I look'd not for you yet, nor am provided [to my sister;
For your fit welcome. Give ear, sir,
For those that mingle reason with your passion [so—
Must be content to think you old, and
But she knows what she does.
Lear. Is this well spoken?
Reg. I dare avouch it, sir: what, fifty followers? [of more?
Is it not well? What should you need
Yea, or so many, sith that both charge and danger [in one house,
Speak 'gainst so great a number? How,
Should many people, under two commands, [possible.
Hold amity? 'Tis hard; almost im-
Gon. Why might not you, my lord, receive attendance
From those that she calls servants, or from mine?
Reg. Why not, my lord? If then they chanced to slack you,
We could control them. If you will come to me,— [you
For now I spy a danger,—I entreat
To bring but five-and-twenty: to no more
Will I give place or notice.
Lear. I gave you all—
Reg. And in good time you gave it.
Lear. Made you my guardians, my depositaries;
But kept a reservation to be follow'd
With such a number. What, must I come to you [you so?
With five-and-twenty, Regan? said
Reg. And speak 't again, my lord; no more with me.
Lear. Those wicked creatures yet do look well-favour'd,
When others are more wicked; not being the worst
Stands in some rank of praise. [To GONERIL] I'll go with thee:
Thy fifty yet doth double five-and-twenty,
And thou art twice her love.
Gon. Hear me, my lord:
What need you five-and-twenty, ten, or five, [many
To follow in a house where twice so
Have a command to tend you?
Reg. What need one?
Lear. O, reason not the need: our basest beggars
Are in the poorest thing superfluous:
Allow not nature more than nature needs, [art a lady;
Man's life is cheap as beast's. Thou
If only to go warm were gorgeous,
Why, nature needs not what thou gorgeous wear'st,
Which scarcely keeps thee warm. But, for true need,—
You heavens, give me that patience, patience I need! [man,
You see me here, you gods, a poor old
As full of grief as age; wretched in both! [hearts
If it be you that stir these daughters'
Against their father, fool me not so much [noble anger,
To bear it tamely; touch me with
And let not women's weapons, water-drops, [unnatural hags,
Stain my man's cheeks!—No, you
I will have such revenges on you both
That all the world shall—I will do such things,— [they shall be
What they are, yet I know not; but
The terrors of the earth. You think I'll weep;
No, I'll not weep!— [heart
I have full cause of weeping; but this Shall break into a hundred thousand flaws, [mad!
Or ere I'll weep:—O fool, I shall go

[Exeunt LEAR, GLOUCESTER, KENT, and Fool.

Corn. Let us withdraw; 'twill be a storm.

[Storm heard at a distance.

Reg. This house is little: the old man and his people
Cannot be well bestow'd.

Gon. 'Tis his own blame; hath put himself from rest,
And must needs taste his folly.

Reg. For his particular, I'll receive him gladly,
But not one follower.

Gon. So am I purposed.
Where is my Lord of Gloucester?

Corn. Follow'd the old man forth: he is return'd.

Re-enter GLOUCESTER.

Glou. The king is in high rage.

Corn. Whither is he going?

Glou. He calls to horse; but will I know not whither.

Corn. 'Tis best to give him way; he leads himself.

Gon. My lord, entreat him by no means to stay.

Glou. Alack, the night comes on, and the bleak winds
Do sorely ruffle; for many miles about
There 's scarce a bush.

Reg. O, sir, to wilful men,
The injuries that they themselves procure [your doors:
Must be their schoolmasters. Shut up
He is attended with a desperate train;
And what they may incense him to, being apt [fear.
To have his ear abused, wisdom bids

Corn. Shut up your doors, my lord; 'tis a wild night:
My Regan counsels well: come out o' the storm. [Exeunt.

ACT III.

SCENE I.—A Heath.

A Storm, with Thunder and Lightning.

Enter KENT and a Gentleman, meeting.

Kent. Who's there, beside foul weather? [most unquietly.

Gent. One minded like the weather,

Kent. I know you. Where 's the king? [elements;

Gent. Contending with the fretful
Bids the wind blow the earth into the sea, [main,
Or swell the curled waters 'bove the
That things might change or cease; tears his white hair,
Which the impetuous blasts, with eyeless rage, [of;
Catch in their fury, and make nothing
Strives in his little world of man to outscorn [rain.
The to-and-fro-conflicting wind and
This night, wherein the cub-drawn bear would couch,
The lion and the belly-pinched wolf
Keep their fur dry, unbonneted he runs,
And bids what will take all.

Kent. But who is with him?

Gent. None but the fool; who labours to out-jest
His heart-struck injuries.

Kent. Sir, I do know you;
And dare, upon the warrant of my note,
Commend a dear thing to you. There is division, [cover'd
Although as yet the face of it be
With mutual cunning, 'twixt Albany and Cornwall; [great stars
Who have—as who have not, that their
Throned and set high?—servants, who seem no less, [speculations
Which are to France the spies and Intelligent of our state; what hath been seen, [dukes,
Either in snuffs and packings of the
Or the hard rein which both of them have borne [thing deeper,
Against the old kind king; or some-
Whereof perchance these are but furnishings; [comes a power
But, true it is, from France there
Into this scatter'd kingdom; who already,
Wise in our negligence, have secret feet
In some of our best ports, and are at point [you:
To show their open banner. Now to
If on my credit you dare build so far
To make your speed to Dover, you shall find [report
Some that will thank you, making just
Of how unnatural and bemadding sorrow
The king hath cause to plain.
I am a gentleman of blood and breeding, [ance offer
And from some knowledge and assur-

This office to you.
Gent. I will talk further with you.
Kent. No, do not.
For confirmation that I am much more
Than my out-wall, open this purse, and take [Cordelia,—
What it contains. If you shall see
As fear not but you shall,—show her this ring; [is
And she will tell you who your fellow
That yet you do not know. Fie on this storm!
I will go seek the king.
Gent. Give me your hand: have you no more to say?
Kent. Few words, but, to effect, more than all yet;
That, when we have found the king,—in which your pain
That way, I'll this,—he that first lights on him
Holla the other. [Exeunt severally.

SCENE II.—Another Part of the Heath. Storm still.

Enter LEAR and Fool.

Lear. Blow, wind, and crack your cheeks! rage! blow!
You cataracts and hurricanoes, spout
Till you have drench'd our steeples, drown'd the cocks!
You sulphurous and thought-executing fires, [bolts,
Vaunt-couriers to oak-cleaving thunder-
Singe my white head! And thou, all-shaking thunder,
Strike flat the thick rotundity o' the world! [spill at once
Crack Nature's moulds, all germens
That make ingrateful man!
Fool. O nuncle, court holy-water in a dry house is better than this rain-water out o' door. Good nuncle, in, and ask thy daughters' blessing: here 's a night pities neither wise man nor fool.
Lear. Rumble thy bellyfull! Spit, fire! spout, rain!
Nor rain, wind, thunder, fire, are my daughters: [kindness;
I tax not you, you elements, with un-
I never gave you kingdom, call'd you children, [fall
You owe me no subscription: then let
Your horrible pleasure; here I stand, your slave, [man:
A poor, infirm, weak, and despised old
But yet I call you servile ministers,
That have with two pernicious daughters join'd [head
Your high-engender'd battles 'gainst a
So old and white as this. O! O! 'tis foul!
Fool. He that has a house to put 's head in has a good head-piece.
The cod-piece that will house
Before the head has any,
The head and he shall louse;
So beggars marry many.
The man that makes his toe
What he his heart should make,
Shall of a corn cry woe,
And turn his sleep to wake.
For there was never yet fair woman but she made mouths in a glass.
Lear. No, I will be the pattern of all patience;
I will say nothing.

Enter KENT.

Kent. Who 's there?
Fool. Marry, here's grace and a cod-piece; that 's a wise man and a fool.
Kent. Alas, sir, are you here? things that love night
Love not such nights as these; the wrathful skies
Gallow the very wanderers of the dark,
And make them keep their caves: since I was man,
Such sheets of fire, such bursts of horrid thunder, [I never
Such groans of roaring wind and rain,
Remember to have heard: man's nature cannot carry
The affliction nor the fear.
Lear. Let the great gods,
That keep this dreadful pother o'er our heads, [thou wretch,
Find out their enemies now. Tremble,
That hast within thee undivulged crimes, [bloody hand;
Unwhipp'd of justice: hide thee, thou
Thou perjured, and thou simular man of virtue [shake,
That art incestuous: caitiff, to pieces
That under covert and convenient seeming [pent-up guilts,
Hast practised on man's life: close
Rive your concealing continents, and cry [am a man
These dreadful summoners grace. I
More sinn'd against than sinning.
Kent. Alack, bare-headed!

Gracious my lord, hard by here is a hovel;
Some friendship will it lend you 'gainst the tempest;
Repose you there; while I to this hard house—
More harder than the stones whereof 'tis raised;
Which even but now, demanding after you,
Denied me to come in—return, and force
Their scanted courtesy.

Lear. My wits begin to turn.
Come on, my boy: how dost, my boy? art cold?
I am cold myself.—Where is this straw, my fellow?
The art of our necessities is strange,
That can make vile things precious.
Come, your hovel.
Poor fool and knave, I have one part in my heart
That 's sorry yet for thee.

Fool. [Singing.]

'He that has and a little tiny wit,—
With hey, ho, the wind and the rain,—
Must make content with his fortunes fit,
For the rain it raineth every day.'

Lear. True, my good boy.—Come, bring us to this hovel.

[Exeunt LEAR and KENT.

Fool. This is a brave night to cool a courtezan. I'll speak a prophecy ere I go:

When priests are more in word than matter;
When brewers mar their malt with water;
When nobles are their tailors' tutors;
No heretics burn'd, but wenches' suitors;
When every case in law is right;
No squire in debt, nor no poor knight;
When slanders do not live in tongues,
Nor cutpurses come not to throngs;
When usurers tell their gold i' the field,
And bawds and whores do churches build;
Then shall the realm of Albion
Come to great confusion:
Then comes the time, who lives to see 't,
That going shall be used with feet.
This prophecy Merlin shall make; for I live before his time. [Exit.

SCENE III.—GLOUCESTER'S Castle.

Enter GLOUCESTER and EDMUND.

Glou. Alack, alack, Edmund, I like not this unnatural dealing. When I desired their leave that I might pity him, they took from me the use of mine own house; charged me, on pain of their perpetual displeasure, neither to speak of him, entreat for him, nor any way sustain him.

Edm. Most savage and unnatural!

Glou. Go to; say you nothing. There is division between the dukes; and a worse matter than that: I have received a letter this night;—'tis dangerous to be spoken;—I have locked the letter in my closet: these injuries the king now bears will be revenged home; there is part of a power already footed: we must incline to the king. I will seek him and privily relieve him: go you, and maintain talk with the duke, that my charity be not of him perceived: if he ask for me, I am ill, and gone to bed. Though I die for it, as no less is threatened me, the king my old master must be relieved. There is some strange thing toward, Edmund; pray you, be careful. [Exit.

Edm. This courtesy, forbid thee, shall the duke
Instantly know; and of that letter too:
This seems a fair deserving, and must draw me
That which my father loses; no less than all:
The younger rises when the old doth fall. [Exit.

SCENE IV.—The Heath. Before a Hovel.

Enter LEAR, KENT, and Fool.

Kent. Here is the place, my lord; good my lord, enter:
The tyranny of the open night 's too rough
For nature to endure. [Storm still.

Lear. Let me alone.

Kent. Good my lord, enter here.

Lear. Wilt break my heart?

Kent. I'd rather break mine own. Good my lord, enter.

Lear. Thou think'st 'tis much that this contentious storm
Invades us to the skin: so 'tis to thee;
But where the greater malady is fix'd,
The lesser is scarce felt. Thou'dst shun a bear;
But if thy flight lay toward the raging sea,
Thou'dst meet the bear i' the mouth. When the mind's free

The body 's delicate: the tempest in my mind [else
Doth from my senses take all feeling
Save what beats there.—Filial ingratitude! [this hand
Is it not as this mouth should tear
For lifting food to 't?—But I will punish home,— [a night
No, I will weep no more.—In such
To shut me out!—Pour on; I will endure. [Goneril!
In such a night as this! O Regan,
Your old kind father, whose frank heart gave you all,—
O, that way madness lies; let me shun that;
No more of that.

Kent. Good my lord, enter here.

Lear. Prithee, go in thyself; seek thine own ease: [ponder
This tempest will not give me leave to
On things would hurt me more.—But I'll go in.
[To the Fool] In, boy; go first.—You houseless poverty,— Nay, get thee in. I'll pray, and then I'll sleep. [Fool goes in.
Poor naked wretches, wheresoe'er you are, [storm,
That bide the pelting of this pitiless
How shall your houseless heads and unfed sides, [defend you
Your loop'd and window'd raggedness,
From seasons such as these? O, I have ta'en [pomp;
Too little care of this! Take physic,
Expose thyself to feel what wretches feel, [to them,
That thou mayst shake the superflux
And show the heavens more just.

Edg. [Within.] Fathom and half, fathom and half! Poor Tom!

[The Fool runs out from the Hovel.

Fool. Come not in here, nuncle, here's a spirit. Help me, help me!

Kent. Give me thy hand. Who 's there?

Fool. A spirit, a spirit: he says his name 's poor Tom.

Kent. What art thou that dost grumble there i' the straw? Come forth.

Enter EDGAR, disguised as a Madman.

Edg. Away! the foul fiend follows me! 'Through the sharp hawthorn blows the cold wind.'
Hum! go to thy cold bed and warm thee.

Lear. Hast thou given all to thy two daughters? And art thou come to this?

Edg. Who gives any thing to poor Tom? whom the foul fiend hath led through fire and through flame, through ford and whirlipool, o'er bog and quagmire; that hath laid knives under his pillow, and halters in his pew; set ratsbane by his porridge; made him proud of heart, to ride on a bay trotting-horse over four-inched bridges, to course his own shadow for a traitor. Bless thy five wits! Tom's a-cold,—O, do de, do de, do de. Bless thee from whirlwinds, star-blasting, and taking! Do poor Tom some charity, whom the foul fiend vexes. There could I have him now,—and there,—and there,—and there again, and there. [Storm still.

Lear. What, have his daughters brought him to this pass?—
Couldst thou save nothing? Didst thou give them all?

Fool. Nay, he reserved a blanket, else we had been all shamed.

Lear. Now, all the plagues that in the pendulous air
Hang fated o'er men's faults light on thy daughters!

Kent. He hath no daughters, sir.

Lear. Death, traitor! nothing could have subdued nature
To such a lowness but his unkind daughters.
Is it the fashion that discarded fathers
Should have thus little mercy on their flesh? [begot
Judicious punishment! 'twas this flesh
Those pelican daughters.

Edg. Pillicock sat on Pillicock-hill;—Hallo, halloo, loo, loo!

Fool. This cold night will turn us all to fools and madmen.

Edg. Take heed o' the foul fiend: obey thy parents; keep thy word justly; swear not; commit not with man's sworn spouse; set not thy sweet heart on proud array. Tom's a-cold.

Lear. What hast thou been?

Edg. A serving-man, proud in heart and mind; that curled my hair; wore gloves in my cap; served the lust of my mistress' heart, and did the act of darkness with her; swore as many oaths as I spake words, and broke them in the sweet face of heaven: one that slept in the contriving of lust, and waked to do it. Wine loved I deeply, dice dearly, and in woman out-paramoured the Turk: false of heart, light of ear, bloody of hand; hog in sloth, fox in stealth, wolf in greediness, dog in madness, lion in prey. Let not the creaking of shoes nor the rustling of silks betray thy poor heart to woman: keep thy foot out of brothels, thy hand out of plackets, thy pen from lenders' books, and defy the foul fiend.

'Still through the hawthorn blows the cold wind:
Says suum, mun, ha no nonny.'

Dolphin my boy, my boy, sessa! let him trot by. [Storm still.

Lear. Why, thou were better in thy grave than to answer with thy uncovered body this extremity of the skies. Is man no more than this? Consider him well. Thou owest the worm no silk, the beast no hide, the sheep no wool, the cat no perfume. Ha! here 's three on 's are sophisticated. Thou art the thing itself: unaccommodated man is no more but such a poor, bare, forked animal as thou art. Off, off, you lendings! Come, unbutton here.

Fool. Prithee, nuncle, be contented; 'tis a naughty night to swim in. Now a little fire in a wild field were like an old lecher's heart; a small spark, all the rest on 's body cold. Look, here comes a walking fire.

Enter GLOUCESTER, with a torch.

Edg. This is the foul fiend Flibbertigibbet: he begins at curfew, and walks till the first cock; he gives the web and the pin, squints the eye, and makes the hare-lip; mildews the white wheat, and hurts the poor creature of earth.

'Saint Withold footed thrice the wold;
He met the night-mare, and her nine-fold;
Bid her alight,
And her troth plight,
And aroint thee, witch, aroint thee!'

Kent. How fares your grace?

Lear. What 's he? [seek?

Kent. Who 's there? What is 't you

Glou. What are you there? Your names?

Edg. Poor Tom; that eats the swimming frog, the toad, the tadpole, the wall-newt, and the water; that in the fury of his heart, when the foul fiend rages, eats cow-dung for sallets; swallows the old rat and the ditch-dog; drinks the green mantle of the standing pool; who is whipped from tithing to tithing, and stocked, punished, and imprisoned; who hath had three suits to his back, six shirts to his body, horse to ride, and weapon to wear,—

'But mice and rats and such small deer
Have been Tom's food for seven long year.'

Beware my follower. Peace, Smulkin; peace, thou fiend!

Glou. What, hath your grace no better company?

Edg. The prince of darkness is a gentleman:
Modo he 's call'd, and Mahu.

Glou. Our flesh and blood, my lord, is grown so vile,
That it doth hate what gets it.

Edg. Poor Tom 's a-cold.

Glou. Go in with me: my duty cannot suffer [commands:
To obey in all your daughters' hard
Though their injunction be to bar my doors, [upon you,
And let this tyrannous night take hold
Yet have I ventured to come seek you out, [food is ready.
And bring you where both fire and

Lear. First let me talk with this philosopher.
What is the cause of thunder?

Kent. Good my lord, take his offer; go into the house.

Lear. I'll talk a word with this same learned Theban.
What is your study?

Edg. How to prevent the fiend, and to kill vermin. [private.

Lear. Let me ask you one word in Kent. Importune him once more to go, my lord;

His wits begin to unsettle.

Glou. Canst thou blame him? [Storm still.
His daughters seek his death: ah, that good Kent! [man!
He said it would be thus, poor banish'd

Thou say'st the king grows mad; I'll tell thee, friend,
I am almost mad myself: I had a son,
Now outlaw'd from my blood; he sought my life, [friend;
But lately, very late: I loved him,
No father his son dearer: true to tell thee, [a night 's this!
The grief hath crazed my wits. What I do beseech your grace,—

Lear. O, cry you mercy, sir.
Noble philosopher, your company.

Edg. Tom 's a-cold.

Glou. In, fellow, there, into the hovel: keep thee warm.

Lear. Come, let 's in all.

Kent. This way, my lord.

Lear. With him;
I will keep still with my philosopher.

Kent. Good my lord, soothe him; let him take the fellow.

Glou. Take him you on. [with us.

Kent. Sirrah, come on; go along

Lear. Come, good Athenian.

Glou. No words, no words: hush.

Edg. 'Child Rowland to the dark tower came, [fum,
His word was still "Fie, foh, and I smell the blood of a British man."' [Exeunt.

SCENE V.—GLOUCESTER'S Castle.

Enter CORNWALL and EDMUND.

Corn. I will have my revenge ere I depart his house.

Edm. How, my lord, I may be censured, that nature thus gives way to loyalty, something fears me to think of.

Corn. I now perceive it was not altogether your brother's evil disposition made him seek his death; but a provoking merit, set a-work by a reproveable badness in himself.

Edm. How malicious is my fortune, that I must repent to be just! This is the letter he spoke of, which approves him an intelligent party to the advantages of France. O heavens! that this treason were not, or not I the detector!

Corn. Go with me to the duchess.

Edm. If the matter of this paper be certain, you have mighty business in hand.

Corn. True or false, it hath made thee Earl of Gloucester. Seek out where thy father is, that he may be ready for our apprehension.

Edm. [Aside.] If I find him comforting the king, it will stuff his suspicion more fully. [Aloud] I will persevere in my course of loyalty, though the conflict be sore between that and my blood.

Corn. I will lay trust upon thee; and thou shalt find a dearer father in my love. [Exeunt.

SCENE VI.—A Chamber in a Farmhouse, adjoining the Castle.

Enter GLOUCESTER, LEAR, KENT, Fool, and EDGAR.

Glou. Here is better than the open air; take it thankfully. I will piece out the comfort with what addition I can: I will not be long from you.

Kent. All the power of his wits have given way to his impatience.—The gods reward your kindness!

[Exit GLOUCESTER.

Edg. Fraterétto calls me, and tells me Nero is an angler in the lake of darkness. Pray, innocent, and beware the foul fiend.

Fool. Prithee, nuncle, tell me whether a madman be a gentleman or a yeoman?

Lear. A king, a king!

Fool. No; he 's a yeoman that has a gentleman to his son; for he 's a mad yeoman that sees his son a gentleman before him. [burning spits

Lear. To have a thousand with red Come hissing in upon 'em,—

Edg. The foul fiend bites my back.

Fool. He 's mad that trusts in the tameness of a wolf, a horse's health a boy's love, or a whore's oath.

Lear. It shall be done; I will arraign them straight.

[To EDGAR] Come, sit thou here, most learned justicer;

[To the Fool] Thou, sapient sir, sit here.—Now, you she foxes!

Edg. Look, where he stands and glares!—Wantest thou eyes at trial, madam?

Fool. 'Come o'er the bourn, Bessy, to me,'—
'Her boat hath a leak,
And she must not speak [thee.'
Why she dares not come over to

Edg. The foul fiend haunts poor Tom in the voice of a nightingale. Hopdance cries in Tom's belly for two white herring. Croak not, black angel; I have no food for thee.

Kent. How do you, sir? Stand you not so amazed: [cushions?
Will you lie down and rest upon the Lear. I'll see their trial first. Bring in the evidence.

[To EDGAR] Thou robed man of justice, take thy place;

[To the Fool] And thou, his yoke-fellow of equity,
Bench by his side. [To KENT] You are o' the commission,
Sit you too.

Edg. Let us deal justly.

'Sleepest or wakest thou, jolly shepherd?
Thy sheep be in the corn;
And for one blast of thy minikin mouth,
Thy sheep shall take no harm.'

Pur! the cat is grey.

Lear. Arraign her first; 'tis Goneril. I here take my oath before this honourable assembly, she kicked the poor king her father.

Fool. Come hither, mistress. Is your name Goneril?

Lear. She cannot deny it.

Fool. Cry you mercy, I took you for a joint-stool.

Lear. And here's another, whose warp'd looks proclaim [ture!
What store her heart is made on.—Stop her there!
Arms, arms, sword, fire!—Corruption in the place! ['scape?
False justicer, why hast thou let her

Edg. Bless thy five wits!

Kent. O pity!—Sir, where is the patience now,
That you so oft have boasted to retain?

Edg. [Aside.] My tears begin to take his part so much,
They'll mar my counterfeiting.

Lear. The little dogs and all,
Tray, Blanch, and Sweet-heart, see, they bark at me.

Edg. Tom will throw his head at them. Avaunt, you curs!
Be thy mouth or black or white,
Tooth that poisons if it bite;
Mastiff, greyhound, mongrel grim,
Hound or spaniel, brach or lym,
Or bobtail tike or trundle-tail,
Tom will make them weep and wail:
For, with throwing thus my head,
Dogs leap the hatch, and all are fled.
Do de, de, de. Sessa! Come, march to wakes and fairs and market-towns.
Poor Tom, thy horn is dry.

Lear. Then let them anatomize Regan; see what breeds about her heart. Is there any cause in nature that makes these hard hearts? [To EDGAR] You, sir, I entertain for one of my hundred; only I do not like the fashion of your garments: you will say they are Persian attire; but let them be changed.

Kent. Now, good my lord, lie here and rest awhile.

Lear. Make no noise, make no noise; draw the curtains: so, so, so. We'll go to supper i' the morning. So, so, so.

Fool. And I'll go to bed at noon.

Re-enter GLOUCESTER.

Glou. Come hither, friend: where is the king my master?

Kent. Here, sir; but trouble him not; his wits are gone.

Glou. Good friend, I prithee, take him in thy arms; [him:
I have o'erheard a plot of death upon
There is a litter ready; lay him in 't,
And drive towards Dover, friend, where thou shalt meet
Both welcome and protection. Take up thy master: [life,
If thou shouldst dally half an hour, his
With thine and all that offer to defend him, [up;
Stand in assured loss. Take up, take
And follow me, that will to some provision
Give thee quick conduct.

Kent. Oppress'd nature sleeps:—
This rest might yet have balm'd thy broken senses,
Which, if convenience will not allow,
Stand in hard cure. [To the Fool] Come, help to bear thy master;
Thou must not stay behind.

Glou. Come, come, away.

[Exeunt all but EDGAR.

Edg. When we our betters see bearing our woes, [foes.
We scarcely think our miseries our
Who alone suffers most i' the mind, [behind;
Leaving free things and happy shows

But then the mind much sufferance doth o'erskip, [fellowship.
When grief hath mates, and bearing
How light and portable my pain seems now, [makes the king bow;
When that which makes me bend
He childed as I father'd! Tom, away!
Mark the high noises, and thyself bewray,
When false opinion, whose wrong thought defiles thee,
In thy just proof repeals and reconciles thee. ['scape the king!
What will hap more to-night, safe
Lurk, lurk. [Exit.

SCENE VII.—GLOUCESTER'S Castle.

Enter CORNWALL, REGAN, GONERIL, EDMUND, and Servants.

Corn. [To GONERIL.] Post speedily to my lord your husband; show him this letter: the army of France is landed. Seek out the traitor Gloucester. [Exeunt some of the Servants.

Reg. Hang him instantly.

Gon. Pluck out his eyes.

Corn. Leave him to my displeasure. Edmund, keep you our sister company: the revenges we are bound to take upon your traitorous father are not fit for your beholding. Advise the duke, where you are going, to a most festinate preparation: we are bound to the like. Our posts shall be swift and intelligent betwixt us. Farewell, dear sister; farewell, my Lord of Gloucester.

Enter OSWALD.

How now! where 's the king?

Osw. My Lord of Gloucester hath convey'd him hence:
Some five or six and thirty of his knights, [gate;
Hot questrists after him, met him at
Who, with some other of the lords dependants, [where they boast
Are gone with him towards Dover;
To have well-armed friends.

Corn. Get horses for your mistress.

Gon. Farewell, sweet lord, and sister.

Corn. Edmund, farewell.

[Exeunt GONERIL, EDMUND, and OSWALD.

Go seek the traitor Gloucester,
Pinion him like a thief, bring him before us.

[Exeunt other Servants.

Though well we may not pass upon his life [power
Without the form of justice, yet our
Shall do a courtesy to our wrath, which men [there? the traitor?
May blame but not control. Who 's

Re-enter Servants, with GLOUCESTER.

Reg. Ingrateful fox! 'tis he.

Corn. Bind fast his corky arms.

Glou. What mean your graces? Good my friends, consider
You are my guests: do me no foul play, friends.

Corn. Bind him, I say.

[Servants bind him.

Reg. Hard, hard.—O filthy traitor!

Glou. Unmerciful lady as you are, I'm none.

Corn. To this chair bind him.—Villain, thou shalt find—

[REGAN plucks his beard.

Glou. By the kind gods, 'tis most ignobly done
To pluck me by the beard.

Reg. So white, and such a traitor!

Glou. Naughty lady,
These hairs, which thou dost ravish from my chin, [your host:
Will quicken, and accuse thee: I am
With robbers' hands my hospitable favours [will you do?
You should not ruffle thus. What

Corn. Come, sir, what letters had you late from France?

Reg. Be simple-answer'd, for we know the truth.

Corn. And what confederacy have you with the traitors
Late footed in the kingdom?

Reg. To whose hands have you sent the lunatic king?
Speak. [down,

Glou. I have a letter guessingly set
Which came from one that 's of a neutral heart,
And not from one opposed.

Corn. Cunning.

Reg. And false.

Corn. Where hast thou sent the king?

Glou. To Dover.

Reg. Wherefore to Dover? Wast thou not charged at peril—

Corn. Wherefore to Dover? Let him first answer that.

Glou. I am tied to the stake, and I must stand the course.

Reg. Wherefore to Dover ?
Glou. Because I would not see thy cruel nails [fierce sister
Pluck out his poor old eyes ; nor thy
In his anointed flesh stick boarish fangs.
The sea, with such a storm as his bare head [have buoy'd up,
In hell-black night endured, would
And quench'd the stelled fires ;
Yet, poor old heart, he holp the heavens to rain. [stern time,
If wolves had at thy gate howl'd that Thou shouldst have said ' Good porter, turn the key,' [see
All cruels else subscribed :—but I shall
The winged vengeance overtake such children.
Corn. See 't shalt thou never.—Fellows, hold the chair :—
Upon these eyes of thine I'll set my foot.
[GLOUCESTER is held down in his chair, while CORNWALL plucks out one of his eyes, and sets his foot on it.
Glou. He that will think to live till he be old, [gods !
Give me some help ! O cruel ! O ye
Reg. One side will mock another ; the other too.
Corn. If you see vengeance—
First Serv. Hold your hand, my lord : [child ;
I have served you ever since I was a
But better service have I never done you
Than now to bid you hold.
Reg. How now, you dog !
First Serv. If you did wear a beard upon your chin, [you mean ?
I'd shake it on this quarrel. What do
Corn. My villain !
[Draws and runs at him.
First Serv. Nay, then, come on, and take the chance of anger.
[Draws. They fight.
Reg. [To another Servant.] Give me thy sword.—A peasant stand up thus !
[Snatches a sword, comes behind, and stabs him.
First Serv. O, I am slain !—My lord, you have one eye left
To see some mischief on him. O ! [Dies.
Corn. Lest it see more, prevent it. [Tearing out GLOUCESTER'S other eye.] Out, vile jelly !
Where is thy lustre now ?
Glou. All dark and comfortless.—Where 's my son Edmund ?
Edmund, enkindle all the sparks of nature,
To quit this horrid act.
Reg. Out, treacherous villain !
Thou call'st on him that hates thee : it was he [sons to us ;
That made the overture of thy trea-
Who is too good to pity thee.
Glou. O my follies ! then Edgar was abused. [prosper him !
Kind gods, forgive me that, and
Reg. Go thrust him out at gates, and let him smell
His way to Dover.
[Exit one with GLOUCESTER.
[To CORNWALL] How is't, my lord ? how look you ?
Corn. I have received a hurt : follow me, lady. [this slave
Turn out that eyeless villain : throw
Upon the dunghill. Regan, I bleed apace : [your arm.
Untimely comes this hurt : give me
[Exit CORNWALL, led by REGAN.
Sec. Serv. I'll never care what wickedness I do,
If this man come to good.
Third Serv. If she live long,
And in the end meet the old course of death,
Women will all turn monsters.
Sec. Serv. Let 's follow the old earl, and get the Bedlam
To lead him where he would : his roguish madness
Allows itself to any thing.
Third Serv. Go thou : I'll fetch some flax and whites of eggs
To apply to his bleeding face. Now, heaven help him !
[Exeunt severally.

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—The Heath.

Enter EDGAR.

Edg. Yet better thus, and known to be contemn'd, [be worst,
Than still contemn'd and flatter'd. To
The lowest and most dejected thing of Fortune, [fear :
Stands still in esperance, lives not in
The lamentable change is from the best ;

The worst returns to laughter. Welcome then,
Thou unsubstantial air that I embrace!
The wretch that thou hast blown unto the worst Owes nothing to thy blasts. But who

Enter GLOUCESTER, led by an Old Man.

My father, poorly led? World, world, O world!
But that thy strange mutations make us hate thee,
Life would not yield to age.

Old Man. O my good lord, I have been your tenant, and your father's tenant, these fourscore years.

Glou. Away, get thee away; good friend, be gone:
Thy comforts can do me no good at all;
Thee they may hurt.

Old Man. Alack, sir, you cannot see your way.

Glou. I have no way, and therefore want no eyes;
I stumbled when I saw: full oft 'tis seen,
Our means secure us, and our mere defects
Our commodities. Ah dear son Edgar,
The food of thy abused father's wrath!
Might I but live to see thee in my touch,
I'd say I had eyes again!

Old Man. How now! Who 's there?

Edg. [Aside.] O gods! Who is 't can say 'I am at the worst'?
I am worse than e'er I was.

Old Man. 'Tis poor mad Tom.

Edg. [Aside.] And worse I may be yet: the worst is not
So long as we can say 'This is the worst.'

Old Man. Fellow, where goest?

Glou. Is it a beggar-man?

Old Man. Madman and beggar too.

Glou. He has some reason, else he could not beg.
I' the last night's storm I such a fellow saw;
Which made me think a man a worm: my son
Came then into my mind; and yet my mind
Was then scarce friends with him: I have heard more since.
As flies to wanton boys, are we to the gods;
They kill us for their sport.

Edg. [Aside.] How should this be?
Bad is the trade must play the fool to sorrow,
Angering itself and others. [Aloud] Bless thee, master!

Glou. Is that the naked fellow?

Old Man. Ay, my lord.

Glou. Then, prithee, get thee gone: if, for my sake,
Thou wilt o'ertake us, hence a mile or twain,
I' the way toward Dover, do it for ancient love;
And bring some covering for this naked soul,
Who I'll entreat to lead me.

Old Man. Alack, sir, he is mad.

Glou. 'Tis the times' plague, when madmen lead the blind.
Do as I bid thee, or rather do thy pleasure;
Above the rest, be gone.

Old Man. I'll bring him the best 'parel that I have,
Come on 't what will. [Exit.

Glou. Sirrah, naked fellow,—

Edg. Poor Tom 's a-cold. [Aside] I cannot daub it further.

Glou. Come hither, fellow.

Edg. [Aside.] And yet I must.—Bless thy sweet eyes, they bleed.

Glou. Know'st thou the way to Dover?

Edg. Both stile and gate, horse-way and footpath. Poor Tom hath been scared out of his good wits. Bless thee, good man's son, from the foul fiend! Five fiends have been in poor Tom at once; of lust, as Obidicut; Hobbididance, Prince of dumbness; Mahu, of stealing; Modo, of murder; and Flibbertigibbet, of mopping and mowing; who since possesses chambermaids and waiting-women. So, bless thee, master!

Glou. Here, take this purse, thou whom the heavens' plagues
Have humbled to all strokes: that I am wretched
Makes thee the happier. Heavens, deal so still!
Let the superfluous and lust-dieted man,
That slaves your ordinance, that will not see
Because he doth not feel, feel your power quickly;
So distribution should undo excess,
And each man have enough. Dost thou know Dover?

Edg. Ay, master.

Glou. There is a cliff whose high and bending head
Looks fearfully in the confined deep:
Bring me but to the very brim of it,
And I'll repair the misery thou dost bear
With something rich about me: from that place

I shall no leading need.
Edg. Give me thy arm:
Poor Tom shall lead thee. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—Before the DUKE OF ALBANY'S Palace.

Enter GONERIL and EDMUND.

Gon. Welcome, my lord: I marvel our mild husband
Not met us on the way.

Enter OSWALD.

Now, where 's your master?
Osw. Madam, within; but never man so changed. [landed;
I told him of the army that was
He smiled at it: I told him you were coming;
His answer was 'The worse:' of Gloucester's treachery,
And of the loyal service of his son,
When I inform'd him, then he call'd me sot, [side out:
And told me I had turn'd the wrong
What most he should dislike seems pleasant to him;
What like, offensive.
Gon. [To EDMUND.] Then shall you go no further.
It is the cowish terror of his spirit,
That dares not undertake: he'll not feel wrongs
Which tie him to an answer. Our wishes on the way
May prove effects. Back, Edmund, to my brother; [powers:
Hasten his musters and conduct his
I must change arms at home, and give the distaff [servant
Into my husband's hands. This trusty
Shall pass between us: ere long you are like to hear, [half,
If you dare venture in your own be-
A mistress's command. Wear this; spare speech; [Giving a favour.
Decline your head: this kiss, if it durst speak, [air;
Would stretch thy spirits up into the
Conceive, and fare thee well.
Edm. Yours in the ranks of death.
Gon. My most dear Gloucester! [Exit EDMUND.
O, the difference of man and man!
To thee a woman's services are due:
My fool usurps my body.
Osw. Madam, here comes my lord. [Exit.

Enter ALBANY.

Gon. I have been worth the whistle.
Alb. O Goneril!
You are not worth the dust which the rude wind [position:
Blows in your face. I fear your dis-
That nature which contemns its origin
Cannot be border'd certain in itself;
She that herself will sliver and disbranch [wither
From her material sap, perforce must
And come to deadly use.
Gon. No more; the text is foolish.
Alb. Wisdom and goodness to the vile seem vile:
Filths savour but themselves. What have you done?
Tigers, not daughters, what have you perform'd?
A father, and a gracious aged man,
Whose reverence even the head-lugg'd bear would lick,
Most barbarous, most degenerate! have you madded.
Could my good brother suffer you to do it?
A man, a prince, by him so benefited!
If that the heavens do not their visible spirits [offences,
Send quickly down to tame these vile
Twill come,
Humanity must perforce prey on itself,
Like monsters of the deep.
Gon. Milk-liver'd man!
That bear'st a cheek for blows, a head for wrongs; [discerning
Who hast not in thy brows an eye
Thine honour from thy suffering; that not know'st [punish'd
Fools do those villains pity who are Ere they have done their mischief. Where 's thy drum?
France spreads his banners in our noiseless land; [threat,
With plumed helm thy state begins to Whiles thou, a moral fool, sit'st still, and criest
'Alack, why does he so?'
Alb. See thyself, devil!
Proper deformity seems not in the fiend
So horrid as in woman.
Gon. O vain fool!
Alb. Thou changed and self-cover'd thing, for shame,

Be-monster not thy feature. Were 't my fitness
To let these hands obey my blood,
They are apt enough to dislocate and tear [a fiend,
Thy flesh and bones: howe'er thou art
A woman's shape doth shield thee.
Gon. Marry, your manhood now—

Enter a Messenger.

Alb. What news?
Mess. O, my good lord, the Duke of Cornwall 's dead;
Slain by his servant, going to put out
The other eye of Gloucester.
Alb. Gloucester's eyes!
Mess. A servant that he bred, thrill'd with remorse, [sword Opposed against the act, bending his
To his great master; who, thereat enraged, [fell'd him dead;
Flew on him, and amongst them
But not without that harmful stroke which since Hath pluck'd him after.
Alb. This shows you are above,
You justicers, that these our nether crimes [Gloucester!
So speedily can venge! But, O poor
Lost he his other eye?
Mess. Both, both, my lord.—
This letter, madam, craves a speedy answer;
'Tis from your sister. [well?
Gon. [Aside.] One way I like this
But being widow, and my Gloucester with her, [pluck
May all the building in my fancy
Upon my hateful life: another way,
The news is not so tart.—I'll read, and answer. [Exit.
Alb. Where was his son when they did take his eyes?
Mess. Come with my lady hither.
Alb. He is not here.
Mess. No, my good lord; I met him back again.
Alb. Knows he the wickedness?
Mess. Ay, my good lord; 'twas he inform'd against him;
And quit the house of purpose, that their punishment
Might have the freer course.
Alb. Gloucester, I live
To thank thee for the love thou show'dst the king, [hither, friend:
And to revenge thine eyes.—Come
Tell me what more thou knowest. [Exeunt.

SCENE III.—The French Camp near Dover.

Enter KENT, and a Gentleman.

Kent. Why the King of France is so suddenly gone back know you the reason?
Gent. Something he left imperfect in the state, which since his coming forth is thought of; which imports to the kingdom so much fear and danger, that his personal return was most required and necessary. [general?
Kent. Who hath he left behind him
Gent. The Mareschal of France, Monsieur le Fer.
Kent. Did your letters pierce the queen to any demonstration of grief?
Gent. Ay, sir; she took them, read them in my presence;
And now and then an ample tear trill'd down [a queen
Her delicate cheek: it seem'd she was Over her passion; who, most rebel-like,
Sought to be king o'er her.
Kent. O, then it moved her.
Gent. Not to a rage: patience and sorrow strove
Who should express her goodliest. You have seen
Sunshine and rain at once; her smiles and tears [happy smilets
Were like;—a better way. Those
That play'd on her ripe lip seem'd not to know [parted thence,
What guests were in her eyes; which
As pearls from diamonds dropp'd. In brief,
Sorrow would be a rarity most beloved,
If all could so become it. [tion?
Kent. Made she no verbal ques-
Gent. Faith, once or twice she heaved the name of 'father'
Pantingly forth, as if it press'd her heart; [ladies! sisters!
Cried 'Sisters! sisters! Shame of Kent! father! sisters! What! i' the storm? i' the night?
Let pity not be believed!' There she shook
The holy water from her heavenly eyes,
And clamour moisten'd: then away she started
To deal with grief alone.
Kent. It is the stars,

The stars above us, govern our conditions ; [not beget
Else one self mate and mate could Such different issues. You spoke not with her since ?

Gent. No. [turn'd ?

Kent. Was this before the king re-

Gent. No, since.

Kent. Well, sir, the poor distress'd Lear 's i' the town ;
Who sometime, in his better tune, remembers [means
What we are come about, and by no
Will yield to see his daughter.

Gent. Why, good sir ?

Kent. A sovereign shame so elbows him : his own unkindness,
That stripp'd her from his benediction, turn'd her [rights
To foreign casualties, gave her dear
To his dog-hearted daughters,—these things sting [shame
His mind so venomously, that burning
Detains him from Cordelia.

Gent. Alack, poor gentleman !

Kent. Of Albany's and Cornwall's powers you heard not ?

Gent. 'Tis so ; they are afoot.

Kent. Well, sir, I'll bring you to our master Lear, [dear cause
And leave you to attend him : some
Will in concealment wrap me up awhile ;
When I am known aright, you shall not grieve [you, go
Lending me this acquaintance. I pray
Along with me. [Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—The Same. A Tent.

Enter with Drum and Colours, CORDELIA, Physician, and Soldiers.

Cor. Alack, 'tis he : why, he was met even now [aloud ;
As mad as the vex'd sea ; singing
Crown'd with rank fumiter and furrow-weeds, [cuckoo-flowers,
With charlocks, hemlock, nettles,
Darnel, and all the idle weeds that grow
In our sustaining corn. A century send forth ; [field,
Search every acre in the high-grown
And bring him to our eye. [Exit an Officer.] What can man's wisdom
In the restoring his bereaved sense ?
He that helps him take all my outward worth.

Phy. There is means, madam :
Our foster-nurse of nature is repose,
The which he lacks ; that to provoke in him, [power
Are many simples operative, whose
Will close the eye of anguish.

Cor. All blest secrets,
All you unpublish'd virtues of the earth, [remediate
Spring with my tears ! be aidant and
In the good man's distress ! Seek, seek for him ; [the life
Lest his ungovern'd rage dissolve
That wants the means to lead it.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. News, madam ;
The British powers are marching hitherward.

Cor. 'Tis known before ; our preparation stands [father,
In expectation of them. O dear
It is thy business that I go about ;
Therefore great France [pitied.
My mourning and important tears hath
No blown ambition doth our arms incite, [father's right :
But love, dear love, and our aged
Soon may I hear and see him ! [Exeunt.

SCENE V.—GLOUCESTER'S Castle.

Enter REGAN and OSWALD.

Reg. But are my brother's powers set forth ?

Osw. Ay, madam.

Reg. Himself in person there ?

Osw. Madam, with much ado :
Your sister is the better soldier.

Reg. Lord Edmund spake not with your lord at home ?

Osw. No, madam.

Reg. What might import my sister's letter to him ?

Osw. I know not, lady.

Reg. Faith, he is posted hence on serious matter.
It was great ignorance, Gloucester's eyes being out, [moves
To let him live : where he arrives he
All hearts against us : Edmund, I think, is gone,
In pity of his misery, to dispatch
His nighted life ; moreover, to descry
The strength o' the enemy.

Osw. I must needs after him, madam, with my letter.

Reg. Our troops set forth to-morrow: stay with us;
The ways are dangerous.
Osw. I may not, madam:
My lady charged my duty in this business.
Reg. Why should she write to Edmund? Might not you
Transport her purposes by word? Belike, [thee much,
Something—I know not what: I'll love
Let me unseal the letter.
Osw. Madam, I had rather—
Reg. I know your lady does not love her husband; [ing here
I am sure of that: and at her late be-
She gave strange œillades and most speaking looks [her bosom.
To noble Edmund. I know you are of Osw. I, madam?
Reg. I speak in understanding: you are; I know 't: [note:
Therefore I do advise you, take this
My lord is dead; Edmund and I have talk'd; [hand
And more convenient is he for my
Than for your lady's:—you may gather more. [this;
If you do find him, pray you, give him
And when your mistress hears thus much from you, [her.
I pray, desire her call her wisdom to
So, fare you well. [traitor,
If you do chance to hear of that blind
Preferment falls on him that cuts him off.
Osw. Would I could meet him, madam! I would show
What party I do follow.
Reg. Fare thee well.
[Exeunt.

SCENE VI.—The Country near Dover.

Enter GLOUCESTER, and EDGAR dressed like a Peasant.

Glou. When shall we come to the top of that same hill?
Edg. You do climb up it now: look, how we labour.
Glou. Methinks the ground is even.
Edg. Horrible steep:
Hark! do you hear the sea?
Glou. No, truly.
Edg. Why, then your other senses grow imperfect
By your eyes' anguish.
Glou. So may it be, indeed:
Methinks thy voice is alter'd, and thou speak'st [didst.
In better phrase and matter than thou
Edg. You're much deceived; in nothing am I changed
But in my garments. [spoken.
Glou. Methinks you are better
Edg. Come on, sir; here 's the place: stand still. How fearful
And dizzy 'tis to cast one's eyes so low!
The crows and choughs that wing the midway air [way down
Show scarce so gross as beetles: half
Hangs one that gathers samphire, dreadful trade! [head:
Methinks he seems no bigger than his
The fishermen that walk upon the beach [choring bark Appear like mice; and yond tall an-
Diminish'd to her cock; her cock, a buoy [muring surge,
Almost too small for sight: the mur-
That on the unnumber'd idle pebbles chafes,
Cannot be heard so high:—I'll look no more, [sight
Lest my brain turn, and the deficient
Topple down headlong.
Glou. Set me where you stand.
Edg. Give me your hand: you are now within a foot
Of the extreme verge: for all beneath the moon
Would I not leap upright.
Glou. Let go my hand.
Here, friend, 's another purse; in it a jewel [fairies and gods
Well worth a poor man's taking:
Prosper it with thee! Go thou further off; [thee going.
Bid me farewell, and let me hear
Edg. Now fare you well, good sir.
Glou. With all my heart.
Edg. Why I do trifle thus with his despair
Is done to cure it. [gods!
Glou. [Kneeling.] O you mighty
This world I do renounce, and in your sights
Shake patiently my great affliction off:
If I could bear it longer, and not fall
To quarrel with your great opposeless wills, [should
My snuff and loathed part of nature
Burn itself out. If Edgar live, O, bless him!—

Now, fellow, fare thee well.
Edg. Gone, sir: farewell.
[GLOUCESTER falls forward.
And yet I know not how conceit may rob
The treasury of life, when life itself
Yields to the theft: had he been where he thought,
By this had thought been past.—Alive or dead?
Ho, you sir! friend!—Hear you, sir?—speak!
[revives.
Thus might he pass indeed: yet he
What are you, sir?
Glou. Away, and let me die.
Edg. Hadst thou been aught but gossamer, feathers, air,
So many fathom down precipitating,
Thou'dst shiver'd like an egg: but thou dost breathe;
Hast heavy substance; bleed'st not; speak'st; art sound!
[tude
Ten masts at each make not the alti-
Which thou hast perpendicularly fell:
Thy life 's a miracle. Speak yet again.
Glou. But have I fall'n, or no?
Edg. From the dread summit of this chalky bourn.
[so far
Look up a-height; the shrill-gorged lark
Cannot be seen or heard: do but look up.
Glou. Alack, I have no eyes.
Is wretchedness deprived that benefit,
To end itself by death? 'Twas yet some comfort,
[rage,
When misery could beguile the tyrant's
And frustrate his proud will.
Edg. Give me your arm:
Up:—so. How is 't? Feel you your legs? You stand.
Glou. Too well, too well.
Edg. This is above all strangeness.
Upon the crown o' the cliff, what thing was that
Which parted from you?
Glou. A poor unfortunate beggar.
Edg. As I stood here below, methought his eyes
Were two full moons; he had a thousand noses,
[ridged sea:
Horns whelk'd and waved like the en-
It was some fiend; therefore, thou happy father,
Think that the clearest gods, who make them honours
[thee.
Of men's impossibilities, have preserved

Glou. I do remember now: henceforth I'll bear
Affliction till it do cry out itself
'Enough, enough,' and die. That thing you speak of,
[say
I took it for a man; often 'twould
'The fiend, the fiend:' he led me to that place.
Edg. Bear free and patient thoughts. But who comes here?

Enter LEAR, fantastically dressed with wild flowers.

The safer sense will ne'er accommodate His master thus.
Lear. No, they cannot touch me for coining; I am the king himself.
Edg. O thou side-piercing sight!
Lear. Nature 's above art in that respect. There 's your press-money. That fellow handles his bow like a crow-keeper: draw me a clothier's yard.—Look, look, a mouse! Peace, peace; this piece of toasted cheese will do 't. There 's my gauntlet; I'll prove it on a giant.—Bring up the brown bills.—O, well flown, bird! i' the clout, i' the clout; hewgh!—Give the word.
Edg. Sweet marjoram.
Lear. Pass.
Glou. I know that voice.
Lear. Ha! Goneril, with a white beard!—They flattered me like a dog, and told me I had white hairs in my beard ere the black ones were there. To say 'ay' and 'no' to every thing I said! 'Ay' and 'no' too was no good divinity. When the rain came to wet me once, and the wind to make me chatter; when the thunder would not peace at my bidding; there I found 'em, there I smelt 'em out. Go to, they are not men o' their words: they told me I was every thing; 'tis a lie; I am not ague-proof.
Glou. The trick of that voice I do well remember:
Is 't not the king?
Lear. Ay, every inch a king:
When I do stare, see how the subject quakes.
[thy cause?
I pardon that man's life. What was Adultery? [No:
Thou shalt not die; die for adultery!
The wren goes to 't, and the small gilded fly
Does lecher in my sight.

Let copulation thrive; for Gloucester's bastard son [daughters
Was kinder to his father than my
Got 'tween the lawful sheets.
To 't, luxury, pell-mell! for I lack soldiers.
Behold yond simpering dame,
Whose face between her forks presages snow; [the head
That minces virtue, and does shake
To hear of pleasure's name;
The fitchew, nor the soiled horse, goes to 't
With a more riotous appetite.
Down from the waist they are Centaurs,
Though women all above:
But to the girdle do the gods inherit,
Beneath is all the fiends';
There 's hell, there 's darkness, there 's the sulphurous pit,
Burning, scalding, stench, consumption; fie, fie, fie! pah, pah! Give me an ounce of civet, good apothecary, to sweeten my imagination: there 's money for thee.

Glou. O, let me kiss that hand!

Lear. Let me wipe it first; it smells of mortality.

Glou. O ruin'd piece of nature! This great world
Shall so wear out to nought.—Dost thou know me?

Lear. I remember thine eyes well enough. Dost thou squiny at me? No, do thy worst, blind Cupid; I'll not love. Read thou this challenge; mark but the penning on 't.

Glou. Were all the letters suns, I could not see one.

Edg. I would not take this from report; it is,
And my heart breaks at it.

Lear. Read.

Glou. What, with the case of eyes?

Lear. O, ho, are you there with me? No eyes in your head, nor no money in your purse? Your eyes are in a heavy case, your purse in a light: yet you see how this world goes.

Glou. I see it feelingly.

Lear. What, art mad? A man may see how this world goes with no eyes. Look with thine ears: see how yond justice rails upon yond simple thief. Hark, in thine ear: change places; and, handy-dandy, which is the justice, which is the thief?—Thou hast seen a farmer's dog bark at a beggar?

Glou. Ay, sir.

Lear. And the creature run from the cur? There thou mightst behold the great image of authority: a dog's obeyed in office. [hand!
Thou rascal beadle, hold thy bloody
Why dost thou lash that whore? Strip thine own back; [kind
Thou hotly lust'st to use her in that
For which thou whipp'st her. The usurer hangs the cozener.
Through tatter'd clothes small vices do appear; [sin with gold,
Robes and furr'd gowns hide all. Plate
And the strong lance of justice hurtless breaks; [pierce it.
Arm it in rags, a pigmy's straw doth
None does offend, none, I say, none; I'll able 'em: [the power
Take that of me, my friend, who have
To seal the accuser's lips. Get thee glass eyes;
And, like a scurvy politician, seem
To see the things thou dost not. Now, now, now, now:
Pull off my boots; harder, harder; so.

Edg. O, matter and impertinency mix'd!
Reason in madness!

Lear. If thou wilt weep my fortunes, take my eyes.
I know thee well enough; thy name is Gloucester: [hither:
Thou must be patient; we came crying
Thou know'st, the first time that we smell the air,
We waul and cry. I will preach to thee: mark.

Glou. Alack, alack the day!

Lear. When we are born, we cry that we are come
To this great stage of fools.—This' a good block;
It were a delicate stratagem, to shoe
A troop of horse with felt: I'll put 't in proof; [in-law,
And when I have stol'n upon these sons-
Then kill, kill, kill, kill, kill, kill!

Enter a Gentleman, with Attendants.

Gent. O, here he is; lay hand upon him. Sir,
Your most dear daughter——

Lear. No rescue? What, a prisoner? I am even

The natural fool of Fortune. Use me well;
You shall have ransom. Let me have a surgeon;
I am cut to the brains.
Gent. You shall have any thing.
Lear. No seconds? all myself?
Why, this would make a man a man of salt,
To use his eyes for garden water-pots,
Ay, and laying autumn's dust.
Gent. Good sir,—
Lear. I will die bravely, like a bridegroom. What! [king,
I will be jovial: come, come; I am a
My masters, know you that?
Gent. You are a royal one, and we obey you.
Lear. Then there 's life in 't. Nay, an you get it, you shall get it by running. Sa, sa, sa, sa.
[Exit running; Attendants follow.
Gent. A sight most pitiful in the meanest wretch,
Past speaking of in a king! Thou hast one daughter, [curse
Who redeems Nature from the general
Which twain have brought her to.
Edg. Hail, gentle sir. [will?
Gent. Sir, speed you: what 's your
Edg. Do you hear aught, sir, of a battle toward?
Gent. Most sure and vulgar: every one hears that,
Which can distinguish sound.
Edg. But, by your favour,
How near 's the other army?
Gent. Near, and on speedy foot; the main descry
Stands on the hourly thought.
Edg. I thank you, sir: that 's all.
Gent. Though that the queen on special cause is here,
Her army is moved on.
Edg. I thank you, sir.
[Exit Gent.
Glou. You ever-gentle gods, take my breath from me; [again
Let not my worser spirit tempt me
To die before you please!
Edg. Well pray you, father.
Glou. Now, good sir, what are you?
Edg. A most poor man, made tame to Fortune's blows;
Who, by the art of known and feeling sorrows, [your hand,
Am pregnant to good pity. Give me
I'll lead you to some biding.
Glou. Hearty thanks:
The bounty and the benison of heaven
To boot, and boot!

Enter OSWALD.

Osw. A proclaim'd prize! Most happy! [framed flesh
That eyeless head of thine was first
To raise my fortunes. Thou old unhappy traitor, [is out
Briefly thyself remember: the sword
That must destroy thee.
Glou. Now let thy friendly hand
Put strength enough to it.
[EDGAR interposes.
Osw. Wherefore, bold peasant,
Darest thou support a publish'd traitor? Hence! [take Lest that the infection of his fortune
Like hold on thee. Let go his arm.
Edg. Chill not let go, zir, without vurther 'casion.
Osw. Let go, slave, or thou diest!
Edg. Good gentleman, go your gait, and let poor volk pass. An chud ha' bin zwaggered out of my life, 'twould not ha' bin zo long as 'tis by a vortnight. Nay, come not near th' old man; keep out, che vor ye, or I'se try whether your costard or my ballow be the harder: chill be plain with you.
Osw. Out, dunghill!
Edg. Chill pick your teeth, zir: come; no matter vor your foins.
[They fight, and EDGAR knocks him down.
Osw. Slave, thou hast slain me. Villain, take my purse;
If ever thou wilt thrive, bury my body;
And give the letters which thou find 'st about me [him out
To Edmund Earl of Gloucester; seek
Upon the British party.—O, untimely death! [Dies.
Edg. I know thee well: a serviceable villain;
As duteous to the vices of thy mistress
As badness would desire.
Glou. What, is he dead?
Edg. Sit you down, father; rest you.
Let 's see his pockets: these letters that he speaks of
May be my friends. He 's dead; I am only sorry [see:—
He had no other deathsman.—Let us

Leave, gentle wax; and, manners, blame us not:
To know our enemies' minds, we'd rip their hearts;
Their papers, is more lawful. [Reads.

'Let our reciprocal vows be remembered. You have many opportunities to cut him off: if your will want not, time and place will be fruitfully offered. There is nothing done, if he return the conqueror: then am I the prisoner, and his bed my gaol; from the loathed warmth whereof deliver me, and supply the place for your labour.

'Your—wife, so I would say—affectionate servant, GONERIL.'

O undistinguish'd space of woman's will! [life;
A plot upon her virtuous husband's
And the exchange my brother! Here, in the sands, [fied
Thee I'll rake up, the post unsancti-
Of murderous lechers; and, in the mature time, [the sight
With this ungracious paper strike
Of the death-practised duke: for him 'tis well [tell.
That of thy death and business I can

[Exit, dragging out the body.

Glou. The king is mad: how stiff is my vile sense, [feeling
That I stand up, and have ingenious
Of my huge sorrows! Better I were distract: [my griefs,
So should my thoughts be sever'd from
And woes by wrong imaginations lose
The knowledge of themselves.

[Drum afar off.

Re-enter EDGAR.

Edg. Give me your hand:
Far off, methinks, I hear the beaten drum:
Come, father, I'll bestow you with a friend. [Exeunt.

SCENE VII.—A Tent in the French Camp. LEAR on a bed asleep, soft music playing; Gentleman, and Others, attending.

Enter CORDELIA, KENT, and Physician.

Cor. O thou good Kent, how shall I live and work,
To match thy goodness? My life will be too short,
And every measure fail me.

Kent. To be acknowledged, madam, is o'erpaid. [truth;
All my reports go with the modest
Nor more nor clipp'd, but so.

Cor. Be better suited:
These weeds are memories of those worser hours:
I prithee, put them off.

Kent. Pardon me, dear madam;
Yet to be known shortens my made intent: [me not
My boon I make it, that you know.
Till time and I think meet.

Cor. Then be it so, my good lord. [To the Physician] How does the king?

Phys. Madam, sleeps still.

Cor. O you kind gods,
Cure this great breach in his abused nature! [wind up
The untuned and jarring senses, O,
Of this child-changed father!

Phys. So please your majesty
That we may wake the king: he hath slept long.

Cor. Be govern'd by your knowledge, and proceed
I' the sway of your own will. Is he array'd? [of his sleep

Gent. Ay, madam; in the heaviness
We put fresh garments on him.

Phys. Be by, good madam, when we do awake him;
I doubt not of his temperance.

Cor. Very well.

Phys. Please you, draw near. Louder the music there!

Cor. O my dear father! Restoration hang [kiss
Thy medicine on my lips; and let this
Repair those violent harms that my two sisters
Hath in thy reverence made!

Kent. Kind and dear princess!

Cor. Had you not been their father, these white flakes
Had challenged pity of them. Was this a face [winds?
To be exposed against the warring
To stand against the deep dread-bolted thunder?
In the most terrible and nimble stroke
Of quick, cross lightning? to watch—poor perdu!— [dog,
With this thin helm? Mine enemy's
Though he had bit me, should have stood that night
Against my fire; and wast thou fain, poor father, [forlorn,
To hovel thee with swine and rogues

In short and musty straw? Alack, alack! [once
'Tis wonder that thy life and wits at
Had not concluded all. He wakes; speak to him.
Phys. Madam, do you; 'tis fittest.
Cor. How does my royal lord? How fares your majesty?
Lear. You do me wrong to take me out o' the grave: [bound
Thou art a soul in bliss; but I am
Upon a wheel of fire, that mine own tears
Do scald like molten lead.
Cor. Sir, do you know me?
Lear. You are a spirit, I know: when did you die?
Cor. Still, still, far wide!
Phys. He's scarce awake: let him alone awhile.
Lear. Where have I been? Where am I? Fair daylight?
I am mightily abused. I should e'en die with pity,
To see another thus.—I know not what to say.— [let's see;
I will not swear these are my hands:—
I feel this pin prick. Would I were assured
Of my condition!
Cor. O, look upon me, sir,
And hold your hands in benediction o'er me:
No, sir, you must not kneel.
Lear. Pray, do not mock me:
I am a very foolish fond old man,
Fourscore and upward, not an hour more nor less;
And, to deal plainly,
I fear I am not in my perfect mind.
Methinks I should know you, and know this man; [ignorant
Yet I am doubtful; for I am mainly
What place this is; and all the skill I have [know not Remembers not these garments; nor I
Where I did lodge last night. Do not laugh at me;
For, as I am a man, I think this lady
To be my child Cordelia.
Cor. And so I am, I am.
Lear. Be your tears wet? yes, faith. I pray, weep not: [it.
If you have poison for me, I will drink
I know you do not love me; for your sisters [wrong:
Have, as I do remember, done me
You have some cause, they have not.
Cor. No cause, no cause.
Lear. Am I in France?
Kent. In your own kingdom, sir.
Lear. Do not abuse me.
Phys. Be comforted, good madam: the great rage, [danger
You see, is kill'd in him: and yet it is To make him even o'er the time he has [more lost.
Desire him to go in; trouble him no
Till further settling. [walk?
Cor. Will 't please your highness
Lear. You must bear with me:
Pray, now, forget and forgive: I am old and foolish.
[Exeunt all but KENT and Gentleman.
Gent. Holds it true, sir, that the Duke of Cornwall was so slain?
Kent. Most certain, sir. [people?
Gent. Who is conductor of his
Kent. As 'tis said, the bastard son of Gloucester.
Gent. They say Edgar, his banished son, is with the Earl of Kent in Germany.
Kent. Report is changeable. 'Tis time to look about; the powers of the kingdom approach apace.
Gent. The arbitrement is like to be bloody. Fare you well, sir. [Exit.
Kent. My point and period will be throughly wrought,
Or well or ill, as this day's battle's fought. [Exit.

ACT V.

SCENE I.—The British Camp, near Dover.

Enter, with Drum and Colours, EDMUND, REGAN, Officers, Soldiers, and Others.

Edm. Know of the duke if his last purpose hold, [aught
Or whether since he is advised by
To change the course: he's full of alteration [pleasure.
And self-reproving: bring his constant [Exit an Officer.
Reg. Our sister's man is certainly miscarried.
Edm. 'Tis to be doubted, madam.
Reg. Now, sweet lord,
You know the goodness I intend upon you: [the truth,
Tell me—but truly—but then speak

Do you not love my sister?
Edm. In honour'd love.
Reg. But have you never found my brother's way
To the forfended place?
Edm. That thought abuses you.
Reg. I am doubtful that you have been conjunct [call hers.
And bosom'd with her, as far as we
Edm. No, by mine honour, madam.
Reg. I never shall endure her: dear my lord,
Be not familiar with her.
Edm. Fear me not:—
She and the duke her husband!

Enter, with Drum and Colours, ALBANY, GONERIL, and Soldiers.

Gon. [Aside.] I had rather lose the battle than that sister
Should loosen him and me.
Alb. Our very loving sister, well be-met.
[To EDMUND] Sir, this I hear; the king is come to his daughter,
With others whom the rigour of our state [be honest,
Forced to cry out. Where I could not
I never yet was valiant: for this business, [land,
It toucheth us, as France invades our
Not bolds the king, with others, whom, I fear, [pose.
Most just and heavy causes make op-
Edm. Sir, you speak nobly.
Reg. Why is this reason'd?
Gon. Combine together 'gainst the enemy; [broils
For these domestic and particular
Are not the question here.
Alb. Let 's then determine
With the ancient of war on our proceedings. [at your tent.
Edm. I shall attend you presently
Reg. Sister, you'll go with us?
Gon. No.
Reg. 'Tis most convenient; pray you, go with us.
Gon. [Aside.] O, ho, I know the riddle. [Aloud] I will go.

As they are going out, enter EDGAR, disguised.

Edg. If e'er your grace had speech with man so poor,
Hear me one word. [Speak.
Alb. I'll overtake you. [To EDGAR]
[Exeunt all but ALBANY and EDGAR.
Edg. Before you fight the battle, ope this letter, [sound
If you have victory, let the trumpet
For him that brought it: wretched though I seem, [prove
I can produce a champion that will
What is avouched there. If you miscarry, [an end,
Your business of the world hath so
And machination ceases. Fortune love you!
Alb. Stay till I have read the letter.
Edg. I was forbid it.
When time shall serve, let but the herald cry,
And I'll appear again.
Alb. Why, fare thee well: I will o'erlook thy paper. [Exit EDGAR.

Re-enter EDMUND.

Edm. The enemy's in view; draw up your powers.
Here is the guess of their true strength and forces
By diligent discovery; but your haste
Is now urged on you.
Alb. We will greet the time. [Exit.
Edm. To both these sisters have I sworn my love; [stung
Each jealous of the other, as the
Are of the adder. Which of them shall I take? [be enjoy'd,
Both? one? or neither? Neither can
If both remain alive: to take the widow [Goneril;
Exasperates, makes mad her sister
And hardly shall I carry out my side,
Her husband being alive. Now then we'll use [being done,
His countenance for the battle; which
Let her who would be rid of him devise
His speedy taking off. As for the mercy [delia,
Which he intends to Lear and to Cor-
The battle done, and they within our power, [state
Shall never see his pardon; for my Stands on me to defend, not to debate. [Exit.

SCENE II.—A Field between the two Camps.

Alarum within. Enter, with Drum and

Colours, LEAR, CORDELIA, and their Forces; and exeunt.

Enter EDGAR and GLOUCESTER.

Edg. Here, father, take the shadow of this tree — [may thrive:
For your good host; pray that the right
If ever I return to you again,
I'll bring you comfort.
Glou. Grace go with you, sir! [Exit EDGAR.

Alarums; afterwards a Retreat. Re-enter EDGAR.

Edg. Away, old man; give me thy hand; away! [ter ta'en:
King Lear hath lost, he and his daugh-
Give me thy hand; come on.
Glou. No further, sir; a man may rot even here.
Edg. What, in ill thoughts again? Men must endure
Their going hence, even as their coming hither:
Ripeness is all: come on.
Glou. And that 's true too. [Exeunt.

SCENE III.—The British Camp, near Dover.

Enter, in conquest, with Drum and Colours, EDMUND; LEAR and CORDELIA, as prisoners; Officers, Soldiers, etc.

Edm. Some officers take them away: good guard, [known Until their greater pleasures first be
That are to censure them.
Cor. We are not the first
Who, with best meaning, have incurr'd the worst. [down;
For thee, oppressed king, am I cast
Myself could else out-frown false Fortune's frown.
Shall we not see these daughters and these sisters?
Lear. No, no, no, no! Come, let 's away to prison: [the cage:
We two alone will sing like birds i'
When thou dost ask me blessing, I'll kneel down, [live,
And ask of thee forgiveness: so we'll
And pray, and sing, and tell old tales, and laugh [rogues
At gilded butterflies, and hear poor
Talk of court news; and we'll talk with them too, [who 's out;
Who loses, and who wins; who 's in,
And take upon 's the mystery of things,
As if we were God's spies: and we'll wear out, [great ones,
In a wall'd prison, packs and sects of
That ebb and flow by the moon.
Edm. Take them away.
Lear. Upon such sacrifices, my Cordelia,
The gods themselves throw incense. Have I caught thee?
He that parts us shall bring a brand from heaven,
And fire us hence like foxes. Wipe thine eyes; [flesh and fell,
The good-years shall devour them,
Ere they shall make us weep: we'll see 'em starve first.
Come.
[Exeunt LEAR and CORDELIA, guarded.
Edm. Come hither, captain; hark.
Take thou this note [Giving a paper]; go follow them to prison:
One step I have advanced thee; if thou dost [thy way
As this instructs thee, thou dost make
To noble fortunes: know thou this, that men [minded
Are as the time is: to be tender-
Does not become a sword: thy great employment [thou'lt do 't,
Will not bear question; either say
Or thrive by other means.
Off. I'll do 't, my lord.
Edm. About it; and write happy when thou hast done. [so
Mark; I say, instantly; and carry it
As I have set it down. [dried oats;
Off. I cannot draw a cart, nor eat
If it be man's work, I'll do it. [Exit.

Flourish. Enter ALBANY, GONERIL, REGAN, Officers, and Attendants.

Alb. Sir, you have shown to-day your valiant strain,
And Fortune led you well: you have the captives [strife:
Who were the opposites of this day's
We do require them of you, so to use them [safety
As we shall find their merits and our
May equally determine.
Edm. Sir, I thought it fit
To send the old and miserable king
To some retention and appointed guard; [title more,
Whose age has charms in it, whose

To pluck the common bosom on his side, [eyes
And turn our impress'd lances in our
Which do command them. With him I sent the queen; [ready
My reason all the same; and they are
To-morrow, or at further space, to appear
Where you shall hold your session. At this time
We sweat and bleed: the friend hath lost his friend; [cursed
And the best quarrels, in the heat, are
By those that feel their sharpness:
The question of Cordelia and her father
Requires a fitter place.

Alb. Sir, by your patience,
I hold you but a subject of this war,
Not as a brother. [him.

Reg. That's as we list to grace
Methinks our pleasure might have been demanded, [powers;
Ere you had spoke so far. He led our
Bore the commission of my place and person; [up,
The which immediacy may well stand
And call itself your brother.

Gon. Not so hot:
In his own grace he doth exalt himself,
More than in your addition.

Reg. In my rights,
By me invested, he compeers the best.

Gon. That were the most, if he should husband you.

Reg. Jesters do oft prove prophets.

Gon. Holla, holla!
That eye that told you so look'd but a-squint. [should answer

Reg. Lady, I am not well; else I
From a full-flowing stomach. General,
Take thou my soldiers, prisoners, patrimony; [thine:
Dispose of them, of me; the walls are Witness the world, that I create thee here
My lord and master.

Gon. Mean you to enjoy him?

Alb. The let-alone lies not in your good will.

Edm. Nor in thine, lord.

Alb. Half-blooded fellow, yes.

Reg. [To EDMUND.] Let the drum strike, and prove my title thine.

Alb. Stay yet; hear reason.—Edmund, I arrest thee
On capital treason; and, in thine attaint,
This gilded serpent.
[Pointing to GONERIL.
[To REGAN] For your claim, fair sister,
I bar it in the interest of my wife;
'Tis she is sub-contracted to this lord,
And I, her husband, contradict your bans. [me;
If you will marry, make your loves to
My lady is bespoke.

Gon. An interlude!

Alb. Thou art arm'd, Gloucester: let the trumpet sound:
If none appear to prove upon thy person [sons,
Thy heinous, manifest, and many trea-
There is my pledge [Throwing down a glove]; I'll prove it on thy heart, [less
Ere I taste bread, thou art in nothing
Than I have here proclaim'd thee.

Reg. Sick, O, sick!

Gon. [Aside.] If not, I'll ne'er trust medicine.

Edm. There's my exchange [Throwing down a glove]: what in the world he is [lies:
That names me traitor, villain-like he
Call by thy trumpet: he that dares approach, [maintain
On him, on you,—who not?—I will
My truth and honour firmly.

Alb. A herald, ho!

Edm. A herald, ho, a herald!

Alb. Trust to thy single virtue; for thy soldiers, [name
All levied in my name, have in my
Took their discharge.

Reg. My sickness grows upon me.

Alb. She is not well; convey her to my tent. [Exit REGAN, led.

Enter a Herald.

Come hither, herald,—Let the trumpet sound,—
And read out this.

Off. Sound, trumpet!
[A Trumpet sounds.

Her. [Reads.]

'If any man of quality or degree within the lists of the army will maintain upon Edmund, supposed Earl of Gloucester, that he is a manifold traitor, let him appear at the third sound of the trumpet: he is bold in his defence.'

Edm. Sound! [First Trumpet.

Her. Again! [Second Trumpet.
Her. Again! [Third Trumpet.
[Trumpet answers within.

Enter EDGAR, at the third sound, armed, with a Trumpet before him.

Alb. Ask him his purposes, why he appears
Upon this call o' the trumpet.
Her. What are you?
Your name, your quality? and why you answer
This present summons?
Edg. Know, my name is lost;
By treason's tooth bare-gnawn and canker-bit:
Yet am I noble as the adversary
I come to cope withal.
Alb. Which is that adversary?
Edg. What 's he that speaks for Edmund Earl of Gloucester?
Edm. Himself: what say'st thou to him?
Edg. Draw thy sword,
That, if my speech offend a noble heart,
Thy arm may do thee justice: here is mine. [honours,
Behold, it is the privilege of mine
My oath, and my profession: I protest,
Maugre thy strength, youth, place and eminence, [fortune,
Despite thy victor sword and fire-new
Thy valour, and thy heart, thou art a traitor, [father,
False to thy gods, thy brother, and thy Conspirant 'gainst this high illustrious prince, [thy head
And, from the extremest upward of
To the descent and dust below thy foot;
A most toad-spotted traitor. Say thou 'No,' [spirits are bent
This sword, this arm, and my best
To prove upon thy heart, whereto I speak,
Thou liest. [name;
Edm. In wisdom I should ask thy
But since thy outside looks so fair and warlike, [ing breathes,
And that thy tongue some say of breed-
What safe and nicely I might well delay
By rule of knighthood, I disdain and spurn: [head;
Back do I toss these treasons to thy
With the hell-hated lie o'erwhelm thy heart;
Which, for they yet glance by and scarcely bruise,
This sword of mine shall give them instant way, [pets, speak!
Where they shall rest for ever. Trum-[Alarums. They fight. EDMUND falls.
Alb. O save him, save him!
Gon. This is practice, Gloucester:
By the law of arms thou wast not bound to answer
An unknown opposite; thou art not vanquish'd,
But cozen'd and beguiled.
Alb. Shut your mouth, dame,
Or with this paper shall I stop it.—Hold, sir: [own evil:—
Thou worse than any name, read thine
No tearing, lady; I perceive you know it. [Gives the letter to EDMUND.
Gon. Say, if I do, the laws are mine, not thine:
Who shall arraign me for 't?
Alb. Most monstrous! oh!
Know'st thou this paper?
Gon. Ask me not what I know. [Exit.
Alb. Go after her: she 's desperate; govern her. [Exit an Officer.
Edm. What you have charged me with, that have I done;
And more, much more; the time will bring it out: [thou
'Tis past, and so am I. But what art
That hast this fortune on me? If thou 'rt noble,
I do forgive thee.
Edg. Let 's exchange charity.
I am no less in blood than thou art, Edmund; [me.
If more, the more thou hast wrong'd
My name is Edgar, and thy father's son.
The gods are just, and of our pleasant vices
Make instruments to scourge us:
The dark and vicious place where thee he got
Cost him his eyes.
Edm. Thou hast spoken right, 'tis true; [here.
The wheel is come full circle; I am
Alb. Methought thy very gait did prophesy [thee:
A royal nobleness: I must embrace
Let sorrow split my heart, if ever I
Did hate thee or thy father!
Edg. Worthy prince, I know 't.
Alb. Where have you hid yourself?
How have you known the miseries of your father?

Edg. By nursing them, my lord.
List a brief tale;
And when 'tis told, O, that my heart would burst!
The bloody proclamation to escape
That follow'd me so near,—O, our lives' sweetness!
That we the pain of death would hourly die
Rather than die at once!—taught me to shift
Into a madman's rags; to assume a semblance
That very dogs disdain'd: and in this habit
Met I my father with his bleeding rings,
Their precious stones new lost; became his guide,
Led him, begg'd for him, saved him from despair;
Never,—O fault!—reveal'd myself unto him,
Until some half-hour past, when I was arm'd;
Not sure, though hoping, of this good success,
I ask'd his blessing, and from first to last
Told him my pilgrimage: but his flaw'd heart,— Alack, too weak the conflict to support!—
'Twixt two extremes of passion, joy and grief,
Burst smilingly.
Edm. This speech of yours hath moved me,
And shall perchance do good; but speak you on;
You look as you had something more to say.
Alb. If there be more, more woeful, hold it in;
For I am almost ready to dissolve,
Hearing of this.
Edg. This would have seem'd a period
To such as love not sorrow; but another,
To amplify too much, would make much more,
And top extremity.
Whilst I was big in clamour came there a man,
Who, having seen me in my worst estate,
Shunn'd my abhorr'd society; but then, finding
Who 'twas that so endured, with his strong arms
He fasten'd on my neck, and bellow'd out
As he'd burst heaven; threw him on my father;
Told the most piteous tale of Lear and him
That ever ear received: which in recounting
His grief grew puissant, and the strings of life
Began to crack: twice then the trumpets sounded,
And there I left him tranced.
Alb. But who was this?
Edg. Kent, sir, the banish'd Kent; who in disguise
Follow'd his enemy king, and did him service
Improper for a slave.

Enter a Gentleman hastily, with a bloody knife.

Gent. Help, help, O help!
Edg. What kind of help?
Alb. Speak, man.
Edg. What means that bloody knife?
Gent. 'Tis hot, it smokes;
It came even from the heart of—O, she 's dead!
Alb. Who dead? speak, man.
Gent. Your lady, sir, your lady: and her sister
By her is poisoned; she hath confess'd it.
Edm. I was contracted to them both: all three
Now marry in an instant.
Alb. Produce their bodies, be they alive or dead:
[Exit Gentleman.
This judgment of the heavens, that makes us tremble,
Touches us not with pity.
Edg. Here comes Kent, sir.

Enter KENT.

Alb. O, is this he?
The time will not allow the compliment
Which very manners urges.
Kent. I am come
To bid my king and master aye good night:
Is he not here?
Alb. Great thing of us forgot!
Speak, Edmund, where 's the king? and where 's Cordelia?
Seest thou this object, Kent?
[The bodies of GONERIL and REGAN are brought in.
Kent. Alack, why thus?
Edm. Yet Edmund was beloved:
The one the other poison'd for my sake,
And after slew herself.
Alb. Even so. Cover their faces.
Edm. I pant for life: some good I mean to do,
Despite of mine own nature. Quickly send,—
Be brief in it,—to the castle; for my writ
Is on the life of Lear and on Cordelia:
Nay, send in time.

Alb. Run, run, O, run!
Edg. To who, my lord? [To EDMUND] Who hath the office? send Thy token of reprieve. [sword
Edm. Well thought on: take my
Give it the captain.
Alb. Haste thee, for thy life.
[Exit EDGAR.
Edm. He hath commission from thy wife and me
To hang Cordelia in the prison, and
To lay the blame upon her own despair,
That she fordid herself.
Alb. The gods defend her! Bear him hence awhile.
[EDMUND is borne off.

Re-enter LEAR, with CORDELIA dead in his arms; EDGAR, Officer, and Others.

Lear. Howl, howl, howl, howl! O, you are men of stones:
Had I your tongues and eyes, I'd use them so [gone for ever!
That heaven's vault should crack. She 's
I know when one is dead, and when one lives; [ing-glass;
She 's dead as earth. Lend me a look-
If that her breath will mist or stain the stone,
Why, then she lives.
Kent. Is this the promised end?
Edg. Or image of that horror?
Alb. Fall, and cease!
Lear. This feather stirs; she lives! if it be so, [sorrows
It is a chance which does redeem all
That ever I have felt. [ter!
Kent. [Kneeling.] O my good mas-
Lear. Prithee, away.
Edg. 'Tis noble Kent, your friend
Lear. A plague upon you, murderers, traitors all!
I might have saved her; now she 's gone for ever! [Ha!
Cordelia, Cordelia! stay a little.
What is 't thou say'st?—Her voice was ever soft, [woman.
Gentle, and low; an excellent thing in
I kill'd the slave that was a-hanging thee.
Off. 'Tis true, my lords, he did.
Lear. Did I not, fellow?
I have seen the day, with my good biting falchion [old now,
I would have made them skip: I am
And these same crosses spoil me.—Who are you? [you straight.
Mine eyes are not o' the best:—I'll tell
Kent. If Fortune brag of two she loved and hated,
One of them we behold.
Lear. This is a dull sight. Are you not Kent?
Kent. The same;
Your servant Kent. Where is your servant Caius? [you that;
Lear. He 's a good fellow, I can tell
He 'll strike, and quickly too:—he 's dead and rotten.
Kent. No, my good lord; I am the very man,—
Lear. I'll see that straight.
Kent. That, from your first of difference and decay,
Have follow'd your sad steps.
Lear. You are welcome hither.
Kent. Nor no man else; all 's cheerless, dark, and deadly.
Your eldest daughters have fordone themselves,
And desperately are dead.
Lear. Ay, so I think.
Alb. He knows not what he says, and vain it is
That we present us to him.
Edg. Very bootless.

Enter an Officer.

Off. Edmund is dead, my lord.
Alb. That's but a trifle here.
You lords and noble friends, know our intent. [come
What comfort to this great decay may
Shall be applied: for us, we will resign,
During the life of this old majesty,
To him our absolute power: [To EDGAR and KENT] you, to your rights; [honours
With boot, and such addition as your
Have more than merited.—All friends shall taste
The wages of their virtue, and all foes
The cup of their deservings. O, see, see! [No, no, no life!
Lear. And my poor fool is hang'd!
Why should a dog, a horse, a rat, have life, [come no more,
And thou no breath at all? Thou 'lt
Never, never, never, never, never!
Pray you, undo this button: thank you, sir. [—her lips,—
Do you see this? Look on her,—look,

Look there, look there !— [Dies.
Edg. He faints ! My lord, my lord !
Kent. Break, heart; I prithee, break !
Edg. Look up, my lord.
Kent. Vex not his ghost : O, let him pass ! he hates him
That would upon the rack of this tough world
Stretch him out longer.
Edg. He is gone, indeed.
Kent. The wonder is he hath endured so long :
He but usurp'd his life.
Alb. Bear them from hence. Our present business
Is general woe. [To KENT and EDGAR] Friends of my soul, you twain
Rule in this realm, and the gored state sustain.
Kent. I have a journey, sir, shortly to go ;
My master calls me, I must not say no.
Alb. The weight of this sad time we must obey ; [to say.
Speak what we feel, not what we ought
The oldest hath borne most : we that are young [long.
Shall never see so much, nor live so [Exeunt, with a Dead March.

OTHELLO THE MOOR OF VENICE.

DRAMATIS PERSONÆ.

DUKE OF VENICE.
BRABANTIO, a Senator.
Other Senators.
GRATIANO, Brother to Brabantio.
LODOVICO, Kinsman to Brabantio.
OTHELLO, a noble Moor in the service of the Venetian State.
IAGO, his Ancient.
RODERIGO, a Venetian Gentleman.
MONTANO, Othello's predecessor in the government of Cyprus.
Clown, Servant to Othello.

DESDEMONA, Daughter to Brabantio and Wife to Othello.
EMILIA, Wife to Iago.
BIANCA, Mistress to Cassio.

Sailor, Messengers, Herald, Officers, Gentlemen, Musicians, and Attendants.

SCENE, for the first Act, in Venice; during the rest of the Play, at a Sea-port in Cyprus.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—Venice. A Street.

Enter RODERIGO and IAGO.

Rod. Tush, never tell me; I take it much unkindly [purse
That thou, Iago, who hast had my
As if the strings were thine, shouldst know of this. [me:
Iago. 'Sblood, but you will not hear
If ever I did dream of such a matter,
Abhor me. [hold him in thy hate.
Rod. Thou told'st me thou didst
Iago. Despise me, if I do not. Three great ones of the city,
In personal suit to make me his lieutenant, [of man,
Off-capp'd to him: and, by the faith
I know my price, I am worth no worse a place: [purposes,
But he, as loving his own pride and Evades them, with a bombast circumstance
Horribly stuff'd with epithets of war;
And, in conclusion, [says he,
Nonsuits my mediators; for, 'Certes,'
'I have already chose my officer.'
And what was he?
Forsooth, a great arithmetician,
One Michael Cassio, a Florentine,
A fellow almost damn'd in a fair wife;
That never set a squadron in the field,
Nor the division of a battle knows
More than a spinster; unless the bookish theoric,
Wherein the toged consuls can propose
As masterly as he: mere prattle, without practice, [the election:
Is all his soldiership. But he, sir, had
And I,—of whom his eyes had seen the proof [grounds
At Rhodes, at Cyprus, and on other
Christian and heathen,—must be belee'd and calm'd [caster;
By debitor and creditor, this counter-
He, in good time, must his lieutenant be, [Moorship's ancient.
And I—God bless the mark!—his
Rod. By heaven, I rather would have been his hangman.
Iago. But there 's no remedy; 'tis the curse of service,
Preferment goes by letter and affection,
And not by old gradation, where each second [judge yourself,
Stood heir to the first. Now, sir, be Wherein I in any just term am affined
To love the Moor.
Rod. I would not follow him then.
Iago. O, sir, content you; [him:
I follow him to serve my turn upon
We cannot all be masters, nor all masters [mark
Cannot be truly follow'd You shall
Many a duteous and knee-crooking knave, [bondage,
That, doting on his own obsequious
Wears out his time, much like his master's ass,
For nought but provender, and when he's old, cashier'd:
Whip me such honest knaves. Others there are

Who, trimm'd in forms and visages of duty,
Keep yet their hearts attending on themselves; [their lords,
And, throwing but shows of service on
Do well thrive by them, and when they have lined their coats
Do themselves homage: these fellows have some soul; [For, sir,
And such a one do I profess myself.
It is as sure as you are Roderigo,
Were I the Moor, I would not be Iago:
In following him, I follow but myself;
Heaven is my judge, not I for love and duty,
But seeming so, for my peculiar end:
For when my outward action doth demonstrate
The native act and figure of my heart
In compliment extern, 'tis not long after [sleeve
But I will wear my heart upon my

Rod. What a full fortune does the
If he can carry 't thus!

Rouse him: make after him, poison his delight, [her kinsmen,
Proclaim him in the streets; incense
And, though he in a fertile climate dwell, [joy be joy,
Plague him with flies: though that his

As it may lose some colour.
Rod. Here is her father's house; I'll call aloud. [and dire yell
Iago. Do; with like timorous accent
As when, by night and negligence, the fire
Is spied in populous cities.
Rod. What, ho! Brabantio! Signior Brabantio, ho!
Iago. Awake! what, ho! Brabantio! thieves! thieves! thieves!
Look to your house, your daughter, and your bags!
Thieves! thieves!

Bra. What is the reason of this terrible summons?
What is the matter there? [in?
Rod. Signior, is all your family within?
Iago. Are your doors lock'd?
Bra. Why? wherefore ask you this?
Iago. 'Zounds, sir, you're robb'd; for shame, put on your gown;
Your heart is burst, you have lost half your soul; [ram
Even now, now, very now, an old black
Is tupping your white ewe. Arise, arise; [bell,
Awake the snorting citizens with the
Or else the devil will make a grandsire of you: [you:
Arise, I say.
Bra. What, have you lost your wits?
Rod. Most reverend signior, do you know my voice?
Bra. Not I; what are you?
Rod. My name is Roderigo.
Bra. The worser welcome:
I have charged thee not to haunt about my doors: [say
In honest plainness thou hast heard me
My daughter is not for thee; and now, in madness, [draughts,
Being full of supper and distempering
Upon malicious bravery, dost thou come
To start my quiet.
Rod. Sir, sir, sir,— [sure
Bra. But thou must needs be
My spirit and my place have in them power
To make this bitter to thee.
Rod. Patience, good sir.
Bra. What tell'st thou me of robbing? this is Venice;
My house is not a grange.
Rod. Most grave Brabantio,
In simple and pure soul I come to you.
Iago. 'Zounds, sir, you are one of those that will not serve God, if the devil bid you. Because we come to do you service and you think we are ruffians, you'll have your daughter covered with a Barbary horse; you'll have your nephews neigh to you; you'll have coursers for cousins, and gennets for germans.
Bra. What profane wretch art thou?
Iago. I am one, sir, that comes to tell you your daughter and the Moor are now making the beast with two backs.
Bra. Thou art a villain.
Iago. You are—a senator.
Bra. This thou shalt answer; I know thee, Roderigo.
Rod. Sir, I will answer any thing. But, I beseech you,

If 't be your pleasure and most wise consent,
As partly I find it is, that your fair daughter,
At this odd-even and dull watch o' the night,
Transported, with no worse nor better guard
But with a knave of common hire, a gondolier,
To the gross clasps of a lascivious Moor,—
If this be known to you, and your allowance,
We then have done you bold and saucy wrongs;
But if you know not this, my manners tell me
We have your wrong rebuke. Do not believe
That, from the sense of all civility,
I thus would play and trifle with your reverence:
Your daughter,—if you have not given her leave,—
I say again, hath made a gross revolt;
Tying her duty, beauty, wit, and fortunes
In an extravagant and wheeling stranger
Of here and every where. Straight satisfy yourself:
If she be in her chamber or your house,
Let loose on me the justice of the state
For thus deluding you.

Bra. Strike on the tinder, ho!
Give me a taper! call up all my people!
This accident is not unlike my dream;
Belief of it oppresses me already:—
Light, I say! light!

[Exit, from above.

Iago. Farewell; for I must leave you:
It seems not meet, nor wholesome to my place,
To be produced—as, if I stay, I shall—
Against the Moor: for, I do know, the state,
However this may gall him with some check,
Cannot with safety cast him; for he 's embark'd
With such loud reason to the Cyprus' wars,
Which even now stand in act, that, for their souls,
Another of his fathom they have none,
To lead their business: in which regard,
Though I do hate him as I do hell-pains,
Yet, for necessity of present life,
I must show out a flag and sign of love,
Which is indeed but sign. That you shall surely find him,
Lead to the Sagittary the raised search;
And there will I be with him. So, farewell.

[Exit.

Enter, below, BRABANTIO, and Servants with torches.

Bra. It is too true an evil: gone she is;
And what 's to come of my despised time
Is nought but bitterness. Now, Roderigo,
Where didst thou see her?—O unhappy girl!—
With the Moor, say'st thou?—Who would be a father?—
How didst thou know 'twas she?—O, she deceives me
Past thought!—What said she to you?—Get more tapers:
Raise all my kindred.—Are they married, think you?

Rod. Truly, I think they are.

Bra. O heaven!—How got she out?—O treason of the blood!
Fathers, from hence trust not your daughters' minds
By what you see them act. Is there not charms
By which the property of youth and maidhood
May be abused? Have you not read, Roderigo,
Of some such thing?

Rod. Yes, sir, I have indeed.

Bra. Call up my brother.—O, that you had had her!—
Some one way, some another.—Do you know
Where we may apprehend her and the Moor?

Rod. I think I can discover him, if you please
To get good guard and go along with me.

Bra. Pray you, lead on. At every house I'll call;
I may command at most.—Get weapons, ho!
And raise some special officers of night.—
On, good Roderigo; I'll deserve your pains.

[Exeunt.

SCENE II.—The Same. Another Street.

Enter OTHELLO, IAGO, and Attendants with torches.

Iago. Though in the trade of war I have slain men,
Yet do I hold it very stuff o' the conscience
To do no contrived murder: I lack iniquity
Sometimes to do me service: nine or ten times
I had thought to have yerk'd him here under the ribs.

Oth. 'Tis better as it is.
Iago. Nay, but he prated,
And spoke such scurvy and provoking terms
Against your honour
That, with the little godliness I have,
I did full hard forbear him. But, I pray you, sir, [this,
Are you fast married? for, be sure of
That the magnifico is much beloved;
And hath in his effect a voice potential
As double as the duke's: he will divorce you; [grievance
Or put upon you what restraint and
The law, with all his might to enforce it on,
Will give him cable.
Oth. Let him do his spite:
My services which I have done the signiory [yet to know,—
Shall out-tongue his complaints. 'Tis
Which, when I know that boasting is an honour, [being
I shall promulgate—I fetch my life and
From men of royal siege; and my demerits [fortune
May speak unbonneted to as proud a
As this that I have reach'd: for know, Iago,
But that I love the gentle Desdemona,
I would not my unhoused free condition
Put into circumscription and confine
For the sea's worth. But, look! what lights come yonder?
Iago. These are the raised father and his friends:
You were best go in.
Oth. Not I; I must be found:
My parts, my title, and my perfect soul
Shall manifest me rightly. Is it they?
Iago. By Janus, I think no.

Enter CASSIO, and certain Officers with torches.

Oth. The servants of the duke, and my lieutenant. [friends!
The goodness of the night upon you,
What is the news? [general;
Cas. The duke does greet you,
And he requires your haste-post-haste appearance,
Even on the instant.
Oth. What is the matter, think you?
Cas. Something from Cyprus, as I may divine: [leys
It is a business of some heat: the gal-
Have sent a dozen sequent messengers
This very night at one another's heels;
And many of the consuls, raised and met,
Are at the duke's already: you have been hotly call'd for;
When, being not at your lodging to be found, [quests
The senate hath sent about three several
To search you out.
Oth. 'Tis well I am found by you.
I will but spend a word here in the house,
And go with you. [Exit.
Cas. Ancient, what makes he here?
Iago. Faith, he to-night hath boarded a land carack: [ever.
If it prove lawful prize, he 's made for
Cas. I do not understand.
Iago. He 's married.
Cas. To who?

Re-enter OTHELLO.

Iago. Marry, to—Come, captain, will you go?
Oth. Have with you.
Cas. Here comes another troop to seek for you. [advised;
Iago. It is Brabantio. General, be
He comes to bad intent.

Enter BRABANTIO, RODERIGO, and Officers with torches and weapons.

Oth. Holla! stand there!
Rod. Signior, it is the Moor.
Bra. Down with him, thief!
[They draw on both sides.
Iago. You, Roderigo! come, sir, I am for you.
Oth. Keep up your bright swords, for the dew will rust them.
Good signior, you shall more command with years
Than with your weapons.
Bra. O thou foul thief, where hast thou stow'd my daughter?
Damn'd as thou art, thou hast enchanted her;
For I'll refer me to all things of sense,
If she in chains of magic were not bound, [happy,
Whether a maid so tender, fair, and
So opposite to marriage that she shunn'd [nation,
The wealthy curled darlings of our
Would ever have, to incur a general mock, [bosom
Run from her guardage to the sooty

Of such a thing as thou; to fear, not to delight.
Judge me the world, if 'tis not gross in sense
That thou hast practised on her with foul charms;
Abused her delicate youth with drugs or minerals
That waken motion:—I'll have 't disputed on;
'Tis probable, and palpable to thinking.
I therefore apprehend and do attach thee
For an abuser of the world, a practiser
Of arts inhibited and out of warrant.
Lay hold upon him: if he do resist,
Subdue him at his peril.

Oth. Hold your hands,
Both you of my inclining, and the rest:
Were it my cue to fight, I should have known it
Without a prompter.—Where will you that I go
To answer this your charge?

Bra. To prison; till fit time
Of law and course of direct session
Call thee to answer.

Oth. What if I do obey?
How may the duke be therewith satisfied,
Whose messengers are here about my side,
Upon some present business of the state
To bring me to him?

Off. 'Tis true, most worthy signior;
The duke 's in council, and your noble self,
I am sure, is sent for.

Bra. How! the duke in council!
In this time of the night!—Bring him away:
Mine 's not an idle cause: the duke himself,
Or any of my brothers of the state,
Cannot but feel this wrong as 'twere their own;
For if such actions may have passage free,
Bond-slaves and pagans shall our statesmen be.

[Exeunt.

SCENE III.—The Same. A Council-Chamber.

The DUKE and Senators sitting at a table; Officers attending.

Duke. There is no composition in these news
That gives them credit.

First Sen. Indeed, they are disproportion'd;
My letters say a hundred and seven galleys.

Duke. And mine, a hundred and forty.

Sec. Sen. And mine, two hundred:
But though they jump not on a just account,—
As in these cases, where the aim reports,
'Tis oft with difference,—yet do they all confirm
A Turkish fleet, and bearing up to Cyprus.

Duke. Nay, it is possible enough to judgment:
I do not so secure me in the error,
But the main article I do approve
In fearful sense.

[ho! what, ho!

—Sailor. [Within.] What, ho! what,

First Off. A messenger from the galleys.

Enter Sailor.

Duke. Now, what 's the business?

Sail. The Turkish preparation makes for Rhodes;
So was I bid report here to the state
By Signior Angelo.

Duke. How say you by this change?

First Sen. This cannot be,
By no assay of reason: 'tis a pageant
To keep us in false gaze. When we consider
The importancy of Cyprus to the Turk,
And let ourselves again but understand,
That as it more concerns the Turk than Rhodes,
So may he with more facile question bear it,
For that it stands not in such warlike brace,
But altogether lacks the abilities
That Rhodes is dress'd in:—if we make thought of this,
We must not think the Turk is so unskilful
To leave that latest which concerns him first;
Neglecting an attempt of ease and gain,
To wake and wage a danger profitless.

Duke. Nay, in all confidence, he 's not for Rhodes.

First Off. Here is more news.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. The Ottomites, reverend and gracious,
Steering with due course toward the isle of Rhodes,
Have there injointed them with an after fleet.

First Sen. Ay, so I thought. How many, as you guess?

Mess. Of thirty sail: and now do they re-stem
Their backward course, bearing with frank appearance

Their purposes toward Cyprus. Signior Montano,
Your trusty and most valiant servitor,
With his free duty recommends you thus,
And prays you to believe him.
Duke. 'Tis certain then for Cyprus.
Marcus Luccicos, is he not in town?
First Sen. He 's now in Florence.
Duke. Write from us to him; post-post-haste dispatch.
First Sen. Here comes Brabantio and the valiant Moor.

Enter BRABANTIO, OTHELLO, IAGO, RODERIGO, and Officers.

Duke. Valiant Othello, we must straight employ you
Against the general enemy Ottoman.
[To BRABANTIO] I did not see you; welcome, gentle signior;
We lack'd your counsel and your help to-night.
Bra. So did I yours. Good your grace, pardon me;
Neither my place, nor aught I heard of business,
Hath raised me from my bed; nor doth the general care [grief
Take hold on me; for my particular
Is of so flood-gate and o'erbearing nature [rows
That it engluts and swallows other sor-
And it is still itself.
Duke. Why, what 's the matter?
Bra. My daughter! O, my daughter!
All. Dead?
Bra. Ay, to me;
She is abused, stol'n from me, and corrupted [mountebanks;
By spells and medicines bought of
For nature so preposterously to err,
Being not deficient, blind, or lame of sense,
Sans witchcraft could not.
Duke. Whoe'er he be that in this foul proceeding [herself
Hath thus beguiled your daughter of
And you of her, the bloody book of law
You shall yourself read in the bitter letter [our proper son
After your own sense; yea, though
Stood in your action.
Bra. Humbly I thank your grace.
Here is the man, this Moor; whom now, it seems, [affairs
Your special mandate for the state-
Hath hither brought.
All. We are very sorry for 't.
Duke. [To OTHELLO.] What, in your own part, can you say to this?
Bra. Nothing, but this is so.
Oth. Most potent, grave, and reverend signiors, [masters,
My very noble and approved good
That I have ta'en away this old man's daughter, [her:
It is most true; true, I have married
The very head and front of my offending [I in my speech,
Hath this extent, no more. Rude am
And little blest with the soft phrase of peace; [years' pith,
For since these arms of mine had seven
Till now some nine moons wasted, they have used [field;
Their dearest action in the tented
And little of this great world can I speak, [and battle;
More than pertains to feats of broil
And therefore little shall I grace my cause [gracious patience,
In speaking for myself. Yet, by your
I will a round unvarnish'd tale deliver
Of my whole course of love; what drugs, what charms,
What conjuration, and what mighty magic— [withal—
For such proceeding I am charged
I won his daughter.
Bra. A maiden never bold;
Of spirit so still and quiet, that her motion [of nature,
Blush'd at herself; and she—in spite
Of years, of country, credit, every thing— [look on!
To fall in love with what she fear'd to
It is a judgment maim'd and most imperfect; [err
That will confess perfection so could
Against all rules of nature; and must be driven
To find out practices of cunning hell,
Why this should be. I therefore vouch again [the blood,
That with some mixtures powerful o'er
Or with some dram conjured to this effect,
He wrought upon her.
Duke. To vouch this, is no proof,
Without more certain and more overt test
Than these thin habits and poor likelihoods

Of modern seeming do prefer against him.

First Sen. But, Othello, speak:
Did you by indirect and forced courses
Subdue and poison this young maid's affections? [question
Or came it by request and such fair
As soul to soul affordeth?

Oth. I do beseech you,
Send for the lady to the Sagittary,
And let her speak of me before her father:
If you do find me foul in her report,
The trust, the office I do hold of you,
Not only take away, but let your sentence
Even fall upon my life.

Duke. Fetch Desdemona hither.

Oth. Ancient, conduct them; you best know the place.

[Exeunt Iago and Attendants.

And, till she come, as truly as to heaven
I do confess the vices of my blood,
So justly to your grave ears I'll present
How I did thrive in this fair lady's love, and she in mine.

Duke. Say it, Othello. [vited me;

Oth. Her father loved me; oft in-
Still question'd me the story of my life
From year to year; the battles, sieges, fortunes,
That I have pass'd. [days
I ran it through, even from my boyish
To the very moment that he bade me tell it; [chances,
Wherein I spake of most disastrous
Of moving accidents by flood and field,
Of hair-breadth 'scapes i' the imminent deadly breach,
Of being taken by the insolent foe
And sold to slavery; of my redemption thence,
And portance in my travels' history:
Wherein of antres vast and deserts idle,
Rough quarries, rocks, and hills whose heads touch heaven,
It was my hint to speak,—such was the process; [eat,
And of the Cannibals that each other
The Anthropophagi, and men whose heads [things to hear
Do grow beneath their shoulders. These Would Desdemona seriously incline;
But still the house-affairs would draw her thence; [dispatch,
Which ever as she could with haste
She'd come again, and with a greedy ear [serving,
Devour up my discourse: which I ob-
Took once a pliant hour; and found good means [heart
To draw from her a prayer of earnest
That I would all my pilgrimage dilate,
Whereof by parcels she had something heard,
But not intentively: I did consent;
And often did beguile her of her tears,
When I did speak of some distressful stroke [being done,
That my youth suffer'd. My story
She gave me for my pains a world of sighs:
She swore, in faith, 'twas strange, 'twas passing strange;
'Twas pitiful, 'twas wondrous pitiful:
She wish'd she had not heard it; yet she wish'd
That heaven had made her such a man: she thank'd me;
And bade me, if I had a friend that loved her, [story,
I should but teach him how to tell my
And that would woo her. Upon this hint I spake: [pass'd,
She loved me for the dangers I had
And I loved her that she did pity them.
This only is the witchcraft I have used:
Here comes the lady; let her witness it.

Enter Desdemona, Iago, and Attendants.

Duke. I think this tale would win my daughter too.
Good Brabantio, [best:
Take up this mangled matter at the Men do their broken weapons rather use
Than their bare hands.

Bra. I pray you, hear her speak:
If she confess that she was half the wooer, [blame
Destruction on my head, if my bad
Light on the man!—Come hither, gentle mistress: [pany
Do you perceive in all this noble com-
Where most you owe obedience?

Des. My noble father,
I do perceive here a divided duty:
To you I am bound for life and education; [me
My life and education both do learn
How to respect you; you are the lord of duty;

I am hitherto your daughter: but here 's my husband;
And so much duty as my mother show'd
To you, preferring you before her father,
So much I challenge that I may profess
Due to the Moor my lord. [done.
Bra. God be with you! I have
Please it your grace, on to the state-affairs: [it.
I had rather to adopt a child than get Come hither, Moor: [heart,
I here do give thee that with all my
Which, but thou hast already, with all my heart [sake, jewel,
I would keep from thee.—For your
I am glad at soul I have no other child;
For thy escape would teach me tyranny,

Duke. The Turk with a most mighty preparation makes for Cyprus. Othello, the fortitude of the place is best known to you; and though we have there a substitute of most allowed sufficiency, yet opinion, a sovereign mistress of effects, throws a more safer voice on you: you must therefore be content to slubber the gloss of your new fortunes with this more stubborn and boisterous expedition.

Duke. This night.

Oth. With all my heart.

Duke. At nine i' the morning here we'll meet again.
Othello, leave some officer behind,
And he shall our commission bring to you;
With such things else of quality and respect
As doth import you.

Oth. Please your grace, my ancient;
A man he is of honesty and trust:

Duke. Let it be so.
Good night to every one. [To BRABANTIO] And, noble signior,
If virtue no delighted beauty lack,
Your son-in-law is far more fair than black.

First Sen. Adieu, brave Moor; use Desdemona well.

Bra. Look to her, Moor; have a quick eye to see:
She has deceived her father, and may thee.

Oth. My life upon her faith! [etc.

[Exeunt DUKE, Senators, Officers,
Honest Iago,
My Desdemona must I leave to thee:
I prithee, let thy wife attend on her;
And bring them after in the best advantage.
Come, Desdemona; I have but an hour
Of love, of worldly matters and direction,
To spend with thee: we must obey the time.

[Exeunt OTHELLO and DESDEMONA.

Rod. Iago!

Iago. What say'st thou, noble heart?

Rod. What will I do, thinkest thou?

Iago. Why, go to bed and sleep.

Rod. I will incontinently drown myself.

Iago. Well, if thou dost, I shall never love thee after it. Why, thou silly gentleman!

Rod. It is silliness to live when to live is a torment; and then have we a prescription to die when Death is our physician.

Iago. O villanous! I have looked upon the world for four times seven years; and since I could distinguish betwixt a benefit and an injury, I never found a man that knew how to love himself. Ere I would say, I would drown myself for the love of a guinea-hen, I would change my humanity with a baboon.

Rod. What should I do? I confess it is my shame to be so fond; but it is not in my virtue to amend it.

Iago. Virtue! a fig! 'tis in ourselves that we are thus or thus. Our bodies are our gardens; to the which our wills are gardeners: so that if we will plant nettles or sow lettuce, set hyssop and weed up thyme, supply it with one gender of herbs or distract it with many, either to have it sterile with idleness or manured with industry, why, the power and corrigible authority of this lies in our wills. If the balance of our lives had not one scale of reason to poise another of sensuality, the blood and baseness of our natures would conduct us to most preposterous conclusions: but we have reason to cool our raging motions, our carnal stings, our unbitted lusts; whereof I take this that you call love to be a sect or scion.

Rod. It cannot be.

Iago. It is merely a lust of the blood and a permission of the will. Come, be a man. Drown thyself! drown cats and blind puppies. I have professed me thy friend, and I confess me knit to thy deserving with cables of perdurable toughness; I could never better stead thee than now. Put money in thy purse; follow these wars; defeat thy favour with an usurped beard; I say, put money in thy purse.

It cannot be that Desdemona should long continue her love to the Moor,—put money in thy purse,—nor he his to her: it was a violent commencement, and thou shalt see an answerable sequestration; put but money in thy purse. These Moors are changeable in their wills:—fill thy purse with money. The food that to him now is as luscious as locusts, shall be to him shortly as bitter as coloquintida. She must change for youth: when she is sated with his body, she will find the error of her choice: she must have change, she must: therefore put money in thy purse. If thou wilt needs damn thyself, do it a more delicate way than drowning. Make all the money thou canst: if sanctimony and a frail vow betwixt an erring barbarian and a supersubtle Venetian be not too hard for my wits and all the tribe of hell, thou shalt enjoy her; therefore make money. A pox of drowning thyself! it is clean out of the way: seek thou rather to be hanged in compassing thy joy than to be drowned and go without her.

Rod. Wilt thou be fast to my hopes, if I depend on the issue?

Iago. Thou art sure of me:—go, make money:—I have told thee often, and I re-tell thee again and again, I hate the Moor: my cause is hearted; thine hath no less reason. Let us be conjunctive in our revenge against him: if thou canst cuckold him, thou dost thyself a pleasure, me a sport. There are many events in the womb of Time which will be delivered. Traverse; go; provide thy money. We will have more of this to-morrow. Adieu.

Rod. Where shall we meet i' the morning?

Iago. At my lodging.

Rod. I'll be with thee betimes.

Iago. Go to; farewell. Do you hear, Roderigo?

Rod. What say you? [hear?

Iago. No more of drowning, do you

Rod. I am changed. I'll sell all my land.

Iago. Go to; farewell: put money enough in your purse.

ACT II.

SCENE I.—A Sea-port Town in Cyprus. An Open Place near the Quay.

Enter MONTANO and two Gentlemen.

Mon. What from the cape can you discern at sea?

First Gent. Nothing at all: it is a high-wrought flood;
I cannot, 'twixt the heaven and the main,
Descry a sail. [aloud at land;

Mon. Methinks the wind hath spoke

Can hold the mortise? What shall we hear of this?

Sec. Gent. A segregation of the Turkish fleet: [shore,
For do but stand upon the foaming

The wind-shaked surge, with high and monstrous mane, [Bear,
Seems to cast water on the burning
And quench the guards of the ever-fixed pole :
I never did like molestation view
On the enchafed flood.

Mon. If that the Turkish fleet
Be not enshelter'd and embay'd, they are drown'd ;
It is impossible they bear it out.

Enter a third Gentleman.

Third Gent. News, lads ! our wars are done. [the Turks,
The desperate tempest hath so bang'd
That their designment halts : a noble ship of Venice [ance
Hath seen a grievous wreck and suffer-

Mon. How ! is this true ?

Third Gent. The ship is here put in,
A Veronesa ; Michael Cassio,
Lieutenant to the warlike Moor Othello,
Is come on shore : the Moor himself at sea, [Cyprus
And is in full commission here for

Enter Cassio.

Cas. Thanks, you the valiant of this warlike isle, [heavens
That so approve the Moor ! O, let the Give him defence against the elements,
For I have lost him on a dangerous sea.

Mon. Is he well shipp'd ?

Cas. His bark is stoutly timber'd, and his pilot [ance ;

Sec. Gent. They do discharge their shot of courtesy :
Our friends at least.

Cas. I pray you, sir, go forth,
And give us truth who 'tis that is arrived.

Sec. Gent. I shall. [Exit.

Mon. But, good lieutenant, is your general wived ?

Cas. Most fortunately : he hath achieved a maid [fame ;
That paragons description and wild
One that excels the quirks of blazoning pens,
And in the essential vesture of creation
Does tire the ingener.

Re-enter second Gentleman.

How now ! who has put in ?

Sec. Gent. 'Tis one Iago, ancient to the general.

Cas. He has had most favourable and happy speed :
Tempests themselves, high seas, and howling winds, [sands,—
The gutter'd rocks, and congregated
Traitors ensteep'd to clog the guiltless keel,—
As having sense of beauty, do omit
Their mortal natures, letting go safely by
The divine Desdemona.

Mon. What is she ?

Cas. She that I spake of, our great captain's captain,
Left in the conduct of the bold Iago ;
Whose footing here anticipates our thoughts

Sec. Gent. They give their greeting to the citadel:
This likewise is a friend.

Cas. See for the news.
[Exit Gentleman.
Good ancient, you are welcome. [To EMILIA] Welcome, mistress:—
Let it not gall your patience, good Iago,
That I extend my manners; 'tis my breeding
That gives me this bold show of courtesy. [Kissing her.

Iago. Sir, would she give you so much of her lips [me,
As of her tongue she oft bestows on
You'd have enough.

Des. Alas, she has no speech.

Iago. In faith, too much;
I find it still when I have list to sleep:
Marry, before your ladyship, I grant,
She puts her tongue a little in her heart,
And chides with thinking. [so.

Emil. You have little cause to say

Bells in your parlours, wild-cats in your kitchens, [offended,
Saints in your injuries, devils being

Des. O, fie upon thee, slanderer!

Iago. Nay, it is true, or else I am a Turk: [work.

Iago. No, let me not.

Des. What wouldst thou write of me, if thou shouldst praise me?

But does foul pranks which fair and wise ones do.

Des. O heavy ignorance! thou praisest the worst best. But what praise couldst thou bestow on a deserving woman indeed, one that, in the authority of her merit, did justly put on the vouch of very malice itself?

Iago. She that was ever fair and never proud, [loud,

Iago. To suckle fools and chronicle small beer.
Des. O most lame and impotent conclusion! Do not learn of him, Emilia, though he be thy husband. How say you, Cassio? is he not a most profane and liberal counsellor?
Cas. He speaks home, madam: you may relish him more in the soldier than in the scholar.
Iago. [Aside.] He takes her by the palm: ay, well said, whisper: with as little a web as this will I ensnare as great a fly as Cassio. Ay, smile upon her, do; I will gyve thee in thine own courtship. You say true; 'tis so, indeed: if such tricks as these strip you out of your lieutenantry, it had been better you had not kissed your three fingers so oft, which now again you are most apt to play the sir in. Very good; well kissed! an excellent courtesy! 'tis so, indeed. Yet again your fingers to your lips? would they were clyster-pipes for your sake! [Trumpet within.] [Aloud] The Moor! I know his trumpet.
Cas. 'Tis truly so.
Des. Let's meet him and receive him
Cas. Lo, where he comes!

Enter OTHELLO, and Attendants.

Oth. O my fair warrior!
Des. My dear Othello!
Oth. It gives me wonder great as my content [soul's joy!

Bring thou the master to the citadel;
He is a good one, and his worthiness
Does challenge much respect. Come, Desdemona,
Once more, well met at Cyprus.

[Exeunt all but IAGO and RODERIGO.

Iago. Do thou meet me presently at the harbour. Come hither. If thou beest valiant,—as, they say, base men, being in love, have then a nobility in their natures more than is native to them,—list me. The lieutenant to-night watches on the court of guard. First, I must tell thee this: Desdemona is directly in love with him.
Rod. With him! why, 'tis not possible.
Iago. Lay thy finger thus, and let thy soul be instructed. Mark me with what violence she first loved the Moor, but for bragging and telling her fantastical lies: and will she love him still for prating? let not thy discreet heart think it. Her eye must be fed; and what delight shall she have to look on the devil? When the blood is made dull with the act of sport, there should be, again to inflame it and to give satiety a fresh appetite, loveliness in favour, sympathy in years, manners and beauties; all which the Moor is defective in: now, for want of these required conveniences, her delicate tenderness will find itself abused, begin to heave the gorge, disrelish and abhor the Moor; very nature will instruct her in it, and compel her to some second choice. Now, sir, this granted,—as it is a most pregnant and unforced position,—who stands so eminently in the degree of this fortune as Cassio does? a knave very voluble; no further conscionable than in putting on the mere form of civil and humane seeming, for the better compassing of his salt and most hidden loose affection? why, none; why, none: a slipper and subtle knave; a finder-out of occasions; that has an eye can stamp and counterfeit advantages, though true advantage never present itself: a devilish knave! Besides, the knave is handsome, young; and hath all these requisites in him that folly and green minds look after: a pestilent complete knave; and the woman hath found him already.

Rod. I cannot believe that in her; she is full of most blessed condition.

Iago. Blessed fig's-end! the wine she drinks is made of grapes: if she had been blessed, she would never have loved the Moor. Blessed pudding! Didst thou not see her paddle with the palm of his hand? didst not mark that? [but courtesy.

Rod. Yes, that I did; but that was Iago. Lechery, by this hand; an index and obscure prologue to the history of lust and foul thoughts. They met so near with their lips that their breaths embraced together. Villanous thoughts, Roderigo! when these mutualities so marshal the way, hard at hand comes the master and main exercise, the incorporate conclusion. Pish! But, sir, be you ruled by me: I have brought you from Venice. Watch you to-night; for the command, I'll lay 't upon you. Cassio knows you not. I'll not be far from you: do you find some occasion to anger Cassio, either by speaking too loud, or tainting his discipline; or from what other course you please, which the time shall more favourably minister.

Rod. Well.

Iago. Sir, he is rash and very sudden in choler, and haply may strike at you: provoke him, that he may; for even out of that will I cause these of Cyprus to mutiny; whose qualification shall come into no true taste again but by the displanting of Cassio. So shall you have a shorter journey to your desires by the means I shall then have to prefer them; and the impediment most profitably removed, without the which there were no expectation of our prosperity. [to any opportunity.

Rod. I will do this, if I can bring it

Iago. I warrant thee. Meet me by and by at the citadel: I must fetch his necessaries ashore. Farewell.

Rod. Adieu. [Exit.

Iago. That Cassio loves her, I do well believe it; [credit:
That she loves him, 'tis apt and of great
The Moor, howbeit that I endure him not,
Is of a constant, loving, noble nature;
And I dare think he'll prove to Desdemona [love her too;
A most dear husband. Now, I do
Not out of absolute lust, though peradventure
I stand accountant for as great a sin,
But partly led to diet my revenge,
For that I do suspect the lusty Moor
Hath leap'd into my seat: the thought whereof [my inwards;
Doth like a poisonous mineral gnaw
And nothing can or shall content my soul [wife;
Till I am even'd with him, wife for
Or failing so, yet that I put the Moor
At least into a jealousy so strong
That judgment cannot cure. Which thing to do, [trash
If this poor trash of Venice, whom I
For his quick hunting, stand the putting on, [hip;
I'll have our Michael Cassio on the Abuse him to the Moor in the rank garb,— [too,—
For I fear Cassio with my night-cap
Make the Moor thank me, love me and reward me,
For making him egregiously an ass
And practising upon his peace and quiet [confused:
Even to madness. 'Tis here, but yet
Knavery's plain face is never seen till used.

[Exit.

SCENE II.—The Same. A Street.

Enter a Herald with a Proclamation; People following.

Her. It is Othello's pleasure, our noble and valiant general, that, upon certain tidings now arrived, importing the mere perdition of the Turkish fleet, every man put himself into triumph; some to dance, some to make bonfires, each man to what sport and revels his addiction leads him; for, besides these beneficial news, it is the celebration of his nuptial. So much was his pleasure should be proclaimed. All offices are open; and there is full liberty of feasting from this present hour of five till the bell have told eleven. Heaven bless the isle of Cyprus and our noble general, Othello! [Exeunt.

SCENE III.—The Same. A Hall in the Castle.

Enter OTHELLO, DESDEMONA, CASSIO, and Attendants.

Oth. Good Michael, look you to the guard to-night: [stop,
Let 's teach ourselves that honourable
Not to out-sport discretion.

Cas. Iago hath direction what to do;
But, notwithstanding, with my personal eye
Will I look to 't.

Oth. Iago is most honest.
Michael, good night: to-morrow with your earliest
Let me have speech with you. [To DESDEMONA] Come, my dear love, [ensue;
The purchase made, the fruits are to
That profit 's yet to come 'twixt me and you.—
Good night. [Attendants.

Exeunt OTHELLO, DESDEMONA, and

Enter IAGO.

Cas. Welcome, Iago; we must to the watch.

Iago. Not this hour, lieutenant; 'tis not yet ten o' the clock. Our general cast us thus early for the love of his Desdemona; whom let us not therefore blame: he hath not yet made wanton the night with her, and she is sport for Jove.

Cas. She 's a most exquisite lady.

Iago. And, I'll warrant her, full of game. [delicate creature.

Cas. Indeed she 's a most fresh and Iago. What an eye she has! methinks it sounds a parley of provocation. [thinks right modest.

Cas. An inviting eye; and yet me-

Iago. And when she speaks, is it not an alarum to love?

Cas. She is indeed perfection.

Iago. Well, happiness to their sheets! Come, lieutenant, I have a stoup of wine; and here without are a brace of Cyprus gallants that would fain have a measure to the health of the black Othello.

Cas. Not to-night, good Iago: I have very poor and unhappy brains for drinking: I could well wish courtesy would invent some other custom of entertainment.

Iago. O, they are our friends; but one cup: I'll drink for you.

Cas. I have drunk but one cup to-night, and that was craftily qualified too, and behold what innovation it makes here: I am unfortunate in the infirmity, and dare not task my weakness with any more.

Iago. What, man! 'tis a night of revels: the gallants desire it.

Cas. Where are they?

Iago. Here at the door; I pray you, call them in.

Cas. I'll do 't; but it dislikes me. [Exit.

Iago. If I can fasten but one cup upon him, [night already,
With that which he hath drunk to-
He'll be as full of quarrel and offence
As my young mistress' dog. Now, my sick fool, Roderigo,
Whom love hath turn'd almost the wrong side out,
To Desdemona hath to-night caroused
Potations pottle-deep; and he 's to watch: [spirits,
Three lads of Cyprus,—noble swelling
That hold their honours in a wary distance,
The very elements of this warlike isle,—
Have I to-night fluster'd with flowing cups, [flock of drunkards,
And they watch too. Now, 'mongst this
Am I to put our Cassio in some action
That may offend the isle.—But here they come:

If consequence do but approve my dream,
My boat sails freely, both with wind and stream.

Re-enter CASSIO; with him MONTANO, and Gentlemen; Servants following with wine.

Cas. 'Fore God, they have given me a rouse already.

Mon. Good faith, a little one; not past a pint, as I am a soldier.

Iago. Some wine, ho! [Sings.

'And let me the canakin clink, clink;
And let me the canakin clink:
A soldier 's a man;
A life 's but a span;
Why then let a soldier drink.'

Some wine, boys!

Cas. 'Fore God, an excellent song.

Iago. I learned it in England, where indeed they are most potent in potting: your Dane, your German, and your swag-bellied Hollander—Drink, ho!—are nothing to your English.

Cas. Is your Englishman so expert in his drinking?

Iago. Why, he drinks you with facility your Dane dead drunk; he sweats not to overthrow your Almain; he gives your Hollander a vomit ere the next pottle can be filled.

Cas. To the health of our general!

Mon. I am for it, lieutenant; and I'll do you justice.

Iago. O sweet England! [Sings.

'King Stephen was a worthy peer,
His breeches cost him but a crown;
He held them sixpence all too dear,
With that he call'd the tailor lown.

'He was a wight of high renown,
And thou art but of low degree:
'Tis pride that pulls the country down;
Then take thine auld cloak about thee.'

Some wine, ho!

Cas. Why, this is a more exquisite song than the other.

Iago. Will you hear 't again?

Cas. No; for I hold him to be unworthy of his place that does those things. Well, God 's above all; and there be souls must be saved, and there be souls must not be saved.

Iago. It 's true, good lieutenant.

Cas. For mine own part—no offence to the general, nor any man of quality—I hope to be saved.

Iago. And so do I too, lieutenant.

Cas. Ay, but, by your leave, not before me; the lieutenant is to be saved before the ancient. Let 's have no more of this; let 's to our affairs. God forgive us our sins! Gentlemen, let 's look to our business. Do not think, gentlemen, I am drunk: this is my ancient; this is my right hand, and this is my left hand. I am not drunk now; I can stand well enough, and speak well enough.

All. Excellent well.

Cas. Why, very well then; you must not think then that I am drunk. [Exit.

Mon. To the platform, masters; come, let 's set the watch. [before;

Iago. You see this fellow that is gone
He is a soldier fit to stand by Cæsar
And give direction: and do but see his vice;
'Tis to his virtue a just equinox,
The one as long as the other: 'tis pity of him.
I fear the trust Othello puts him in,
On some odd time of his infirmity,
Will shake this island.

Mon. But is he often thus?

Iago. 'Tis evermore the prologue to his sleep:
He'll watch the horologe a double set,
If drink rock not his cradle.

Mon. It were well
The general were put in mind of it.
Perhaps he sees it not; or his good nature
Prizes the virtue that appears in Cassio,
And looks not on his evils. Is not this true?

Enter RODERIGO.

Iago. [Aside to him.] How now, Roderigo!
I pray you, after the lieutenant; go.
[Exit RODERIGO.

Mon. And 'tis great pity that the noble Moor [second
Should hazard such a place as his own
With one of an ingraft infirmity:
It were an honest action to say
So to the Moor.

Iago. Not I, for this fair island:
I do love Cassio well, and would do much [what noise?
To cure him of this evil.—But, hark!
[A cry within: 'Help! help!'

Re-enter CASSIO, driving in RODERIGO.

Cas. You rogue! you rascal!
Mon. What 's the matter, lieutenant?
Cas. A knave teach me my duty!
I'll beat the knave into a twiggen bottle.
Rod. Beat me!
Cas. Dost thou prate, rogue? [Striking RODERIGO.
Mon. Nay, good lieutenant; [Staying him.
I pray you, sir, hold your hand.
Cas. Let me go, sir,
Or I'll knock you o'er the mazzard.
Mon. Come, come; you're drunk.
Cas. Drunk! [They fight.
Iago. [Aside to RODERIGO.] Away, I say! go out, and cry a mutiny. [Exit RODERIGO.
Nay, good lieutenant! God's will, gentlemen!
Help, ho!—Lieutenant,—sir,—Montano,—sir;—
Help, masters!—Here 's a goodly watch indeed! [Bell rings.
Who 's that that rings the bell?—Diablo, ho!
The town will rise: God's will, lieutenant, hold!
You will be shamed for ever.

Re-enter OTHELLO, and Attendants.

Oth. What is the matter here?
Mon. 'Zounds, I bleed still; I am hurt to the death. [Faints.
Oth. Hold, for your lives!
Iago. Hold, ho! Lieutenant,—sir,—Montano,—gentlemen,—
Have you forgot all sense of place and duty?
Hold! the general speaks to you; hold, hold, for shame!
Oth. Why, how now, ho! from whence ariseth this?
Are we turn'd Turks, and to ourselves do that [mites?
Which heaven hath forbid the Ottoman
For Christian shame, put by this barbarous brawl: [rage
He that stirs next to carve for his own
Holds his soul light; he dies upon his motion. [the isle
Silence that dreadful bell! it frights
From her propriety.—What is the matter, masters?—
Honest Iago, that look'st dead with grieving, [charge thee.
Speak, who began this? on thy love, I
Iago. I do not know: friends all but now, even now, [groom
In quarter, and in terms like bride and Devesting them for bed; and then, but now—
As if some planet had unwitted men—
Swords out, and tilting one at other's breast,
In opposition bloody. I cannot speak
Any beginning to this peevish odds;
And would in action glorious I had lost
Those legs that brought me to a part of it! [are thus forgot?
Oth. How comes it, Michael, you
Cas. I pray you, pardon me: I cannot speak. [wont be civil;
Oth. Worthy Montano, you were
The gravity and stillness of your youth
The world hath noted, and your name is great [the matter,
In mouths of wisest censure; what 's
That you unlace your reputation thus,
And spend your rich opinion for the name [to it.
Of a night-brawler? give me answer
Mon. Worthy Othello, I am hurt to danger:
Your officer, Iago, can inform you—
While I spare speech, which something now offends me,—
Of all that I do know: nor know I aught [night;
By me that 's said or done amiss this
Unless self-charity be sometime a vice;
And to defend ourselves it be a sin
When violence assails us.
Oth. Now, by heaven,
My blood begins my safer guides to rule; [ment collied,
And passion, having my best judg-
Assays to lead the way: if I once stir,
Or do but lift this arm, the best of you
Shall sink in my rebuke. Give me to know [on;
How this foul rout began, who set it
And he that is approved in this offence,
Though he had twinn'd with me, both at a birth, [war,
Shall lose me. What! in a town of
Yet wild, the people's hearts brimful of fear, [rel,
To manage private and domestic quar-
In night, and on the court of guard and safety!

'Tis monstrous. Iago, who began it?

Mon. If partially affined, or leagued in office,

Thou dost deliver more or less than truth,
Thou art no soldier.

Iago. Touch me not so near:
I had rather have this tongue cut from my mouth
Than it should do offence to Michael Cassio;
Yet, I persuade myself, to speak the truth
Shall nothing wrong him. Thus it is, general.
Montano and myself being in speech,
There comes a fellow crying out for help,
And Cassio following him with determined sword,
To execute upon him. Sir, this gentleman
Steps in to Cassio and entreats his pause:
Myself the crying fellow did pursue,
Lest by his clamour—as it so fell out—
The town might fall in fright: he, swift of foot,
Outran my purpose; and I return'd the rather
For that I heard the clink and fall of swords,
And Cassio high in oath; which till to-night
I ne'er might say before. When I came back—
For this was brief—I found them close together,
At blow and thrust; even as again they were
When you yourself did part them.
More of this matter cannot I report:
But men are men; the best sometimes forget:
Though Cassio did some little wrong to him,
As men in rage strike those that wish them best,
Yet surely Cassio, I believe, received
From him that fled some strange indignity,
Which patience could not pass.

Oth. I know, Iago,
Thy honesty and love doth mince this matter,
Making it light to Cassio. Cassio, I love thee;
But never more be officer of mine.

Re-enter DESDEMONA, attended.

Look, if my gentle love be not raised up!—
I'll make thee an example.

Des. What's the matter?

Oth. All 's well now, sweeting; come away to bed.

[To MONTANO] Sir, for your hurts, myself will be your surgeon:
Lead him off. [MONTANO is led off.
Iago, look with care about the town,
And silence those whom this vile brawl distracted.
Come, Desdemona: 'tis the soldiers' life
To have their balmy slumbers waked with strife.

[Exeunt all but IAGO and CASSIO.

Iago. What, are you hurt, lieutenant?

Cas. Ay, past all surgery.

Iago. Marry, heaven forbid!

Cas. Reputation, reputation, reputation! O, I have lost my reputation! I have lost the immortal part of myself, and what remains is bestial. My reputation, Iago, my reputation!

Iago. As I am an honest man, I thought you had received some bodily wound; there is more offence in that than in reputation. Reputation is an idle and most false imposition; oft got without merit, and lost without deserving: you have lost no reputation at all, unless you repute yourself such a loser. What, man! there are ways to recover the general again: you are but now cast in his mood, a punishment more in policy than in malice; even so as one would beat his offenceless dog to affright an imperious lion: sue to him again, and he 's yours.

Cas. I will rather sue to be despised than to deceive so good a commander with so slight, so drunken, and so indiscreet an officer. Drunk? and speak parrot? and squabble? swagger? swear? and discourse fustian with one's own shadow? O thou invisible spirit of wine, if thou hast no name to be known by, let us call thee devil!

Iago. What was he that you followed with your sword? What had he done to you?

Cas. I know not.

Iago. Is 't possible?

Cas. I remember a mass of things, but nothing distinctly; a quarrel, but nothing wherefore. O God, that men should put an enemy in their mouths to steal away their brains! that we should, with joy, pleasance, revel and applause, transform ourselves into beasts!

Iago. Why, but you are now well enough: how came you thus recovered?

Cas. It hath pleased the devil drunkenness to give place to the devil wrath: one unperfectness shows me another, to make me frankly despise myself.

Iago. Come, you are too severe a moraler: as the time, the place, and the condition of this country stands, I could heartily wish this had not befallen; but, since it is as it is, mend it for your own good.

Cas. I will ask him for my place again; he shall tell me I am a drunkard! Had I as many mouths as Hydra, such an answer would stop them all. To be now a sensible man, by and by a fool, and presently a beast! O strange! Every inordinate cup is unblest, and the ingredient is a devil.

Iago. Come, come, good wine is a good familiar creature, if it be well used: exclaim no more against it. And, good lieutenant, I think you think I love you.

Cas. I have well approved it, sir.—

Iago. You, or any man living, may be drunk at some time, man. I'll tell you what you shall do. Our general's wife is now the general:—I may say so in this respect, for that he hath devoted and given up himself to the contemplation, mark, and denotement of her parts and graces:—confess yourself freely to her; importune her help to put you in your place again: she is of so free, so kind, so apt, so blessed a disposition, she holds it a vice in her goodness not to do more than she is requested: this broken joint between you and her husband entreat her to splinter; and, my fortunes against any lay worth naming, this crack of your love shall grow stronger than it was before.

Cas. You advise me well.

Iago. I protest, in the sincerity of love and honest kindness.

Cas. I think it freely; and betimes in the morning I will beseech the virtuous Desdemona to undertake for me: I am desperate of my fortunes if they check me here.

Iago. You are in the right. Good night, lieutenant; I must to the watch.

Cas. Good night, honest Iago. [Exit.

Iago. And what 's he then that says
I play the villain? [honest,
When this advice is free I give and Probal to thinking, and indeed the course [easy
To win the Moor again? For 'tis most
The inclining Desdemona to subdue
In any honest suit: she 's framed as fruitful [her
As the free elements. And then for
To win the Moor,—were 't to renounce his baptism, [sin,—
All seals and symbols of redeemed
His soul is so enfetter'd to her love,
That she may make, unmake, do what she list,
Even as her appetite shall play the god
With his weak function. How am I then a villain [course,
To counsel Cassio to this parallel
Directly to his good? Divinity of hell!
When devils will their blackest sins put on, [shows,
They do suggest at first with heavenly
As I do now: for whiles this honest fool
Plies Desdemona to repair his fortunes,
And she for him pleads strongly to the Moori,
I'll pour this pestilence into his ear,
That she repeals him for her body's lust; [him good,
And, by how much she strives to do
She shall undo her credit with the Moor.
So will I turn her virtue into pitch;
And out of her own goodness make the net
That shall enmesh them all.

Re-enter RODERIGO.

How now, Roderigo!

Rod. I do follow here in the chase, not like a hound that hunts, but one that fills up the cry. My money is almost spent; I have been to-night exceedingly well cudgelled; and I think the issue will be, I shall have so much experience for my pains; and so, with no money at all and a little more wit, return again to Venice.

Iago. How poor are they that have not patience! [degrees?
What wound did ever heal but by
Thou know'st we work by wit, and not by witchcraft;

And wit depends on dilatory time.
Does 't not go well? Cassio hath beaten thee,
And thou, by that small hurt, hast cashier'd Cassio: [the sun,
Though other things grow fair against
Yet fruits that blossom first will first be ripe: [:tis morning;
Content thyself awhile. By the mass, [leted:
Pleasure and action make the hours seem short.
Retire thee; go where thou art bil-
Away, I say; thou shalt know more hereafter:
Nay, get thee gone. [Exit RODERIGO.
Two things are to be done:
My wife must move for Cassio to her mistress;
I'll set her on; [apart,
Myself the while to draw the Moor
And bring him jump when he may Cassio find [way:
Soliciting his wife:—ay, that 's the Dull not device by coldness and delay.
[Exit.

ACT III.

SCENE I.—Cyprus. Before the Castle

Enter CASSIO, and some Musicians.

Cas. Masters, play here; I will content your pains;
Something that 's brief; and bid 'Good-morrow, general.' [Music.

Enter Clown.

Clo. Why, masters, have your instruments been at Naples, that they speak i' the nose thus?

First Mus. How, sir, how!

Clo. Are these, I pray you, wind-instruments?

First Mus. Ay, marry, are they, sir.

Clo. O, thereby hangs a tail. [sir?

First Mus. Whereby hangs a tale,

Clo. Marry, sir, by many a wind-instrument that I know. But, masters, here 's money for you: and the general so likes your music, that he desires you, for love's sake, to make no more noise with it.

First Mus. Well, sir, we will not.

Clo. If you have any music that may not be heard, to 't again: but, as they say, to hear music the general does not greatly care.

First Mus. We have none such, sir.

Clo. Then put up your pipes in your bag, for I'll away: go; vanish into air; away! [Exeunt Musicians.

Cas. Dost thou hear, my honest friend? [friend; I hear you.

Clo. No, I hear not your honest

Cas. Prithee, keep up thy quillets. There 's a poor piece of gold for thee: if the gentlewoman that attends the general's wife be stirring, tell her there's one Cassio entreats her a little favour of speech: wilt thou do this?

Clo. She is stirring, sir: if she will stir hither, I shall seem to notify unto her.

Cas. Do, good my friend.
[Exit Clown.

Enter IAGO.

In happy time, Iago.

Iago. You have not been a-bed, then?

Cas. Why, no; the day had broke
Before we parted. I have made bold, Iago, [her
To send in to your wife: my suit to
Is, that she will to virtuous Desdemona
Procure me some access. [ently;

Iago. I'll send her to you pres-
And I'll devise a mean to draw the Moor [business
Out of the way, that your converse and
May be more free.

Cas. I humbly thank you for 't. [Exit IAGO.] I never knew
A Florentine more kind and honest.

Enter EMILIA.

Emil. Good-morrow, good lieutenant: I am sorry
For your displeasure; but all will sure be well. [it,
The general and his wife are talking of
And she speaks for you stoutly: the Moor replies, [Cyprus
That he you hurt is of great fame in
And great affinity; and that in wholesome wisdom
He might not but refuse you; but he protests he loves you,
And needs no other suitor but his likings [front
To take the safest occasion by the
To bring you in again.

Cas. Yet, I beseech you,—
If you think fit, or that it may be done,—

Give me advantage of some brief discourse
With Desdemona alone.
Emil. Pray you, come in:
I will bestow you where you shall have time
To speak your bosom freely.
Cas. I am much bound to you.
[Exeunt.

SCENE II.—The Same. A Room in the Castle.

Enter OTHELLO, IAGO, and Gentlemen.

Oth. These letters give, Iago, to the pilot;
And by him do my duties to the senate:
That done, I will be walking on the works;
Repair there to me.
Iago. Well, my good lord, I'll do 't.
Oth. This fortification, gentlemen, shall we see 't?
Gent. We'll wait upon your lordship.
[Exeunt.

SCENE III.—The Same. Garden of the Castle.

Enter DESDEMONA, CASSIO, and EMILIA.

Des. Be thou assured, good Cassio, I will do
All my abilities in thy behalf.
Emil. Good madam, do: I warrant it grieves my husband,
As if the case were his.
Des. O, that 's an honest fellow. Do not doubt, Cassio,
But I will have my lord and you again
As friendly as you were.
Cas. Bounteous madam,
Whatever shall become of Michael Cassio,
He 's never any thing but your true servant.
Des. I know 't; I thank you. You do love my lord:
You have known him long; and be you well assured
He shall in strangeness stand no further off
Than in a politic distance.
Cas. Ay, but, lady,
That policy may either last so long,
Or feed upon such nice and waterish diet,
Or breed itself so out of circumstance,
That, I being absent and my place supplied,
My general will forget my love and service.
Des. Do not doubt that; before Emilia here
I give thee warrant of thy place: assure thee,
If I do vow a friendship, I'll perform it
To the last article: my lord shall never rest;
I'll watch him tame and talk him out of patience;
His bed shall seem a school, his board a shrift;
I'll intermingle every thing he does
With Cassio's suit: therefore be merry, Cassio;
For thy solicitor shall rather die
Than give thy cause away.

Enter OTHELLO and IAGO, at a distance.

Emil. Madam, here comes my lord.
Cas. Madam, I'll take my leave.
Des. Why, stay, and hear me speak.
Cas. Madam, not now: I am very ill at ease,
Unfit for mine own purposes.
Des. Well, do your discretion.
[Exit CASSIO.
Iago. Ha! I like not that.
Oth. What dost thou say?
Iago. Nothing, my lord: or if—I know not what.
Oth. Was not that Cassio parted from my wife?
Iago. Cassio, my lord! No, sure, I cannot think it,
That he would steal away so guilty-like,
Seeing you coming.
Oth. I do believe 'twas he.
Des. How now, my lord!
I have been talking with a suitor here,
A man that languishes in your displeasure.
Oth. What is 't you mean?
Des. Why, your lieutenant, Cassio. Good my lord,
If I have any grace or power to move you,
His present reconciliation take;
For if he be not one that truly loves you,
That errs in ignorance and not in cunning,
I have no judgment in an honest face:
I prithee, call him back.
Oth. Went he hence now?
Des. Ay, sooth; so humbled,
That he hath left part of his grief with me,
To suffer with him. Good love, call him back.
Oth. Not now, sweet Desdemona; some other time.
Des. But shall 't be shortly?

Oth. The sooner, sweet, for you.
Des. Shall 't be to-night at supper?
Oth. No, not to-night.
Des. To-morrow dinner, then?
Oth. I shall not dine at home;
I meet the captains at the citadel.
Des. Why then, to-morrow night; or Tuesday morn;
Or Tuesday noon, or night; or Wednesday morn:— [not
I pray thee, name the time; but let it
Exceed three days: in faith, he 's penitent; [reason—
And yet his trespass, in our common
Save that, they say, the wars must make examples [fault
Out of their best—is not almost a
To incur a private check. When shall he come?
Tell me, Othello: I wonder in my soul,
What you could ask me, that I should deny, [Michael Cassio,
Or stand so mammering on. What!
That came a-wooing with you, and so many a time, [ingly,
When I have spoke of you dispraisHath ta'en your part; to have so much to do [do much—
To bring him in! Trust me, I could
Oth. Prithee, no more: let him come when he will;
I will deny thee nothing.
Des. Why, this is not a boon;
'Tis as I should entreat you wear your gloves, [you warm,
Or feed on nourishing dishes, or keep
Or sue to you to do a peculiar profit
To your own person: nay, when I have a suit [indeed,
Wherein I mean to touch your love
It shall be full of poise and difficult weight,
And fearful to be granted.
Oth. I will deny thee nothing:
Whereon, I do beseech thee, grant me this,
To leave me but a little to myself.
Des. Shall I deny you? no: farewell, my lord:
Oth. Farewell, my Desdemona: I'll come to thee straight.
Des. Emilia, come. [To OTHELLO] Be it as your fancies teach you;
Whate'er you be, I am obedient.
[Exit, with EMILIA.

Oth. Excellent wretch! Perdition catch my soul, [thee not,
But I do love thee! and when I love
Chaos is come again.
Iago. My noble lord,—
Oth. What dost thou say, Iago?
Iago. Did Michael Cassio, when you woo'd my lady,
Know of your love?
Oth. He did, from first to last: why dost thou ask? [thought;
Iago. But for a satisfaction of my
No further harm.
Oth. Why of thy thought, Iago?
Iago. I did not think he had been acquainted with her.
Oth. O, yes; and went between us very oft.
Iago. Indeed!
Oth. Indeed! ay, indeed: discern'st thou aught in that?
Is he not honest?
Iago. Honest, my lord!
Oth. Honest! ay, honest.
Iago. My lord, for aught I know.
Oth. What dost thou think?
Iago. Think, my lord!
Oth. Think, my lord!
By heaven, he echoes me,
As if there were some monster in his thought
Too hideous to be shown. Thou dost mean something:
I heard thee say even now, thou likedst not that, [not like?
When Cassio left my wife: what didst
And when I told thee he was of my counsel [criedst 'Indeed!'
In my whole course of wooing, thou
And didst contract and purse thy brow together, [brain
As if thou then hadst shut up in thy
Some horrible conceit: if thou dost love me,
Show me thy thought.
Iago. My lord, you know I love you.
Oth. I think thou dost;
And, for I know thou 'rt full of love and honesty,
And weigh'st thy words before thou givest them breath,
Therefore these stops of thine fright me the more: [knave,
For such things, in a false disloyal
Are tricks of custom; but, in a man that 's just.

They 're close denotements, working from the heart,
That passion cannot rule.
Iago. For Michael Cassio,
I dare be sworn I think that he is honest.
Oth. I think so too. [seem;
Iago. Men should be what they
Or those that be not, would they might seem none! [they seem.
Oth. Certain, men should be what
Iago. Why then, I think Cassio 's an honest man.
Oth. Nay, yet there 's more in this:
I pray thee, speak to me as to thy thinkings,
As thou dost ruminate; and give thy worst of thoughts
The worst of words.
Iago. Good my lord, pardon me:
Though I am bound to every act of duty,
I am not bound to that all slaves are free to.
Utter my thoughts? Why, say they are vile and false; [things
As where 's that palace whereinto foul
Sometimes intrude not? who has a breast so pure,
But some uncleanly apprehensions
Keep leets and law-days, and in session sit
With meditations lawful?
Oth. Thou dost conspire against thy friend, Iago,
If thou but think'st him wrong'd and makest his ear
A stranger to thy thoughts.
Iago. I do beseech you—
Though I perchance am vicious in my guess,
As, I confess, it is my nature's plague
To spy into abuses, and oft my jealousy
Shapes faults that are not—that your wisdom yet, [ceits,
From one that so imperfectly con-
Would take no notice, nor build yourself a trouble [vance.
Out of his scattering and unsure obser-
It were not for your quiet nor your good, [wisdom,
Nor for my manhood, honesty, or
To let you know my thoughts.
Oth. What dost thou mean?
Iago. Good name in man and woman, dear my lord,
Is the immediate jewel of their souls:
Who steals my purse steals trash; 'tis something, nothing;
'Twas mine, 'tis his, and has been slave to thousands; [name
But he that filches from me my good
Robs me of that which not enriches him
And makes me poor indeed.
Oth. By heaven, I'll know thy thoughts.
Iago. You cannot, if my heart were in your hand; [tody.
Nor shall not, whilst 'tis in my cus-
Oth. Ha! [jealousy;
Iago. O, beware, my lord, of
It is the green-eyed monster which doth mock [lives in bliss
The meat it feeds on: that cuckold
Who, certain of his fate, loves not his wronger; [o'er
But, O, what damned minutes tells he
Who dotes, yet doubts; suspects, yet strongly loves!
Oth. O misery! [rich enough;
Iago. Poor and content is rich, and
But riches fineless is as poor as winter
To him that ever fears he shall be poor.
Good heaven, the souls of all my tribe defend
From jealousy!
Oth. Why, why is this?
Think'st thou I'd make a life of jealousy,
To follow still the changes of the moon
With fresh suspicions? No; to be once in doubt
Is, once to be resolved: exchange me for a goat, [soul
When I shall turn the business of my
To such exsufflicate and blown surmises, [make me jealous
Matching thy inference. 'Tis not to
To say my wife is fair, feeds well, loves company, [dances well;
Is free of speech, sings, plays and
Where virtue is, these are more virtuous: [I draw
Nor from mine own weak merits will
The smallest fear or doubt of her revolt; [Iago;
For she had eyes, and chose me. No,
I'll see before I doubt; when I doubt, prove; [this,—
And on the proof, there is no more but
Away at once with love or jealousy!
Iago. I am glad of it; for now I shall have reason [you
To show the love and duty that I bear
With franker spirit: therefore, as I am bound,

Receive it from me. I speak not yet of proof.
Look to your wife; observe her well with Cassio; [secure:
Wear your eye thus, not jealous nor
I would not have your free and noble nature,
Out of self-bounty, be abused; look to 't:
I know our country disposition well;
In Venice they do let heaven see the pranks [their best conscience
They dare not show their husbands;
Is not to leave 't undone, but keep 't unknown.
Oth. Dost thou say so?
Iago. She did deceive her father, marrying you;
And when she seem'd to shake, and fear your looks,
She loved them most.
Oth. And so she did.
Iago. Why, go to then;
She that, so young, could give out such a seeming, [oak—
To seel her father's eyes up close as
He thought 'twas witchcraft:—but I am much to blame; [don
I humbly do beseech you of your par-
For too much loving you.
Oth. I am bound to thee for ever.
Iago. I see this hath a little dash'd your spirits.
Oth. Not a jot, not a jot.
Iago. I' faith, I fear it has.
I hope you will consider what is spoke
Comes from my love. But I do see you're moved: [speech
I am to pray you not to strain my
To grosser issues nor to larger reach
Than to suspicion.
Oth. I will not.
Iago. Should you do so, my lord,
My speech should fall into such vile success
As my thoughts aim not at. Cassio 's my worthy friend—
My lord, I see you're moved.
Oth. No, not much moved:
I do not think but Desdemona 's honest.
Iago. Long live she so! and long live you to think so!
Oth. And yet, how nature erring from itself—
Iago. Ay, there 's the point: as,—to be bold with you—
Not to affect many proposed matches
Of her own clime, complexion, and degree, [tends—
Whereto we see in all things nature
Foh! one may smell in such a will most rank,
Foul disproportion, thoughts unnatural.
But pardon me; I do not in position
Distinctly speak of her; though I may fear [ment,
Her will, recoiling to her better judg-
May fall to match you with her country forms,
And happily repent.
Oth. Farewell, farewell:
If more thou dost perceive, let me know more; [me, Iago.
Set on thy wife to observe: leave
Iago. [Going.] My lord, I take my leave.
Oth. Why did I marry? This honest creature, doubtless,
Sees and knows more, much more, than he unfolds.
Iago. [Returning.] My lord, I would I might entreat your honour
To scan this thing no further; leave it to time: [place,
Though it be fit that Cassio have his
For sure he fills it up with great ability,
Yet, if you please to hold him off awhile,
You shall by that perceive him and his means: [ment
Note if your lady strain his entertain-
With any strong or vehement importunity; [meantime,
Much will be seen in that. In the
Let me be thought too busy in my fears—
As worthy cause I have to fear I am—
And hold her free, I do beseech your honour.
Oth. Fear not my government.
Iago. I once more take my leave. [Exit.
Oth. This fellow 's of exceeding honesty, [spirit,
And knows all qualities, with a learned
Of human dealings. If I do prove her haggard, [heart-strings,
Though that her jesses were my dear
I'd whistle her off and let her down the wind, [black
To prey at fortune. Haply, for I am
And have not those soft parts of conversation [declined
That chamberers have, or for I am

Into the vale of years,—yet that 's not much—
She 's gone: I am abused; and my relief
Must be—to loathe her. O curse of marriage,
That we can call these delicate creatures ours,
And not their appetites! I had rather be a toad,
And live upon the vapour of a dungeon,
Than keep a corner in the thing I love
For others' uses. Yet, 'tis the plague of great ones;
Prerogatived are they less than the base;
'Tis destiny unshunnable, like death:
Even then this forked plague is fated to us
When we do quicken. Desdemona comes:

Re-enter DESDEMONA and EMILIA.

If she be false, O, then heaven mocks itself!
I'll not believe it.

Des. How now, my dear Othello!
Your dinner, and the generous islanders
By you invited, do attend your presence.

Oth. I am to blame.

Des. Why is your speech so faint? are you not well?

Oth. I have a pain upon my forehead here.

Des. Faith, that 's with watching; 'twill away again:
Let me but bind it hard, within this hour
It will be well.

Oth. Your napkin is too little;

[He puts the handkerchief from him, and it drops.

Let it alone. Come, I'll go in with you.

Des. I am very sorry that you are not well.

[Exeunt OTHELLO and DESDEMONA.

Emil. I am glad I have found this napkin:
This was her first remembrance from the Moor:
My wayward husband hath a hundred times
Woo'd me to steal it; but she so loves the token,
For he conjured her she should ever keep it,
That she reserves it evermore about her
To kiss and talk to. I'll have the work ta'en out,
And give 't Iago: what he'll do with it heaven knows, not I;
I nothing but to please his fantasy.

Re-enter IAGO.

Iago. How now! what do you here alone?

Emil. Do not you chide; I have a thing for you.

Iago. A thing for me? it is a common thing—

Emil. Ha!

Iago. To have a foolish wife.

Emil. O, is that all? What will you give me now
For that same handkerchief?

Iago. What handkerchief?

Emil. What handkerchief!
Why, that the Moor first gave to Desdemona;
That which so often you did bid me steal.

Iago. Hast stol'n it from her?

Emil. No, faith; she let it drop by negligence;
And, to the advantage, I, being here, took 't up.
Look, here it is.

Iago. A good wench; give it me.

Emil. What will you do with 't, that you have been so earnest
To have me filch it?

Iago. [Snatching it.] Why, what 's that to you?

Emil. If 't be not for some purpose of import,
Give 't me again: poor lady, she 'll run mad
When she shall lack it.

Iago. Be not acknown on 't; I have use for it.
Go, leave me. [Exit EMILIA.
I will in Cassio's lodging lose this napkin,
And let him find it. Trifles light as air
Are to the jealous confirmations strong
As proofs of holy writ: this may do something.
The Moor already changes with my poison:
Dangerous conceits are in their natures poisons,
Which at the first are scarce found to distaste,
But with a little act upon the blood,
Burn like the mines of sulphur.—I did say so:
Look, where he comes!

Re-enter OTHELLO.

Not poppy, nor mandragora,
Nor all the drowsy syrups of the world,
Shall ever medicine thee to that sweet sleep
Which thou owedst yesterday.

Oth. Ha! ha! false to me?

Iago. Why, how now, general! no more of that.

Oth. Avaunt! be gone! thou hast set me on the rack:
I swear 'tis better to be much abused
Than but to know 't a little.
Iago. How now, my lord!
Oth. What sense had I of her stol'n hours of lust? [not me:
I saw 't not, thought it not, it harm'd
I slept the next night well, was free and merry;
I found not Cassio's kisses on her lips:
He that is robb'd, not wanting what is stol'n, [robb'd at all.
Let him not know 't, and he 's not
Iago. I am sorry to hear this.
Oth. I had been happy, if the general camp, [body,
Pioneers and all, had tasted her sweet
So I had nothing known. O, now for ever [content!
Farewell the tranquil mind! farewell
Farewell the plumed troop, and the big wars, [well!
That make ambition virtue! O, fare-
Farewell the neighing steed, and the shrill trump,
The spirit-stirring drum, the ear-piercing fife,
The royal banner, and all quality,
Pride, pomp, and circumstance of glorious war! [rude throats
And, O you mortal engines, whose
The immortal Jove's dread clamours counterfeit, [gone!
Farewell! Othello's occupation 's
Iago. Is 't possible, my lord?
Oth. Villain, be sure thou prove my love a whore; [proof;
Be sure of it; give me the ocular
[Taking him by the throat.
Or, by the worth of man's eternal soul,
Thou hadst been better have been born a dog
Than answer my waked wrath!
Iago. Is 't come to this?
Oth. Make me to see 't; or, at the least, so prove it, [loop
That the probation bear no hinge nor
To hang a doubt on; or woe upon thy life!
Iago. My noble lord,— [torture me,
Oth. If thou dost slander her and Never pray more; abandon all remorse;
On horror's head horrors accumulate;
Do deeds to make heaven weep, all earth amazed;
For nothing canst thou to damnation add
Greater than that. [me!
Iago. O grace! O heaven defend
Are you a man? have you a soul or sense? [O wretched fool,
God be wi' you; take mine office.—
That livest to make thine honesty a vice! [note, O world,
O monstrous world! Take note, take
To be direct and honest is not safe.—
I thank you for this profit; and from hence [such offence.
I'll love no friend, sith love breeds
Oth. Nay, stay:—thou shouldst be honest. [esty 's a fool,
Iago. I should be wise; for hon-
And loses that it works for.
Oth. By the world,
I think my wife be honest, and think she is not; [thou art not:
I think that thou art just, and think
I'll have some proof. Her name, that was as fresh [black
As Dian's visage, is now begrimed and
As mine own face. If there be cords, or knives,
Poison, or fire, or suffocating streams,
I'll not endure it. Would I were satisfied! [with passion:
Iago. I see, sir, you are eaten up
I do repent me that I put it to you.
You would be satisfied?
Oth. Would! nay, I will.
Iago. And may: but, how? how satisfied, my lord?
Would you, the supervisor, grossly gape on—
Behold her tupp'd?
Oth. Death and damnation! O!
Iago. It were a tedious difficulty, I think, [them then,
To bring them to that prospect: damn
If ever mortal eyes do see them bolster
More than their own! What then? how then? [tion?
What shall I say? Where 's satisfac-
It is impossible you should see this,
Were they as prime as goats, as hot as monkeys, [gross
As salt as wolves in pride, and fools as
As ignorance made drunk. But yet, I say,
If imputation and strong circumstances,
Which lead directly to the door of truth, [have 't.
Will give you satisfaction, you may

Oth. Give me a living reason she 's disloyal.
Iago. I do not like the office :
But, sith, I am enter'd in this cause so far, [love,
Prick'd to 't by foolish honesty and I will go on. I lay with Cassio lately ;
And, being troubled with a raging tooth,
I could not sleep. [soul,
There are a kind of men so loose of
That in their sleeps will mutter their affairs :
One of this kind is Cassio :
In sleep I heard him say ' Sweet Desdemona,
Let us be wary, let us hide our loves ; '
And then, sir, would he gripe and wring my hand,
Cry ' O sweet creature ! ' and then kiss me hard,
As if he pluck'd up kisses by the roots,
That grew upon my lips : then laid his leg [and then
Over my thigh, and sigh'd, and kiss'd ;
Cried ' Cursed fate that gave thee to the Moor ! '
Oth. O monstrous ! monstrous !
Iago. Nay, this was but his dream.
Oth. But this denoted a foregone conclusion : [a dream.
'Tis a shrewd doubt, though it be but Iago. And this may help to thicken other proofs
That do demonstrate thinly.
Oth. I'll tear her all to pieces.
Iago. Nay, but be wise : yet we see nothing done ; [this,—
She may be honest yet. Tell me but
Have you not sometimes seen a handkerchief [wife's hand ?
Spotted with strawberries in your
Oth. I gave her such a one ; 'twas my first gift.
Iago. I know not that : but such a handkerchief— [to-day
I am sure it was your wife's—did I
See Cassio wipe his beard with.
Oth. If it be that,—
Iago. If it be that, or any that was hers, [proofs.
It speaks against her with the other
Oth. O, that the slave had forty thousand lives ! [venge.
One is too poor, too weak for my re-
Now do I see 'tis true. Look here, Iago;
All my fond love thus do I blow to heaven :
'Tis gone. [low cell !
Arise, black Vengeance, from thy hol-
Yield up, O Love, thy crown and hearted throne
To tyrannous Hate ! Swell, bosom, with thy fraught,
For 'tis of aspics' tongues !
Iago. Yet be content.
Oth. O, blood, blood, blood !
Iago. Patience, I say ; your mind perhaps may change.
Oth. Never, Iago. Like to the Pontic sea, [course
Whose icy current and compulsive
Ne'er feels retiring ebb, but keeps due on
To the Propontic and the Hellespont ;
Even so my bloody thoughts, with violent pace,
Shall ne'er look back, ne'er ebb to humble love,
Till that a capable and wide revenge
Swallow them up. Now, by yond marble heaven,
[Kneels.] In the due reverence of a sacred vow
And here engage my words.
Iago. Do not rise yet.
[Kneels.] Witness, you ever-burning lights above,
You elements that clip us round about,
Witness that here Iago doth give up
The execution of his wit, hands, heart,
To wrong'd Othello's service ! Let him command,
And to obey shall be in me remorse,
What bloody business ever. [They rise.
Oth. I greet thy love,
Not with vain thanks, but with acceptance bounteous, [to 't :
And will upon the instant put thee
Within these three days let me hear thee say
That Cassio 's not alive.
Iago. My friend is dead ; 'tis done at your request :
But let her live. [damn her !
Oth. Damn her, lewd minx ! O,
Come, go with me apart ; I will withdraw, [of death
To furnish me with some swift means
For the fair devil. Now art thou my lieutenant.
Iago. I am your own for ever.
[Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—The Same. Before the Castle.

Enter DESDEMONA, EMILIA, and Clown.

Des. Do you know, sirrah, where Lieutenant Cassio lies ?

Clo. I dare not say he lies anywhere.

Des. Why, man ?

Clo. He 's a soldier ; and for one to say a soldier lies, is stabbing.

Des. Go to : where lodges he ?

Clo. To tell you where he lodges, is to tell you where I lie.

Des. Can any thing be made of this ?

Clo. I know not where he lodges ; and for me to devise a lodging, and say he lies here or he lies there, were to lie in mine own throat.

Des. Can you inquire him out, and be edified by report ?

Clo. I will catechize the world for him ; that is, make questions, and by them answer.

Des. Seek him, bid him come hither : tell him I have moved my lord in his behalf, and hope all will be well.

Clo. To do this is within the compass of man's wit, and therefore I will attempt the doing it. [Exit.

Des. Where should I lose that handkerchief, Emilia ?

Emil. I know not, madam.

Des. Believe me, I had rather have lost my purse
Full of crusadoes ; and, but my noble
Is true of mind and made of no such baseness
As jealous creatures are, it were enough
To put him to ill thinking.

Emil. Is he not jealous ?

Des. Who, he ? I think the sun where he was born
Drew all such humours from him.

Emil. Look, where he comes.

Des. I will not leave him now till Cassio
Be call'd to him.

Enter OTHELLO.

How is 't with you, my lord ?

Oth. Well, my good lady. [Aside] O, hardness to dissemble !—
How do you, Desdemona ?

Des. Well, my good lord.

Oth. Give me your hand : this hand is moist, my lady.

Des. It yet has felt no age nor known no sorrow.

Oth. This argues fruitfulness and liberal heart :—
Hot, hot, and moist : this hand of yours requires
A sequester from liberty, fasting and prayer,
Much castigation, exercise devout ;
For here 's a young and sweating devil here,
That commonly rebels. 'Tis a good hand,
A frank one.

Des. You may, indeed, say so ;
For 'twas that hand that gave away my heart.

Oth. A liberal hand : the hearts of old gave hands ;
But our new heraldry is—hands, not hearts.

Des. I cannot speak of this. Come now, your promise.

Oth. What promise, chuck ?

Des. I have sent to bid Cassio come speak with you.

Oth. I have a salt and sullen rheum offends me ;
Lend me thy handkerchief.

Des. Here, my lord.

Oth. That which I gave you.

Des. I have it not about me.

Oth. Not ?

Des. No, indeed, my lord.

Oth. That is a fault.
That handkerchief
Did an Egyptian to my mother give ;
She was a charmer, and could almost read
The thoughts of people : she told her, while she kept it
'Twould make her amiable and subdue my father
Entirely to her love ; but if she lost it
Or made a gift of it, my father's eye
Should hold her loathed, and his spirits should hunt
After new fancies : she, dying, gave it me ;
And bid me, when my fate would have me wive,
To give it her. I did so : and take heed on 't ;
Make it a darling like your precious eye ;
To lose 't or give 't away were such perdition
As nothing else could match.

Des. Is 't possible ?

Oth. 'Tis true : there 's magic in the web of it :
A sibyl, that had number'd in the world
The sun to make two hundred compasses,

In her prophetic fury sew'd the work;
The worms were hallow'd that did breed the silk;
And it was dyed in mummy which the skilful
Conserved of maidens' hearts,
Des. Indeed! is 't true?
Oth. Most veritable; therefore look to 't well. [never seen it!
Des. Then would to God that I had
Oth. Ha! wherefore?
Des. Why do you speak so startingly and rash?
Oth. Is't lost? is't gone? speak, is it out o' the way?
Des. Heaven bless us!
Oth. Say you? [it were?
Des. It is not lost; but what an if Oth. How!
Des. I say, it is not lost.
Oth. Fetch 't, let me see it.
Des. Why, so I can, sir, but I will not now.
This is a trick to put me from my suit:
Pray you, let Cassio be received again.
Oth. Fetch me that handkerchief: my mind misgives.
Des. Come, come; [man.
You'll never meet a more sufficient
Oth. The handkerchief!
Des. I pray, talk me of Cassio.
Oth. The handkerchief!
Des. A man that all his time
Hath founded his good fortunes on your love,
Shared dangers with you,—
Oth. The handkerchief!
Des. In sooth, you are to blame.
Oth. Away! [Exit.
Emil. Is not this man jealous?
Des. I ne'er saw this before.
Sure, there 's some wonder in this handkerchief;
I am most unhappy in the loss of it.
Emil. 'Tis not a year or two shows us a man: [but food;
They are all but stomachs, and we all
They eat us hungerly, and when they are full [my husband.
They belch us. Look you! Cassio and Enter IAGO and CASSIO.

Iago. There is no other way; 'tis she must do 't:
And, lo, the happiness! go and importune her.

Des. How now, good Cassio! what's the news with you?
Cas. Madam, my former suit; I do beseech you [again
That by your virtuous means I may Exist, and be a member of his love
Whom I with all the duty of my heart
Entirely honour: I would not be delay'd.
If my offence be of such mortal kind,
That nor my service past nor present sorrows
Nor purposed merit in futurity,
Can ransom me into his love again,
But to know so must be my benefit;
So shall I clothe me in a forced content
And shut myself up in some other course
To Fortune's alms.
Des. Alas, thrice-gentle Cassio!
My advocation is not now in tune;
My lord is not my lord; nor should I know him, [alter'd.
Were he in favour as in humour
So help me every spirit sanctified,
As I have spoken for you all my best
And stood within the blank of his displeasure [be patient:
For my free speech! You must awhile
What I can do I will; and more I will
Than for myself I dare: let that suffice you.
Iago. Is my lord angry?
Emil. He went hence but now,
And certainly in strange unquietness.
Iago. Can he be angry? I have seen the cannon, [air,
When it hath blown his ranks into the
And, like the devil, from his very arm
Puff'd his own brother:—and can he be angry?
Something of moment then: I will go meet him: [angry.
There 's matter in 't indeed, if he be
Des. I prithee, do so. [Exit IAGO.
Something, sure, of state,
Either from Venice, or some unhatch'd practice
Made demonstrable here in Cyprus to him, [such cases
Hath puddled his clear spirit; and in
Men's natures wrangle with inferior things, ['Tis even so;
Though great ones are their object.
For let our finger ache, and it indues
Our other healthful members even to that sense

Of pain? nay, we must think men are not gods,
Nor of them look for such observancy
As fits the bridal. Beshrew me much, Emilia,
I was, unhandsome warrior as I am,
Arraigning his unkindness with my soul;
But now I find I had suborn'd the witness,
And he 's indited falsely.
Emil. Pray heaven it be state-matters, as you think, [toy
And no conception nor no jealous
Concerning you. [him cause.
Des. Alas the day! I never gave
Emil. But jealous souls will not be answer'd so;
They are not ever jealous for the cause,
But jealous for they are jealous: 'tis a monster
Begot upon itself, born on itself.
Des. Heaven keep that monster from Othello's mind!
Emil. Lady, amen.
Des. I will go seek him. Cassio, walk hereabout:
If I do find him fit, I'll move your suit,
And seek to effect it to my uttermost.
Cas. I humbly thank your ladyship.
[Exeunt DESDEMONA and EMILIA.

Enter BIANCA.

Bian. Save you, friend Cassio!
Cas. What make you from home?
How is it with you, my most fair Bianca? [your house.
I' faith, sweet love, I was coming to
Bian. And I was going to your lodging, Cassio. [and nights?
What, keep a week away? seven days
Eight score eight hours? and lovers' absent hours, [times?
More tedious than the dial eight score
O weary reckoning
Cas. Pardon me, Bianca;
I have this while with leaden thoughts been press'd; [time,
But I shall, in a more continuate
Strike off this score of absence. Sweet Bianca, [Giving her DESDEMONA'S handkerchief.
Take me this work out.
Bian. O Cassio, whence came this?
This is some token from a newer friend:
To the felt absence now I feel a cause:
Is 't come to this? Well, well.
Cas. Go to, woman!
Throw your vile guesses in the devil's teeth, [jealous now
From whence you have them. You are
That this is from some mistress, some remembrance:
No, in good troth, Bianca.
Bian. Why, whose is it?
Cas. I know not, sweet: I found it in my chamber.
I like the work well: ere it be demanded— [copied:
As like enough it will—I'd have it
Take it, and do 't; and leave me for this time.
Bian. Leave you! wherefore?
Cas. I do attend here on the general;
And think it no addition, nor my wish,
To have him see me woman'd.
Bian. Why, I pray you?
Cas. Not that I love you not.
Bian. But that you do not love me.
I pray you, bring me on the way a little;
And say if I shall see you soon at night.
Cas. 'Tis but a little way that I can bring you, [soon.
For I attend here; but I'll see you
Bian. 'Tis very good; I must be circumstanced. [Exeunt.

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—Cyprus. Before the Castle.

Enter OTHELLO and IAGO.

Iago. Will you think so?
Oth. Think so, Iago!
Iago. What,
To kiss in private?
Oth. An unauthorized kiss.
Iago. Or to be naked with her friend abed [harm?
An hour or more, not meaning any
Oth. Naked abed, Iago, and not mean harm!
It is hypocrisy against the devil: [so,
They that mean virtuously, and yet do
The devil their virtue tempts, and they tempt heaven.
Iago. So they do nothing, 'tis a venial slip:
But if I give my wife a handkerchief—
Oth. What then?
Iago. Why, then, 'tis hers, my lord; and, being hers, [man.
She may, I think, bestow 't on any
Oth. She is protectress of her honour too:

May she give that ?
Iago. Her honour is an essence that 's not seen ;
They have it very oft that have it not :
But for the handkerchief,—
Oth. By heaven, I would most gladly have forgot it : [memory,
Thou said'st—O, it comes o'er my
As doth the raven o'er the infected house, [chief.
Boding to all—he had my handker-
Iago. Ay, what of that ?
Oth. That 's not so good, now.
Iago. What,
If I had said I had seen him do you wrong ? [abroad,
Or heard him say,—as knaves be such
Who having, by their own importunate suit,
Or voluntary dotage of some mistress,
Convinced or supplied them, cannot choose
But they must blab—
Oth. Hath he said any thing ?
Iago. He hath, my lord ; but be you well assured,
No more than he'll unswear.
Oth. What hath he said ?
Iago. Faith, that he did—I know not what he did.
Oth. What ? what ?
Iago. Lie—
Oth. With her ? [will.
Iago. With her, on her ; what you
Oth. Lie with her ! lie on her !—We say lie on her, when they belie her.—Lie with her ! that 's fulsome ! Handkerchief—confessions—handkerchief ! —To confess, and be hanged for his labour. First, to be hanged, and then to confess :—I tremble at it. Nature would not invest herself in such shadowing passion without some instruction. It is not words that shake me thus. Pish ! Noses, ears, and lips. Is 't possible ?—Confess !—handkerchief ! —O devil ! [Falls in a trance.
Iago. Work on,
My medicine, work ! Thus credulous fools are caught ;
And many worthy and chaste dames even thus, [ho ! my lor ! !
All guiltless, meet reproach. What,
My lord, I say ! Othello !

Enter CASSIO.

How now, Cassio !
Cas. What 's the matter ? [lepsy :
Iago. My lord is fall'n into an epi-
This is his second fit ; he had one yesterday.
Cas. Rub him about the temples.
Iago. No, forbear ;
The lethargy must have his quiet course : [by
If not, he foams at mouth, and by and Breaks out to savage madness. Look, he stirs : [while,
Do you withdraw yourself a little
He will recover straight ; when he is gone,
I would on great occasion speak with you. [Exit CASSIO.
How is it, general ? have you not hurt your head ?
Oth. Dost thou mock me ?
Iago. I mock you ! no, by heaven.
Would you would bear your fortune like a man ! [and a beast.
Oth. A horned man 's a monster
Iago. There 's many a beast then in a populous city,
And many a civil monster.
Oth. Did he confess it ?
Iago. Good sir, be a man ;
Think every bearded fellow that 's but yoked [now alive
May draw with you : there 's millions
That nightly lie in those unproper beds
Which they dare swear peculiar : your case is better. [arch-mock,
O, 'tis the spite of hell, the fiend's
To lip a wanton in a secure couch,
And to suppose her chaste ! No, let me know ;
And, knowing what I am, I know what she shall be.
Oth. O, thou art wise ; 'tis certain.
Iago. Stand you awhile apart ;
Confine yourself but in a patient list.
Whilst you were here o'erwhelmed with your grief—
A passion most unsuiting such a man—
Cassio came hither : I shifted him away, [ecstasy ;
And laid good 'scuse upon your
Bade him anon return and here speak with me ; [cave yourself,
The which he promised. Do but en-
And mark the fleers, the gibes, and notable scorns,
That dwell in every region of his face ;
For I will make him tell the tale anew,

Where, how, how oft, how long ago, and when [wife:
He hath, and is again to cope your I say, but mark his gesture. Marry, patience; [spleen,
Or I shall say you are all in all in And nothing of a man.

Oth. Dost thou hear, Iago?
I will be found most cunning in my patience;
But—dost thou hear?—most bloody.

Iago. That 's not amiss;
But yet keep time in all. Will you withdraw? [OTHELLO retires.
Now will I question Cassio of Bianca, A housewife that by selling her desires Buys herself bread and clothes: it is a creature [pet's plague
That dotes on Cassio; as 'tis the strum-To beguile many and be beguiled by one. [frain
He, when he hears of her, cannot re-From the excess of laughter. Here he comes:

Re-enter CASSIO.

As he shall smile, Othello shall go mad;
And his unbookish jealousy must construe [light behaviour
Poor Cassio's smiles, gestures, and Quite in the wrong.—How do you now, lieutenant? [the addition

Cas. The worser that you give me Whose want even kills me.

Iago. Ply Desdemona well, and you are sure on 't.
[Speaking lower] Now, if this suit lay in Bianca's power,
How quickly should you speed!

Cas. Alas, poor caitiff!

Oth. Look, how he laughs already!

Iago. I never knew a woman love man so.

Cas. Alas, poor rogue! I think, i' faith she loves me.

Oth. Now he denies it faintly, and laughs it out.

Iago. Do you hear, Cassio?

Oth. Now he importunes him To tell it o'er: go to; well said, well said. [shall marry her:

Iago. She gives it out that you Do you intend it?

Cas. Ha, ha, ha! [you triumph?

Oth. Do you triumph, Roman? do

Cas. I marry her! what, a customer! I prithee, bear some charity to my wit; do not think it so unwholesome. Ha, ha, ha! [win.

Oth. So, so, so, so: they laugh that

Iago. Faith, the cry goes that you shall marry her.

Cas. Prithee, say true.

Iago. I am a very villain else.

Oth. Have you scored me? Well.

Cas. This is the monkey's own giving out: she is persuaded I will marry her, out of her own love and flattery, not out of my promise.

Oth. Iago beckons me; now he begins the story.

Cas. She was here even now; she haunts me in every place. I was the other day talking on the sea-bank with certain Venetians; and thither comes the bauble, and, by this hand, she falls me thus about my neck—

Oth. Crying 'O dear Cassio!' as it were: his gesture imports it.

Cas. So hangs and lolls and weeps upon me; so hales and pulls me: ha, ha ha!

Oth. Now he tells how she plucked him to my chamber. O, I see that nose of yours, but not that dog I shall throw it to. [pany.

Cas. Well, I must leave her com-

Iago. Before me! look, where she comes.

Cas. 'Tis such another fitchew! marry, a perfumed one.

Enter BIANCA.

What do you mean by this haunting of me?

Bian. Let the devil and his dam haunt you! What did you mean by that same handkerchief you gave me even now? I was a fine fool to take it. I must take out the work?—A likely piece of work, that you should find it in your chamber, and not know who left it there! This is some minx's token, and I must take out the work? There; give it your hobby-horse: wheresoever you had it, I'll take out no work on 't.

Cas. How now, my sweet Bianca! how now! how now!

Oth. By heaven, that should be my handkerchief!

Bian. An you'll come to supper tonight, you may; an you will not, come when you are next prepared for. [Exit.

Iago. After her, after her.

Cas. Faith, I must; she'll rail i' the street else.

Iago. Will you sup there?

Cas. Faith, I intend so.

Iago. Well, I may chance to see you; for I would very fain speak with you.

Cas. Prithee, come; will you?

Iago. Go to; say no more.

[Exit CASSIO.

Oth. [Advancing.] How shall I murder him, Iago?

Iago. Did you perceive how he laughed at his vice?

Oth. O Iago!

Iago. And did you see the handkerchief?

Oth. Was that mine?

Iago. Yours, by this hand: and to see how he prizes the foolish woman your wife! she gave it him, and he hath given it his whore.

Oth. I would have him nine years a-killing. A fine woman! a fair woman! a sweet woman!

Iago. Nay, you must forget that.

Oth. Ay, let her rot, and perish, and be damned to-night; for she shall not live: no, my heart is turned to stone; I strike it, and it hurts my hand. O, the world hath not a sweeter creature: she might lie by an emperor's side, and command him tasks.

Iago. Nay, that 's not your way.

Oth. Hang her! I do but say what she is. So delicate with her needle! An admirable musician! O, she will sing the savageness out of a bear! Of so high and plenteous wit and invention!

Iago. She 's the worse for all this.

Oth. O, a thousand, a thousand times. And then, of so gentle a condition!

Iago. Ay, too gentle.

Oth. Nay, that 's certain; but yet the pity of it, Iago! O Iago, the pity of it, Iago!

Iago. If you are so fond over her iniquity, give her patent to offend; for, if it touch not you, it comes near nobody.

Oth. I will chop her into messes. Cuckold me!

Iago. O,' tis foul in her.

Oth. With mine officer!

Iago. That 's fouler.

Oth. Get me some poison, Iago; this night: I'll not expostulate with her, lest her body and beauty unprovide my mind again:—this night, Iago.

Iago. Do it not with poison, strangle her in her bed, even the bed she hath contaminated.

Oth. Good, good: the justice of it pleases: very good.

Iago. And for Cassio, let me be his undertaker: you shall hear more by midnight.

Oth. Excellent good. [A Trumpet within.] What trumpet is that same? 'Tis Lodovico, Iago. Something from Venice, sure. Come from the duke; and, see, your wife is with him.

Enter LODOVICO, DESDEMONA, and Attendants.

Lod. God save the worthy general!

Oth. With all my heart, sir.

Lod. The duke and senators of Venice greet you.

[Gives him a packet.

Oth. I kiss the instrument of their pleasures.

[Opens the packet, and reads.

Des. And what 's the news, good cousin Lodovico?

Iago. I am very glad to see you, signior;

Welcome to Cyprus.

Lod. I thank you. How does Lieutenant Cassio?

Iago. Lives, sir.

Des. Cousin, there 's fall'n between him and my lord

An unkind breach: but you shall make all well.

Oth. Are you sure of that?

Des. My lord?

Oth. [Reads.] 'This fail you not to do, as you will'—

Lod. He did not call; he 's busy in the paper. [Cassio?

Is there division 'twixt thy lord and

Des. A most unhappy one: I would do much [Cassio.

To atone them, for the love I bear to

Oth. Fire and brimstone!

Des. My lord?

Oth. Are you wise?

Des. What, is he angry?

Lod. May be the letter moved him;

For, as I think, they do command him home,

Deputing Cassio in his government.

Des. By my troth, I am glad on 't.
Oth. Indeed!
Des. My lord?
Oth. I am glad to see you mad.
Des. Why, sweet Othello,— Oth. Devil! [Strikes her.
Des. I have not deserved this.
Lod. My lord, this would not be believed in Venice,
Though I should swear I saw 't: 'tis very much:
Make her amends; she weeps.
Oth. O devil, devil!
If that the earth could teem with woman's tears,
Each drop she falls would prove a crocodile:—
Out of my sight!
Des. I will not stay to offend you. [Going.
Lod. Truly, an obedient lady:
I do beseech your lordship, call her back.
Oth. Mistress!
Des. My lord?
Oth. What would you with her, sir?
Lod. Who, I, my lord?
Oth. Ay; you did wish that I would make her turn: [on,
Sir, she can turn, and turn, and yet go
And turn again; and she can weep, sir, weep; [dient,
And she 's obedient, as you say, obe-
Very obedient.—Proceed you in your tears.— [passion!—
Concerning this, sir,—O well-painted
I am commanded home.—Get you away; [the mandate,
I'll send for you anon.—Sir, I obey
And will return to Venice.—Hence, avaunt! [Exit DESDEMONA.
Cassio shall have my place.—And, sir, to-night, [gether:
I do entreat that we may sup to-
You are welcome, sir, to Cyprus.—Goats and monkeys! [Exit.
Lod. Is this the noble Moor whom our full senate [nature
Call all-in-all sufficient? This the Whom passion could not shake? whose solid virtue [chance,
The shot of accident, nor dart of
Could neither graze nor pierce?
Iago. He is much changed.
Lod. Are his wits safe? is he not light of brain?
Iago. He is that he is: I may not breathe my censure.
What he might be,—if what he might he is not—
I would to heaven he were!
Lod. What, strike his wife!
Iago. Faith, that was not so well; yet would I knew
That stroke would prove the worst!
Lod. Is it his use?
Or did the letters work upon his blood,
And new-create this fault?
Iago. Alas, alas!
It is not honesty in me to speak
What I have seen and known. You shall observe him; [so
And his own courses will denote him
That I may save my speech: do but go after,
And mark how he continues.
Lod. I am sorry that I am deceived in him. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—The Same. A Room in the Castle.

Enter OTHELLO and EMILIA.

Oth. You have seen nothing, then?
Emil. Nor ever heard, nor ever did suspect. [she together.
Oth. Yes, you have seen Cassio and Emil. But then I saw no harm, and then I heard [tween them.
Each syllable that breath made up be-
Oth. What, did they never whisper?
Emil. Never, my lord.
Oth. Nor send you out o' the way?
Emil. Never.
Oth. To fetch her fan, her gloves, her mask, nor nothing?
Emil. Never, my lord.
Oth. That 's strange.
Emil. I durst, my lord, to wager she is honest,
Lay down my soul at stake: if you think other,
Remove your thought; it doth abuse your bosom. [head,
If any wretch have put this in your
Let heaven requite it with the serpent's curse! [true,
For, if she be not honest, chaste, and
There 's no man happy; the purest of their wives
Is foul as slander.
Oth. Bid her come hither: go. [Exit EMILIA.

She says enough; yet she 's a simple bawd [subtle whore,
That cannot say as much. This is a
A closet lock and key of villanous secrets: [seen her do 't.
And yet she'll kneel and pray; I have

Re-enter EMILIA, with DESDEMONA.

Des. My lord, what is your will?
Oth. Pray, chuck, come hither.
Des. What is your pleasure?
Oth. Let me see your eyes;
Look in my face.
Des. What horrible fancy 's this?
Oth. [To EMILIA.] Some of your function, mistress; [door;
Leave procreants alone and shut the
Cough, or cry 'hem,' if any body come:
Your mystery, your mystery;—nay, dispatch. [Exit EMILIA.
Des. Upon my knees, what doth your speech import?
I understand a fury in your words,
But not the words.
Oth. Why, what art thou?
Des. Your wife, my lord; your true
And loyal wife. [self;
Oth. Come, swear it, damn thy-
Lest, being like one of heaven, the devils themselves
Should fear to seize thee: therefore be double-damn'd;
Swear thou art honest.
Des. Heaven doth truly know it.
Oth. Heaven truly knows that thou art false as hell.
Des. To whom, my lord? with whom? how am I false?
Oth. O Desdemona! Away! away! away! [you weep?
Des. Alas the heavy day! Why do
Am I the motive of these tears, my lord?
If haply you my father do suspect
An instrument of this your calling back,
Lay not your blame on me: if you have lost him,
Why, I have lost him too.
Oth. Had it pleased heaven
To try me with affliction; had it rain'd
All kinds of sores and shames on my bare head,
Steep'd me in poverty to the very lips,
Given to captivity me and my utmost hopes, [my soul
I should have found in some part of
A drop of patience: but, alas, to make me
The fixed figure of the time, for scorn
To point his slow unmoving finger at!
Yet could I bear that too; well, very well: [my heart,
But there, where I have garner'd up
Where either I must live, or bear no life; [rent runs,
The fountain from the which my cur-
Or else dries up; to be discarded thence!
Or keep it as a cistern for foul toads
To knot and gender in! Turn thy complexion there,
Patience, thou young and rose-lipped cherubin,—
Ay, there, look grim as hell!
Des. I hope my noble lord esteems me honest.
Oth. O, ay; as summer flies are in the shambles, [thou weed,
That quicken even with blowing. O
Who art so lovely fair and smell'st so sweet
That the sense aches at thee,—would thou hadst ne'er been born!
Des. Alas, what ignorant sin have I committed?
Oth. Was this fair paper, this most goodly book,
Made to write 'whore' upon? What committed!
Committed! O thou public commoner!
I should make very forges of my cheeks,
That would to cinders burn up modesty, [committed!
Did I but speak thy deeds. What
Heaven stops the nose at it, and the moon winks; [meets,
The bawdy wind, that kisses all it
Is hush'd within the hollow mine of earth,
And will not hear it. What committed!
Impudent strumpet!
Des. By heaven, you do me wrong.
Oth. Are not you a strumpet?
Des. No, as I am a Christian:
If to preserve this vessel for my lord
From any other foul unlawful touch
Be not to be a strumpet, I am none.
Oth. What, not a whore?
Des. No, as I shall be saved.
Oth. Is 't possible?
Des. O, heaven forgive us!
Oth. I cry you mercy, then:

I took you for that cunning whore of Venice
That married with Othello. [Raising his voice] You, mistress,
That have the office opposite to Saint Peter,
And keep the gate of hell!

Re-enter EMILIA.

You, you, ay, you!
We have done our course; there 's money for your pains:
I pray you, turn the key, and keep our counsel. [Exit.

Emil. Alas, what does this gentleman conceive?
How do you, madam? how do you, my good lady?

Des. Faith, half asleep.

Emil. Good madam, what 's the matter with my lord?

Des. With who?

Emil. Why, with my lord, madam.

Des. Who is thy lord?

Emil. He that is yours, sweet lady.

Des. I have none: do not talk to me, Emilia; [none
I cannot weep; nor answer have I
But what should go by water. Prithee, to-night [remember;—
Lay on my bed my wedding sheets,—
And call thy husband hither.

Emil. Here 's a change, indeed! [Exit.

Des. 'Tis meet I should be used so, very meet. [might stick
How have I been behaved, that he
The small'st opinion on my least misuse?

Re-enter EMILIA, with IAGO.

Iago. What is your pleasure, madam? How is't with you?

Des. I cannot tell. Those that do teach young babes [tasks:
Do it with gentle means and easy
He might have chid me so; for, in good faith,
I am a child to chiding.

Iago. What 's the matter, lady?

Emil. Alas, Iago, my lord hath so bewhored her, [upon her,
Thrown such despite and heavy terms
As true hearts cannot bear.

Des. Am I that name, Iago?

Iago. What name, fair lady?

Des. Such as she says my lord did say I was.

Emil. He call'd her whore: a beggar in his drink [his callat.
Could not have laid such terms upon

Iago. Why did he so?

Des. I do not know; I am sure I am none such. [Alas the day!

Iago. Do not weep, do not weep.

Emil. Has she forsook so many noble matches, [friends,
Her father and her country and her
To be call'd whore? would it not make one weep?

Des. It is my wretched fortune.

Iago. Beshrew him for 't!
How comes this trick upon him?

Des. Nay, heaven doth know.

Emil. I will be hang'd, if some eternal villain,
Some busy and insinuating rogue,
Some cogging, cozening slave, to get some office,
Have not devised this slander; I'll be hang'd else.

Iago. Fie, there is no such man; it is impossible.

Des. If any such there be, heaven pardon him!

Emil. A halter pardon him! and hell gnaw his bones!
Why should he call her whore? who keeps her company?
What place? what time? what form? what likelihood?
The Moor 's abused by some most villanous knave,
Some base notorious knave, some scurvy fellow.
O heaven, that such companions thou'dst unfold,
And put in every honest hand a whip
To lash the rascal naked through the world,
Even from the east to the west!

Iago. Speak within door.

Emil. O, fie upon him! Some such squire he was [without.
That turn'd your wit the seamy side
And made you to suspect me with the Moor.

Iago. You are a fool; go to.

Des. O good Iago,
What shall I do to win my lord again?
Good friend, go to him; for, by this light of heaven, [kneel:
I know not how I lost him. Here I
If e'er my will did trespass 'gainst his love,

Either in discourse of thought or actual deed,
Or that mine eyes, mine ears, or any sense,
Delighted them in any other form;
Or that I do not yet, and ever did,
And ever will—though he do shake me off [dearly,
To beggarly divorcement—love him
Comfort forswear me! Unkindness may do much; [life,
And his unkindness may defeat my
But never taint my love. I cannot say 'whore:' [word;
It does abhor me now I speak the
To do the act that might the addition earn [make me.
Not the world's mass of vanity could

Iago. I pray you, be content; 'tis but his humour: [offence,
The business of the state does him
And he does chide with you.

Des. If 'twere no other,—

Iago. 'Tis but so, I warrant.

[Trumpets within.

Hark, how these instruments summon to supper! [stay:
And the great messengers of Venice
Go in, and weep not; all things shall be well.

[Exeunt DESDEMONA and EMILIA.

Enter RODERIGO.

How now, Roderigo!

Rod. I do not find that thou dealest justly with me.

Iago. What in the contrary?

Rod. Every day thou daffest me with some device, Iago; and rather, as it seems to me now, keepest from me all conveniency than suppliest me with the least advantage of hope. I will indeed no longer endure it; nor am I yet persuaded to put up in peace what already I have foolishly suffered.

Iago. Will you hear me, Roderigo?

Rod. Faith, I have heard too much; for your words and performances are no kin together.

Iago. You charge me most unjustly.

Rod. With nought but truth. I have wasted myself out of my means. The jewels you have had from me to deliver to Desdemona would half have corrupted a votarist: you have told me she hath received them, and returned me expectations and comforts of sudden respect and acquittance; but I find none.

Iago. Well; go to; very well.

Rod. Very well! go to! I cannot go to, man; nor 'tis not very well: by this hand, I say 'tis very scurvy, and begin to find myself fobbed in it.

Iago. Very well.

Rod. I tell you 'tis not very well. I will make myself known to Desdemona: if she will return me my jewels, I will give over my suit and repent my unlawful solicitation; if not, assure yourself I will seek satisfaction of you.

Iago. You have said now.

Rod. Ay, have said nothing but what I protest intendment of doing.

Iago. Why, now I see there 's mettle in thee; and even from this instant do build on thee a better opinion than ever before. Give me thy hand, Roderigo: thou hast taken against me a most just exception; but yet, I protest, I have dealt most directly in thy affair.

Rod. It hath not appeared.

Iago. I grant indeed it hath not appeared; and your suspicion is not without wit and judgment. But, Roderigo, if thou hast that in thee indeed, which I have greater reason to believe now than ever,—I mean purpose, courage, and valour,—this night show it: if thou the next night following enjoy not Desdemona, take me from this world with treachery and devise engines for my life.

Rod. Well, what is it? is it within reason and compass?

Iago. Sir, there is especial commission come from Venice to depute Cassio in Othello's place.

Rod. Is that true? why, then Othello and Desdemona return again to Venice.

Iago. O, no; he goes into Mauritania, and takes away with him the fair Desdemona, unless his abode be lingered here by some accident: wherein none can be so determinate as the removing of Cassio. [of him?

Rod. How do you mean, removing

Iago. Why, by making him uncapable of Othello's place; knocking out his brains. [do?

Rod. And that you would have me

Iago. Ay; if you dare do yourself a profit and a right. He sups to-night with a harlotry, and thither will I go to him: he knows not yet of his honourable fortune. If you will watch his going thence, which I will fashion to fall out between twelve and one, you may take him at your pleasure: I will be near to second your attempt, and he shall fall between us. Come, stand not amazed at it, but go along with me; I will show you such a necessity in his death that you shall think yourself bound to put it on him. It is now high supper-time, and the night grows to waste: about it.

Rod. I will hear further reason for this.

Iago. And you shall be satisfied. [Exeunt.

SCENE III.—The Same. Another Room in the Castle.

Enter OTHELLO, LODOVICO, DESDEMONA, EMILIA, and Attendants.

Lod. I do beseech you, sir, trouble yourself no further.

Oth. O, pardon me; 'twill do me good to walk.

Lod. Madam, good night; I humbly thank your ladyship.

Des. Your honour is most welcome.

Oth. Will you walk, sir?
O,—Desdemona,—

Des. My lord?

Oth. Get you to bed on the instant; I will be returned forthwith: dismiss your attendant there: look it be done.

Des. I will, my lord.

[Exeunt OTHELLO, LODOVICO, and Attendants.

Emil. How goes it now? he looks gentler than he did.

Des. He says he will return incontinent:
He hath commanded me to go to bed,
And bade me to dismiss you.

Emil. Dismiss me!

Des. It was his bidding; therefore, good Emilia, [adieu:
Give me my nightly wearing, and
We must not now displease him.

Emil. I would you had never seen him!

Des. So would not I: my love doth so approve him!
That even his stubbornness, his checks, his frowns,—
Prithee, unpin me,—have grace and favour in them.

Emil. I have laid those sheets you bade me on the bed.

Des. All 's one. Good faith, how foolish are our minds!
If I do die before thee, prithee, shroud me
In one of those same sheets.

Emil. Come, come, you talk.

Des. My mother had a maid call'd Barbara; [proved mad
She was in love; and he she loved
And did forsake her: she had a song of 'willow;' [her fortune,
An old thing 'twas, but it express'd
And she died singing it: that song to-night [much to do
Will not go from my mind; I have
But to go hang my head all at one side,
And sing it like poor Barbara. Prithee, dispatch. [gown?

Emil. Shall I go fetch your night-

Des. No, unpin me here.
This Lodovico is a proper man.

Emil. A very handsome man.

Des. And he speaks well.

Emil. I know a lady in Venice would have walked barefoot to Palestine for a touch of his nether lip.

Des. [Singing.]

'The poor soul sat sighing by a sycamore tree,
Sing all a green willow; [her knee,
Her hand on her bosom, her head on
Sing willow, willow, willow:
The fresh streams ran by her, and murmur'd her moans;
Sing willow, willow, willow;
Her salt tears fell from her, and soften'd the stones,—'
Lay by these:— [Singing.
'Sing willow, willow, willow;'
Prithee, hie thee; he'll come anon:— [Singing.

'Sing all a green willow must be my garland.'
Let nobody blame him his scorn I approve'—
Nay, that's not next.—Hark! who is't that knocks?

Emil. It is the wind.

Des. [Singing.]

'I call'd my love false love; but what said he then?
Sing willow, willow, willow:
If I court moe women, you'll couch with moe men.—'

So, get thee gone; good night. Mine eyes do itch;
Doth that bode weeping?
Emil. 'Tis neither here nor there.
Des. I have heard it said so. O, these men, these men!
Dost thou in conscience think,—tell me, Emilia,—
That there be women do abuse their husbands
In such gross kind? [question.
Emil. There be some such, no
Des. Wouldst thou do such a deed for all the world?
Emil. Why, would not you?
Des. No, by this heavenly light!
Emil. Nor I neither by this heavenly light; I might do 't as well i' the dark.
Des. Wouldst thou do such a deed for all the world?
Emil. The world is a huge thing: 'tis a great price
For a small vice.
Des. Good troth, I think thou wouldst not.
Emil. By my troth, I think I should; and undo 't when I had done. Marry, I would not do such a thing for a joint-ring, nor for measures of lawn, nor for gowns, petticoats, nor caps, nor any petty exhibition; but, for the whole world,—why, who would not make her husband a cuckold to make him a monarch? I should venture purgatory for 't. [such a wrong
Des. Beshrew me, if I would do For the whole world.
Emil. Why, the wrong is but a wrong i' the world; and having the world for your labour, 'tis a wrong in your own world, and you might quickly make it right. [such woman.
Des. I do not think there is any
Emil. Yes, a dozen; and as many to the vantage as would store the world they play'd for. [faults
But I do think it is their husbands' If wives do fall. Say that they slack their duties, [laps,
And pour our treasures into foreign Or else break out in peevish jealousies,
Throwing restraint upon us; or say they strike us,
Or scant our former having in despite;
Why, we have galls, and though we have some grace,
Yet have we some revenge. Let husbands know
Their wives have sense like them: they see and smell,
And have their palates both for sweet and sour, [they do
As husbands have. What is it that When they change us for others? Is it sport? [it?
I think it is: and doth affection breed I think it doth: is 't frailty that thus errs? [tions,
It is so too: and have not we affec-Desires for sport, and frailty, as men have? [them know,
Then let them use us well: else let The ills we do, their ills instruct us so.
Des. Good night, good night: heaven me such usage send,
Not to pick bad from bad, but by bad mend! [Exeunt.

ACT V.

SCENE I.—Cyprus. A Street.

Enter IAGO and RODERIGO.

Iago. Here, stand behind this bulk; straight will he come:
Wear thy good rapier bare, and put it home: [thy elbow:
Quick, quick; fear nothing; I'll be at It makes us, or it mars us; think on that,
And fix most firm thy resolution.
Rod. Be near at hand; I may miscarry in 't.
Iago. Here, at thy hand: be bold, and take thy stand.
[Retires to a little distance.
Rod. I have no great devotion to the deed; [reasons:
And yet he hath given me satisfying 'Tis but a man gone. Forth, my sword; he dies.
[Goes to his stand.
Iago. I have rubb'd this young quat almost to the sense,
And he grows angry. Now, whether he kill Cassio, [other,
Or Cassio him, or each do kill the Every way makes my gain: live Roderigo,
He calls me to a restitution large
Of gold and jewels that I bobb'd from him,
As gifts to Desdemona;
It must not be: if Cassio do remain,

He hath a daily beauty in his life
That makes me ugly; and, besides, the Moor [in much peril:
May unfold me to him; there stand I
No, he must die. But so: I hear him coming.

Enter CASSIO.

Rod. I know his gait; 'tis he.—Villain, thou diest!

[Rushes from his post, and makes a pass at CASSIO.

Cas. That thrust had been mine enemy indeed, [know'st:
But that my coat is better than thou
I will make proof of thine.

[Draws, and wounds RODERIGO.

Rod. O, I am slain!

[IAGO rushes from his post, cuts CASSIO behind in the leg, and exit.

Cas. I am maim'd for ever. Help, ho! murder! murder!

[Falls.

Enter OTHELLO, at a distance.

Oth. The voice of Cassio: Iago keeps his word.

Rod. O, villain that I am!

Oth. It is even so.

Cas. O, help, ho! light! a surgeon! [honest and just,

Oth. 'Tis he. O brave Iago,
That hast such noble sense of thy friend's wrong! [lies dead,
Thou teachest me.—Minion, your dear
And your unblest fate hies: strumpet, I come!
Forth of my heart those charms, thine eyes, are blotted;
Thy bed lust-stain'd shall with lust's blood be spotted. [Exit.

Enter LODOVICO and GRATIANO, at a distance.

Cas. What, ho! no watch? no passage? murder! murder!

Gra. 'Tis some mischance; the cry is very direful.

Cas. O, help!

Lod. Hark!

Rod. O wretched villain!

Lod. Two or three groan: it is a heavy night: ['t unsafe
These may be counterfeits; let 's think
To come in to the cry without more help. [bleed to death.

Rod. Nobody come? then shall I

Lod. Hark!

Re-enter IAGO, with a light.

Gra. Here 's one comes in his shirt, with light and weapons.

Iago. Who 's there? whose noise is this that cries on murder?

Lod. We do not know.

Iago. Did you not hear a cry?

Cas. Here, here! for heaven's sake, help me!

Iago. What 's the matter?

Gra. This is Othello's ancient, as I take it. [ant fellow.

Lod. The same indeed; a very vali-

Iago. What are you here that cry so grievously? [by villains!

Cas. Iago? O, I am spoil'd, undone
Give me some help.

Iago. O me, lieutenant! what villains have done this?

Cas. I think that one of them is hereabout,
And cannot make away.

Iago. O treacherous villains! [To LODOVICO and GRATIANO] What are you there? come in, and give some help.

Rod. O, help me here!

Cas. That 's one of them.

Iago. O murderous slave! O villain! [Stabs RODERIGO.

Rod. O damn'd Iago! O inhuman dog!

Iago Kill men i' the dark!—Where be these bloody thieves?—
How silent is this town!—Ho! murder! murder!— [evil?
What may you be? are you of good or

Lod. As you shall prove us, praise us.

Iago. Signior Lodovico?

Lod. He, sir.

Iago. I cry you mercy. Here's Cassio hurt by villains.

Gra. Cassio!

Iago. How is 't, brother?

Cas. My leg is cut in two.

Iago. Marry, heaven forbid!
Light, gentlemen: I'll bind it with my shirt.

Enter BIANCA.

Bian. What is the matter, ho? who is 't that cried?

Iago. Who is 't that cried!

Bian. O my dear Cassio! my sweet Cassio!
O Cassio, Cassio, Cassio!

Iago. O notable strumpet!—Cassio, may you suspect
Who they should be that have thus mangled you?
Cas. No.
Gra. I am sorry to find you thus: I have been to seek you.
Iago. Lend me a garter. So. O, for a chair,
To bear him easily hence!
Bian. Alas, he faints! O Cassio, Cassio, Cassio!
Iago. Gentlemen all, I do suspect this trash
To be a party in this injury.
Patience awhile, good Cassio.—Come, come; [or no?
Lend me a light. Know we this face
Alas, my friend and my dear countryman [ven! Roderigo.
Roderigo! no:—yes, sure:—O hea-
Gra. What, of Venice?
Iago. Even he, sir: did you know him?
Gra. Know him! ay.
Iago. Signior Gratiano? I cry you gentle pardon;
These bloody accidents must excuse my manners,
That so neglected you.
Gra. I am glad to see you.
Iago. How do you, Cassio?—O, a chair, a chair!
Gra. Roderigo!
Iago. He, he, 'tis he. [A chair brought in.] O, that 's well said; the chair:
Some good man bear him carefully from hence;
I'll fetch the general's surgeon. [To BIANCA] For you, mistress,
Save you your labour.—He that lies slain here, Cassio,
Was my dear friend: what malice was between you?
Cas. None in the world; nor do I know the man.
Iago. [To BIANCA.] What, look you pale?—O, bear him out o' the air.
[CASSIO and RODERIGO are borne off.
Stay you, good gentlemen.—Look you pale, mistress?— [eye?—
Do you perceive the gastness of her
Nay, if you stare, we shall hear more anon. [on her:
Behold her well; I pray you, look up-
Do you see, gentlemen? nay, guiltiness will speak,
Though tongues were out of use.

Enter EMILIA.

Emil. 'Las, what 's the matter? what 's the matter, husband?
Iago. Cassio hath here been set on in the dark ['scaped:
By Roderigo and fellows that are
He 's almost slain, and Roderigo dead.
Emil. Alas, good gentleman! alas, good Cassio!
Iago. This is the fruit of whoring. Prithee, Emilia, [night.
Go know of Cassio where he supp'd to-
[To BIANCA] What, do you shake at that?
Bian. He supp'd at my house; but I therefore shake not.
Iago. O, did he so? I charge you, go with me.
Emil. Fie, fie upon thee, strumpet!
Bian. I am no strumpet; but of life as honest
As you that thus abuse me.
Emil. As I! foh! fie upon thee!
Iago. Kind gentlemen, let 's go see poor Cassio dress'd.
Come, mistress, you must tell 's another tale.
Emilia, run you to the citadel,
And tell my lord and lady what hath happ'd.—
Will you go on, I pray? [Aside] This is the night
That either makes me or fordoes me quite. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—The Same. A Bedchamber in the Castle. DESDEMONA in bed asleep. A light burning.

Enter OTHELLO.

Oth. It is the cause, it is the cause, my soul,— [stars!—
Let me not name it to you, you chaste
It is the cause. Yet I'll not shed her blood; [snow,
Nor scar that whiter skin of hers than
And smooth as monumental alabaster.
Yet she must die, else she'll betray more men. [the light:
Put out the light, and then put out
If I quench thee, thou flaming minister,
I can again thy former light restore,

Should I repent me;—but once put out thy light,
Thou cunning'st pattern of excelling Nature,
I know not where is that Promethean heat
That can thy light relume. When I have pluck'd the rose,
I cannot give it vital growth again,
It needs must wither;—I'll smell it on the tree. [Kissing her.
O balmy breath, that dost almost persuade Justice to break her sword! One more, one more,
Be thus when thou art dead, and I will kill thee, and love thee after. One more, and this the last:
So sweet was ne'er so fatal. I must weep, but they are cruel tears; this sorrow 's heavenly;
It strikes where it doth love. She wakes.

Des. Who 's there? Othello?

Oth. Ay, Desdemona.

Des. Will you come to bed, my lord?

Oth. Have you pray'd to-night, Desdemona?

Des. Ay, my lord.

Oth. If you bethink yourself of any crime unreconciled as yet to heaven and grace,
Solicit for it straight.

Des. Alas, my lord, what may you mean by that?

Oth. Well, do it, and be brief; I will walk by:
I would not kill thy unprepared spirit;
No,—Heaven forfend!—I would not kill thy soul.

Des. Talk you of killing?

Oth. Ay, I do.

Des. Then heaven
Have mercy on me!

Oth. Amen, with all my heart!

Des. If you say so, I hope you will not kill me.

Oth. Hum! [are fatal then

Des. And yet I fear you; for you
When your eyes roll so: why I should fear I know not,
Since guiltiness I know not; but yet I feel I fear.

Oth. Think on thy sins.

Des. They are loves I bear to you.

Oth. Ay, and for that thou diest.

Des. That death 's unnatural that kills for loving. [lip?
Alas, why gnaw you so your nether
Some bloody passion shakes your very frame: [hope,
These are portents; but yet I hope, I
They do not point on me.

Oth. Peace, and be still!

Des. I will so. What 's the matter?

Oth. That handkerchief which I so loved and gave thee
Thou gavest to Cassio.

Des. No, by my life and soul!
Send for the man, and ask him.

Oth. Sweet soul, take heed,
Take heed of perjury; thou art on thy death-bed.

Des. Ay, but not yet to die.

Oth. Yes, presently:
Therefore confess thee freely of thy sin;
For to deny each article with oath
Cannot remove nor choke the strong conception [die.
That I do groan withal. Thou art to

Des. Then Lord have mercy on me!

Oth. I say, amen.

Des. And have you mercy too! I never did [Cassio
Offend you in my life; never loved
But with such general warranty of heaven [token.
As I might love: I never gave him

Oth. By heaven, I saw my handkerchief in 's hand.
O perjured woman! thou dost stone my heart, [do
And makest me call what I intend to
A murder, which I thought a sacrifice:
I saw the handkerchief.

Des. He found it then;
I never gave it him:—send for him hither;
Let him confess a truth.

Oth. He hath confess'd.

Des. What, my lord?

Oth. That he hath used thee.

Des. How? unlawfully?

Oth. Ay.

Des. He will not say so.

Oth. No, his mouth is stopp'd;
Honest Iago hath ta'en order for it.

Des. O, my fear interprets!—what, is he dead?

Oth. Had all his hairs been lives, my great revenge
Had stomach for them all. [done!

Des. Alas, he is betray'd, and I undone!

Oth. Out, strumpet! weep'st thou for him to my face?

Des. O, banish me, my lord, but kill me not!
Oth. Down, strumpet!
Des. Kill me to-morrow; let me live to-night!
Oth. Nay, if you strive,——
Des. But half an hour!
Oth. Being done, there is no pause.
Des. But while I say one prayer!
Oth. It is too late. [He smothers her.
Emil. [Within.] My lord, my lord! what, ho! my lord, my lord!
Oth. What noise is this?—Not dead? not yet quite dead?
I that am cruel am yet merciful;
I would not have thee linger in thy pain:—
So, so. [lord, my lord!
Emil. [Within.] What, ho! my
Oth. Who 's there?
Emil. [Within.] O, good my lord, I would speak a word with you!
Oth. Yes;—'tis Emilia:—by and by.—She 's dead.
'Tis like she comes to speak of Cassio's death; [moving?
The noise was high.—Ha! no more
Still as the grave.—Shall she come in? were 't good?—
I think she stirs again:—no. What 's best to do? [wife:
If she come in, she'll sure speak to my
My wife! my wife! what wife? I have no wife.
O, insupportable! O heavy hour!
Methinks it should be now a huge eclipse [frighted globe
Of sun and moon, and that the affrighted
Should yawn at alteration.
Emil [Within.] I do beseech you
That I may speak with you, O, good my lord! [Emilia.
Oth. I had forgot thee: O, come in,
Soft,—by and by: let me the curtains draw.—
Where art thou? [Unlocks the door.

Enter EMILIA.

What 's the matter with thee now?
Emil. O, good my lord, yonder 's foul murder done!
Oth. What, now?
Emil. But now, my lord. [moon;
Oth. It is the very error of the
She comes more nearer earth than she was wont,
And makes men mad.
Emil. Cassio, my lord, hath kill'd a young Venetian
Call'd Roderigo.
Oth. Roderigo kill'd!
And Cassio kill'd!
Emil. No, Cassio is not kill'd.
Oth. Not Cassio kill'd! then murder 's out of tune,
And sweet revenge grows harsh.
Des. O falsely, falsely murder'd!
Emil. Alas, what cry is that?
Oth. That! what?
Emil. Out, and alas! that was my lady's voice. [again!
Help! help, ho! help!—O lady, speak
Sweet Desdemona! O sweet mistress, speak!
Des. A guiltless death I die.
Emil. O, who hath done this deed?
Des. Nobody; I myself; farewell:
Commend me to my kind lord. O, farewell! [Dies.
Oth. Why, how should she be murder'd?
Emil. Alas, who knows?
Oth. You heard her say herself, it was not I.
Emil. She said so: I must needs report the truth.
Oth. She 's, like a liar, gone to burning hell:
'Twas I that kill'd her.
Emil. O, the more angel she,
And you the blacker devil!
Oth. She turn'd to folly, and she was a whore. [art a devil.
Emil. Thou dost belie her, and thou
Oth. She was as false as water.
Emil. Thou art rash as fire, to say
That she was false: O, she was heavenly true!
Oth. Cassio did tup her; ask thy husband else. [hell,
O, I were damn'd beneath all depth in
But that I did proceed upon just grounds [knew it all.
To this extremity. Thy husband
Emil. My husband!
Oth. Thy husband. [lock?
Emil. That she was false to wed-
Oth. Ay, with Cassio.
Nay, had she been true, [world
If heaven would make me such another
Of one entire and perfect chrysolite,
I'd not have sold her for it.
Emil. My husband!

Oth. Ay, 'twas he that told me first:
An honest man he is, and hates the slime
That sticks on filthy deeds.
Emil. My husband!
Oth. What needs this iterance, woman? I say thy husband.
Emil. O mistress, villany hath made mocks with love!
My husband say that she was false!
Oth. He, woman;
I say thy husband; dost understand the word? [Iago.
My friend, thy husband, honest, honest
Emil. If he say so, may his pernicious soul [heart:
Rot half a grain a day! he lies to the
She was too fond of her most filthy bargain.
Oth. Ha!
Emil. Do thy worst: [heaven
This deed of thine is no more worthy
Than thou wast worthy her.
Oth. Peace, you were best.
Emil. Thou hast not half that power to do me harm [dolt!
As I have to be hurt. O gull! O
As ignorant as dirt! thou hast done a deed— [thee known,
I care not for thy sword; I'll make
Though I lost twenty lives.—Help! help, ho! help!
The Moor hath kill'd my mistress! Murder! murder!

Enter MONTANO, GRATIANO, IAGO, and Others.

Mon. What is the matter? How now, general!
Emil. O, are you come, Iago? you have done well,
That men must lay their murders on your neck.
Gra. What is the matter?
Emil. Disprove this villain, if thou beest a man: [was false:
He says thou told'st him that his wife
I know thou didst not, thou'rt not such a villain:
Speak, for my heart is full.
Iago. I told him what I thought; and told no more
Than what he found himself was apt and true. [was false?
Emil. But did you ever tell him she Iago. I did. [damned lie;
Emil. You told a lie; an odious,
Upon my soul, a lie, a wicked lie!
She false with Cassio!—did you say with Cassio?
Iago. With Cassio, mistress. Go to, charm your tongue.
Emil. I will not charm my tongue; I am bound to speak:
My mistress here lies murder'd in her bed,—
All. O heavens forfend!
Emil. And your reports have set the murder on. [true, indeed.
Oth. Nay, stare not, masters: it is
Gra. 'Tis a strange truth.
Mon. O monstrous act!
Emil. Villany, villany, villany!
I think upon 't,—I think,—I smell 't; —O villany! [grief:—
I thought so then;—I'll kill myself for
O villany, villany!
Iago. What, are you mad? I charge you, get you home.
Emil. Good gentlemen, let me have leave to speak:
'Tis proper I obey him, but not now.
Perchance, Iago, I will ne'er go home.
Oth. O! O! O! [Falls on the bed.
Emil. Nay, lay thee down and roar;
For thou hast kill'd the sweetest innocent
That e'er did lift up eye.
Oth. [Rising.] O, she was foul!—
I scarce did know you, uncle: there lies your niece,
Whose breath, indeed, these hands have newly stopp'd:
I know this act shows horrible and grim.
Gra. Poor Desdemona! I am glad thy father 's dead:
Thy match was mortal to him, and pure grief [live now,
Shore his old thread in twain: did he
This sight would make him do a desperate turn, [side,
Yea, curse his better angel from his
And fall to reprobation. [knows
Oth. 'Tis pitiful; but yet Iago
That she with Cassio hath the act of shame [confess'd it:
A thousand times committed; Cassio
And she did gratify his amorous works
With that recognizance and pledge of love [his hand:
Which I first gave her; I saw it in

It was a handkerchief, an antique token
My father gave my mother.
Emil. O heaven! O heavenly powers!
Iago. Come, hold your peace!
Emil. 'Twill out, 'twill out;—I hold my peace, sir!—no;
No, I will speak as liberal as the air:
Let heaven and men and devils, let them all, [I'll speak.
All, all, cry shame against me, yet
Iago. Be wise, and get you home.
Emil. I will not.
[IAGO offers to stab EMILIA.
Gra. Fie!
Your sword upon a woman!
Emil. O thou dull Moor! that handkerchief thou speak'st of
I found by fortune, and did give my husband;
For often, with a solemn earnestness,
More than indeed belong'd to such a trifle,
He begg'd of me to steal it.
Iago. Villanous whore!
Emil. She give it Cassio! no, alas! I found it,
And I did give 't my husband.
Iago. Filth, thou liest!
Emil. By heaven, I do not, I do not, gentlemen. [such a fool
O murderous coxcomb! what should
Do with so good a wife?
Oth. Are there no stones in heaven
But what serve for the thunder?—
Precious villain!
[He runs at IAGO: IAGO, from behind, stabs EMILIA, and exit.
Gra. The woman falls; sure, he hath kill'd his wife.
Emil. Ay, ay: O, lay me by my mistress' side. [kill'd.
Gra. He 's gone, but his wife 's
Mon. 'Tis a notorious villain. Take you this weapon, [Moor:
Which I have here recover'd from the Come, guard the door without; let him not pass, [same villain,
But kill him rather. I'll after that
For 'tis a damned slave.
[Exeunt all but OTHELLO and EMILIA.
Oth. I am not valiant neither,
But every puny whipster gets my sword. [honesty?
But why should honour outlive
Let it go all.

Emil. What did thy song bode, lady?
Hark, canst thou hear me? I will play the swan,
And die in music. [Singing.
'Willow, willow, willow.'
Moor, she was chaste; she loved thee, cruel Moor; [true;
So come my soul to bliss, as I speak
So speaking as I think, I die,—I die.
[Dies.
Oth. I have another weapon in this chamber; [temper.—
It is a sword of Spain, the ice-brook's
O, here it is.—Uncle, I must come forth.
Gra. [Within.] If thou attempt it, it will cost thee dear:
Thou hast no weapon, and perforce must suffer.
Oth. Look in upon me then and speak with me,
Or, naked as I am, I will assault thee.

Re-enter GRATIANO.

Gra. What is the matter?
Oth. Behold! I have a weapon;
A better never did itself sustain
Upon a soldier's thigh: I have seen the day, [sword,
That, with this little arm and this good
I have made my way through more impediments
Than twenty times your stop:—but, O vain boast! [now.
Who can control his fate? 'tis not so
Be not afraid, though you do see me weapon'd; [butt,
Here is my journey's end, here is my
And very sea-mark of my utmost sail.
Do you go back dismay'd? 'tis a lost fear; [breast,
Man but a rush against Othello's
And he retires. Where should Othello go? [starr'd wench!
Now, how dost thou look now? O ill-
Pale as thy smock! when we shall meet at compt,
This look of thine will hurl my soul from heaven,
And fiends will snatch at it. Cold, cold, my girl!
Even like thy chastity. [devils,
O cursed, cursed slave!—Whip me, ye
From the possession of this heavenly sight! [in sulphur!
Blow me about in winds! roast me

Wash me in steep-down gulfs of liquid fire!
O Desdemona! Desdemona! dead!
Oh! Oh! Oh!

Enter LODOVICO, MONTANO, CASSIO carried in a chair, and Officers with IAGO, prisoner.

Lod. Where is this rash and most unfortunate man?
Oth. That 's he that was Othello; here I am.
Lod. Where is that viper? bring the villain forth.
Oth. I look down towards his feet; —but that 's a fable.
If that thou beest a devil, I cannot kill thee. [Wounds IAGO.
Lod. Wrench his sword from him.
Iago. I bleed, sir; but not kill'd.
Oth. I am not sorry neither; I'd have thee live; [die.
For, in my sense, 'tis happiness to
Lod. O thou Othello, that wert once so good,
Fall'n in the practice of a cursed slave,
What shall be said to thee?
Oth. Why, any thing:
An honourable murderer, if you will;
For nought I did in hate, but all in honour.
Lod. This wretch hath part confess'd his villany: [death?
Did you and he consent in Cassio's
Oth. Ay. [cause.
Cas. Dear general, I never gave you
Oth. I do believe it, and I ask your pardon. [devil
Will you, I pray, demand that demi-
Why he hath thus ensnared my soul and body?
Iago. Demand me nothing; what you know, you know:
From this time forth I never will speak word.
Lod. What, not to pray?
Gra. Torments will ope your lips.
Oth. Well, thou dost best.
Lod. Sir, you shall understand what hath befall'n,
Which, as I think, you know not. Here is a letter [rigo;
Found in the pocket of the slain Rode-
And here another: the one of them imports
The death of Cassio to be undertook
By Roderigo.

Oth. O villain! [gross!
Cas. Most heathenish and most
Lod. Now here 's another discontented paper, [it seems,
Found in his pocket too; and this,
Roderigo meant to have sent this damned villain;
But that, belike, Iago in the interim
Came in and satisfied him.
Oth. O the pernicious caitiff!
How came you, Cassio, by that handkerchief
That was my wife's?
Cas. I found it in my chamber:
And he himself confess'd but even now
That there he dropp'd it for a special purpose
Which wrought to his desire.
Oth. O fool! fool! fool!
Cas. There is besides in Roderigo's letter, [him
How he upbraids Iago, that he made
Brave me upon the watch; whereon it came [spake,
That I was cast: and even but now he
After long seeming dead, Iago hurt him,
Iago set him on.
Lod. [To OTHELLO.] You must forsake this room, and go with us; [taken off,
Your power and your command is
And Cassio rules in Cyprus. For this slave,
If there be any cunning cruelty
That can torment him much and hold him long, [oner rest,
It shall be his. You shall close pris-
Till that the nature of your fault be known [him away.
To the Venetian state.—Come, bring
Oth. Soft you; a word or two before you go.
I have done the state some service, and they know it. [letters,
No more of that. I pray you, in your
When you shall these unlucky deeds relate, [uate,
Speak of me as I am; nothing exten-
Nor set down aught in malice: then must you speak [well;
Of one that loved not wisely but too
Of one not easily jealous, but, being wrought, [whose hand,
Perplex'd in the extreme; of one
Like the base Indian, threw a pearl away [subdued eyes,
Richer than all his tribe; of one whose

Albeit unused to the melting mood,
Drop tears as fast as the Arabian trees
Their medicinal gum. Set you down this;
And say besides, that in Aleppo once,
Where a malignant and a turban'd Turk [state,
Beat a Venetian and traduced the
I took by the throat the circumcised dog,
And smote him—thus. [Stabs himself.
Lod. O bloody period!
Gra. All that 's spoke is marr'd.
Oth. I kiss'd thee ere I kill'd thee;—no way but this,
[Falling upon DESDEMONA.
Killing myself, to die upon a kiss. [Dies.
Cas. This did I fear, but thought he had no weapon;
For he was great of heart.
Lod. [To IAGO.] O Spartan dog,
More fell than anguish, hunger, or the sea!
Look on the tragic loading of this bed;
This is thy work: the object poisons sight;
Let it be hid. Gratiano, keep the house,
And seize upon the fortunes of the Moor, [lord governor,
For they succeed on you. To you,
Remains the censure of this hellish villain; [enforce it!
The time, the place, the torture:—O,
Myself will straight aboard; and to the state
This heavy act with heavy heart relate.
[Exeunt.

SCENE I.—Alexandria. A Room in CLEOPATRA'S Palace.

Enter DEMETRIUS and PHILO.

Phi. Nay, but this dotage of our general's [goodly eyes,
O'erflows the measure: those his
That o'er the files and musters of the war [bend, now turn,
Have glow'd like plated Mars, now
The office and devotion of their view
Upon a tawny front: his captain's heart, [hath burst
Which in the scuffles of great fights
The buckles on his breast, reneges all temper,
And is become the bellows and the fan
To cool a gipsy's lust. Look, where they come!

Flourish. Enter ANTONY and CLEOPATRA, with their Trains; Eunuchs fanning her.

Take but good note, and you shall see in him [form'd
The triple pillar of the world trans-
Into a strumpet's fool: behold and see.

Cleo. If it be love indeed, tell me how much.

Ant. There 's beggary in the love that can be reckon'd.

Cleo. I'll set a bourn how far to be beloved.

Ant. Then must thou needs find out new heaven, new earth.

Enter an Attendant.

Attend. News, my good lord, from Rome.

Ant. Grates me: the sum.

Cleo. Nay, hear them, Antony:
Fulvia perchance is angry; or, who knows [sent
If the scarce-bearded Cæsar have not
His powerful mandate to you, 'Do this, or this; [chise that;
Take in that kingdom, and enfran-
Perform 't, or else we damn thee.'

Ant. How, my love!

Cleo. Perchance! nay, and most like: [dismission
You must not stay here longer, your

Where 's Fulvia's process? Cæsar's I would say? both?
Call in the messengers.—As I am Egypt's queen,
Thou blushest, Antony; and that blood of thine
Is Cæsar's homager: else so thy cheek pays shame
When shrill-tongued Fulvia scolds.—The messengers!
Ant. Let Rome in Tiber melt, and the wide arch [my space.
Of the ranged empire fall! Here is

Phi. Sir, sometimes, when he is not
He comes too short of that great property
Which still should go with Antony.

That he approves the common liar, who
Thus speaks of him at Rome: but I will hope
Of better deeds to-morrow. Rest you happy! [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—The Same. Another Room in the Palace.

Enter CHARMIAN, IRAS, ALEXAS, and a Soothsayer.

Char. Lord Alexas, sweet Alexas, most any thing Alexas, almost most absolute Alexas, where 's the soothsayer that you praised so to the queen? O, that I knew this husband, which, you say, must charge his horns with garlands!
Alex. Soothsayer!
Sooth. Your will?
Char. Is this the man?—Is't you, sir, that know things?
Sooth. In Nature's infinite book of secrecy
A little I can read.
Alex. Show him your hand.

Enter ENOBARBUS.

Eno. Bring in the banquet quickly; wine enough
Cleopatra's health to drink. [tune.
Char. Good sir, give me good for-
Sooth. I make not, but foresee.
Char. Pray, then, foresee me one.
Sooth. You shall be yet far fairer than you are.
Char. He means in flesh. [are old.
Iras. No, you shall paint when you
Char. Wrinkles forbid!
Alex. Vex not his prescience; be attentive.
Char. Hush! [than beloved.
Sooth. You shall be more beloving
Char. I had rather heat my liver with drinking.
Alex. Nay, hear him.
Char. Good now, some excellent fortune! Let me be married to three kings in a forenoon, and widow them all: let me have a child at fifty, to whom Herod of Jewry may do homage: find me to marry me with Octavius Cæsar, and companion me with my mistress. [whom you serve.
Sooth. You shall outlive the lady
Char. O excellent! I love long life better than figs.

Sooth. You have seen and proved a fairer former fortune
Than that which is to approach.

Char. Then belike my children shall have no names: prithee, how many boys and wenches must I have?

Sooth. If every of your wishes had a womb,
And fertile every wish, a million.

Char. Out, fool! I forgive thee for a witch.

Alex. You think none but your sheets are privy to your wishes.

Char. Nay, come, tell Iras hers.

Alex. We'll know all our fortunes.

Eno. Mine, and most of our fortunes, to-night, shall be—drunk to bed.

Iras. There 's a palm presages chastity, if nothing else.

Char. E'en as the o'erflowing Nilus presageth famine.

Iras. Go, you wild bedfellow, you cannot soothsay.

Char. Nay, if an oily palm be not a fruitful prognostication, I cannot scratch mine ear. Prithee, tell her but a worky-day fortune.

Sooth. Your fortunes are alike.

Iras. But how, but how? give me particulars.

Sooth. I have said.

Iras. Am I not an inch of fortune better than she?

Char. Well, if you were but an inch of fortune better than I, where would you choose it?

Iras. Not in my husband's nose.

Char. Our worser thoughts heavens mend! Alexas,—come, his fortune, his fortune! O, let him marry a woman that cannot go, sweet Isis, I beseech thee! and let her die too, and give him a worse! and let worse follow worse, till the worst of all follow him laughing to his grave, fiftyfold a cuckold! Good Isis, hear me this prayer, though thou deny me a matter of more weight; good Isis, I beseech thee!

Iras. Amen. Dear goddess, hear that prayer of the people! for, as it is a heart-breaking to see a handsome man loose-wived, so it is a deadly sorrow to behold a foul knave uncuckolded: therefore, dear Isis, keep decorum, and fortune him accordingly!

Char. Amen.

Alex. Lo, now, if it lay in their hands to make me a cuckold, they would make themselves whores, but they'd do 't!

Eno. Hush! here comes Antony.

Char. Not he; the queen.

Enter CLEOPATRA.

Cleo. Saw you my lord?

Eno. No, lady.

Cleo. Was he not here?

Char. No, madam.

Cleo. He was disposed to mirth; but on the sudden
A Roman thought hath struck him.—Enobarbus!

Eno. Madam?

Cleo. Seek him, and bring him hither. Where 's Alexas?

Alex. Here, at your service. My lord approaches.

Cleo. We will not look upon him: go with us. [Exeunt.

Enter ANTONY, with a Messenger and Attendants

Mess. Fulvia thy wife first came into the field.

Ant. Against my brother Lucius?

Mess. Ay: [time's state
But soon that war had end, and the
Made friends of them, jointing their force 'gainst Cæsar;
Whose better issue in the war, from Italy,
Upon the first encounter, drave them.

Ant. Well, what worst?

Mess. The nature of bad news infects the teller.

Ant. When it concerns the fool, or coward. On: ['Tis thus;
Things that are past are done with me. Who tells me true, though in his tale lie death,
I hear him as he flatter'd.

Mess. Labienus—
This is stiff news—hath, with his Parthian force,
Extended Asia from Euphrates;
His conquering banner shook from Syria
To Lydia and to Ionia;
Whilst—

Ant. Antony, thou wouldst say,—

Mess. O, my lord!

Ant. Speak to me home, mince not the general tongue; [Rome:
Name Cleopatra as she 's call'd in

Rail thou in Fulvia's phrase; and taunt my faults
With such full license as both truth and malice
Have power to utter. O, then we bring forth weeds,
When our quick minds lie still; and our ills told us
Is as our earing. Fare thee well awhile.

Mess. At your noble pleasure. [Exit.

Ant. From Sicyon, ho, the news! Speak there!

First Attend. The man from Sicyon, —is there such an one?

Sec. Attend. He stays upon your will.

Ant. Let him appear.
These strong Egyptian fetters I must break,
Or lose myself in dotage.

Enter another Messenger.

What are you?

Sec. Mess. Fulvia thy wife is dead.

Ant. Where died she?

Sec. Mess. In Sicyon:
Her length of sickness, with what else more serious
Importeth thee to know, this bears.

[Gives a letter.

Ant. Forbear me.

[Exit Second Messenger.

There 's a great spirit gone! Thus did I desire it:
What our contempts do often hurl from us,
We wish it ours again; the present pleasure,
By revolution lowering, does become
The opposite of itself: she 's good, being gone;
The hand could pluck her back that shoved her on.
I must from this enchanting queen break off:
Ten thousand harms, more than the ills I know,
My idleness doth hatch. How now! Enobarbus!

Re-enter ENOBARBUS.

Eno. What 's your pleasure, sir?

Ant. I must with haste from hence.

Eno. Why, then we kill all our women. We see how mortal an unkindness is to them; if they suffer our departure, death 's the word.

Ant. I must be gone.

Eno. Under a compelling occasion, let women die: it were pity to cast them away for nothing; though, between them and a great cause, they should be esteemed nothing. Cleopatra, catching but the least noise of this, dies instantly; I have seen her die twenty times upon far poorer moment: I do think there is mettle in death, which commits some loving act upon her, she hath such a celerity in dying.

Ant. She is cunning past man's thought.

Eno. Alack, sir, no; her passions are made of nothing but the finest part of pure love: we cannot call her winds and waters sighs and tears; they are greater storms and tempests than almanacs can report: this cannot be cunning in her; if it be, she makes a shower of rain as well as Jove.

Ant. Would I had never seen her!

Eno. O, sir, you had then left unseen a wonderful piece of work; which not to have been blest withal would have discredited your travel.

Ant. Fulvia is dead.

Eno. Sir?

Ant. Fulvia is dead.

Eno. Fulvia!

Ant. Dead.

Eno. Why, sir, give the gods a thankful sacrifice. When it pleaseth their deities to take the wife of a man from him, it shows to man the tailors of the earth; comforting therein, that when old robes are worn out, there are members to make new. If there were no more women but Fulvia, then had you indeed a cut, and the case to be lamented: this grief is crowned with consolation; your old smock brings forth a new petticoat; and indeed the tears live in an onion that should water this sorrow.

Ant. The business she hath broached in the state
Cannot endure my absence.

Eno. And the business you have broached here cannot be without you; especially that of Cleopatra's, which wholly depends on your abode.

Ant. No more light answers. Let our officers
Have notice what we purpose. I shall break
The cause of our expedience to the queen,
And get her leave to part. For not alone
The death of Fulvia, with more urgent touches,
Do strongly speak to us; but the letters too

Of many our contriving friends in Rome
Petition us at home: Sextus Pompeius
Hath given the dare to Cæsar, and commands
The empire of the sea: our slippery people,
Whose love is never link'd to the deserver
Till his deserts are past, begin to throw
Pompey the Great and all his dignities
Upon his son; who, high in name and power,
Higher than both in blood and life, stands up
For the main soldier: whose quality, going on,
The sides o' the world may danger. Much is breeding,
Which, like the courser's hair, hath yet but life,
And not a serpent's poison. Say, our pleasure,
To such whose place is under us, requires
Our quick remove from hence.

Eno. I shall do 't. [Exeunt.

SCENE III.—The Same. Another Room in the Palace.

Enter CLEOPATRA, CHARMIAN, IRAS, and ALEXAS.

Cleo. Where is he?

Char. I did not see him since.

Cleo. See where he is, who 's with him, what he does:
I did not send you: if you find him sad,
Say I am dancing; if in mirth, report
That I am sudden sick: quick, and return. [Exit ALEXAS.

Char. Madam, methinks, if you did love him dearly,
You do not hold the method to enforce
The like from him.

Cleo. What should I do, I do not?

Char. In each thing give him way, cross him in nothing.

Cleo. Thou teachest like a fool: the way to lose him.

Char. Tempt him not so too far; I wish, forbear: [fear.
In time we hate that which we often
But here comes Antony.

Enter ANTONY.

Cleo. I am sick and sullen.

Ant. I am sorry to give breathing to my purpose,—

Cleo. Help me away, dear Charmian; I shall fall: [nature
It cannot be thus long, the sides of
Will not sustain it.

Ant. Now, my dearest queen,—

Cleo. Pray you, stand further from me.

Ant. What 's the matter?

Cleo. I know, by that same eye, there 's some good news.
What says the married woman? You may go: [to come!
Would she had never given you leave
Let her not say 'tis I that keep you here: [are.
I have no power upon you; hers you

Ant. The gods best know,—

Cleo. O, never was there queen
So mightily betray'd! yet at the first
I saw the treasons planted.

Ant. Cleopatra,—

Cleo. Why should I think you can be mine and true,
Though you in swearing shake the throned gods,
Who have been false to Fulvia? Riotous madness,
To be entangled with those mouth-made vows, [ing!
Which break themselves in swear-

Ant. Most sweet queen,—

Cleo. Nay, pray you, seek no colour for your going,
But bid farewell, and go: when you sued staying, [then;
Then was the time for words: no going
Eternity was in our lips and eyes;
Bliss in our brows' bent; none our parts so poor, [so still,
But was a race of heaven: they are
Or thou, the greatest soldier of the world,
Art turn'd the greatest liar.

Ant. How now, lady!

Cleo. I would I had thy inches; thou shouldst know
There were a heart in Egypt.

Ant. Hear me, queen:
The strong necessity of time commands
Our services awhile; but my full heart
Remains in use with you. Our Italy
Shines o'er with civil swords: Sextus Pompeius [Rome:
Makes his approaches to the port of Equality of two domestic powers
Breed scrupulous faction: the hated, grown to strength,

Are newly grown to love: the condemn'd Pompey,
Rich in his father's honour, creeps apace
Into the hearts of such as have not thrived
Upon the present state, whose numbers threaten;
And quietness, grown sick of rest, would purge
By any desperate change. My more particular,
And that which most with you should safe my going,
Is Fulvia's death.

Cleo. Though age from folly could not give me freedom,
It does from childishness:—can Fulvia die?

Ant. She 's dead, my queen:
Look here, and at thy sovereign leisure read
The garboils she awaked; at the last, best:
See when and where she died.

Cleo. O most false love!
Where be the sacred vials thou shouldst fill
With sorrowful water? Now I see, I see,
In Fulvia's death, how mine received shall be.

Ant. Quarrel no more, but be prepared to know
The purposes I bear; which are, or cease,
As you shall give the advice. By the fire
That quickens Nilus' slime, I go from hence
Thy soldier, servant; making peace or war
As thou affect'st.

Cleo. Cut my lace, Charmian, come;—
But let it be:—I am quickly ill, and well;
So Antony loves.

Ant. My precious queen, forbear;
And give true evidence to his love, which stands
An honourable trial.

Cleo. So Fulvia told me.
I prithee, turn aside and weep for her;
Then bid adieu to me, and say the tears
Belong to Egypt: good now, play one scene
Of excellent dissembling; and let it look
Like perfect honour.

Ant. You'll heat my blood: no more.

Cleo. You can do better yet; but this is meetly.

Ant. Now, by my sword,—

Cleo. And target. Still he mends;
But this is not the best. Look, prithee, Charmian,
How this Herculean Roman does become
The carriage of his chafe.

Ant. I'll leave you, lady.

Cleo. Courteous lord, one word.
Sir, you and I must part,—but that 's not it;
Sir, you and I have loved,—but there 's not it;
That you know well: something it is I would,—
O, my oblivion is a very Antony,
And I am all forgotten.

Ant. But that your royalty
Holds idleness your subject, I should take you
For idleness itself.

Cleo. 'Tis sweating labour
To bear such idleness so near the heart
As Cleopatra this. But, sir, forgive me;
Since my becomings kill me when they do not
Eye well to you. Your honour calls you hence;
Therefore be deaf to my unpitied folly,
And all the gods go with you! Upon your sword
Sit laurel victory! and smooth success
Be strew'd before your feet!

Ant, Let us go. Come;
Our separation so abides, and flies,
That thou, residing here, go'st yet with me,
And I, hence fleeting, here remain with thee.
Away! Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—Rome. CÆSAR'S House.

Enter OCTAVIUS CÆSAR, reading a letter, LEPIDUS, and Attendants.

Cæs. You may see, Lepidus, and henceforth know,
It is not Cæsar's natural vice to hate
Our great competitor: from Alexandria
This is the news: he fishes, drinks, and wastes
The lamps of night in revel: is not more manlike
Than Cleopatra; nor the queen of Ptolemy
More womanly than he: hardly gave audience, or Vouchsafed to think he had partners: you shall find there
A man who is the abstract of all faults
That all men follow.

Lep. I must not think there are
Evils enow to darken all his goodness:

His faults, in him, seem as the spots of heaven,
More fiery by night's blackness; hereditary
Rather than purchased; what he cannot change
Than what he chooses.

Cæs. You are too indulgent. Let us grant it is not Amiss to tumble on the bed of Ptolemy;
To give a kingdom for a mirth; to sit
And keep the turn of tippling with a slave;
To reel the streets at noon, and stand the buffet
With knaves that smell of sweat: say this becomes him,—
As his composure must be rare indeed
Whom these things cannot blemish,—yet must Antony
No way excuse his soils, when we do bear
So great weight in his lightness. If he fill'd
His vacancy with his voluptuousness,
Full surfeits, and the dryness of his bones,
Call on him for 't: but to confound such time,
That drums him from his sport, and speaks as loud
As his own state and ours,—'tis to be chid
As we rate boys; who, being mature in knowledge,
Pawn their experience to their present pleasure,
And so rebel to judgment.

Enter a Messenger.

Lep. Here 's more news.

Mess. Thy biddings have been done; and every hour,
Most noble Cæsar, shalt thou have report
How 'tis abroad. Pompey is strong at sea;
And it appears he is beloved of those
That only have fear'd Cæsar: to the ports
The discontents repair, and men's reports
Give him much wrong'd.

Cæs. I should have known no less.
It hath been taught us from the primal state,
That he which is was wish'd until he were;
And the ebb'd man, ne'er loved till ne'er worth love,
Comes dear'd by being lack'd. This common body,
Like to a vagabond flag upon the stream,
Goes to and back, lackeying the varying tide,
To rot itself with motion.

Mess. Cæsar, I bring thee word,
Menecrates and Menas, famous pirates,
Make the sea serve them; which they ear and wound
With keels of every kind: many hot inroads
They make in Italy; the borders maritime
Lack blood to think on 't, and flush youth revolt:
No vessel can peep forth, but 'tis as soon
Taken as seen; for Pompey's name strikes more
Than could his war resisted.

Cæs. Antony,
Leave thy lascivious wassails. When thou once
Wast beaten from Modena, where thou slew'st
Hirtius and Pansa, consuls, at thy heel
Did famine follow; whom thou fought'st against,
Though daintily brought up, with patience more
Than savages could suffer: thou didst drink
The stale of horses and the gilded puddle
Which beasts would cough at: thy palate then did deign
The roughest berry on the rudest hedge;
Yea, like the stag, when snow the pasture sheets,
The barks of trees thou browsed'st; on the Alps
It is reported thou didst eat strange flesh,
Which some did die to look on: and all this—now—
It wounds thine honour that I speak it now,
Was borne so like a soldier, that thy cheek
So much as lank'd not.

Lep. 'Tis pity of him.

Cæs. Let his shames quickly
Drive him to Rome: 'tis time we twain
Did show ourselves i' the field; and to that end
Assemble we immediate council: Pompey
Thrives in our idleness.

Lep. To-morrow, Cæsar,
I shall be furnish'd to inform you rightly
Both what by sea and land I can be able
To front this present time.

Cæs. Till which encounter,
It is my business too. Farewell.

Lep. Farewell, my lord: what you shall know meantime
Of stirs abroad, I shall beseech you, sir,
To let me be partaker.

Cæs. Doubt not, sir;
I knew it for my bond. Exeunt.

SCENE V.—Alexandria. CLEOPATRA'S Palace.

Enter CLEOPATRA, CHARMIAN, IRAS, and MARDIAN.

Cleo. Charmian!
Char. Madam?
Cleo. Ha, ha!
Give me to drink mandragora.
Char. Why, madam?
Cleo. That I might sleep out this great gap of time
My Antony is away.
Char. You think of him too much.
Cleo. O, 'tis treason!
Char. Madam, I trust, not so.
Cleo. Thou, eunuch Mardian!
Mar. What 's your highness' pleasure? [take no pleasure
Cleo. Not now to hear thee sing; I
In aught an eunuch has: 'tis well for thee, [thoughts
That, being unseminar'd, thy freer
May not fly forth of Egypt. Hast thou affections?
Mar. Yes, gracious madam.
Cleo. Indeed!
Mar. Not in deed, madam; for I can do nothing
But what indeed is honest to be done:
Yet have I fierce affections, and think
What Venus did with Mars.
Cleo. O Charmian,
Where think'st thou he is now? Stands he, or sits he? [horse?
Or does he walk? or is he on his
O happy horse, to bear the weight of Antony!
Do bravely, horse! for wot'st thou whom thou movest?
The demi-Atlas of this earth, the arm
And burgonet of men: he 's speaking now, [of old Nile?'
Or murmuring 'Where 's my serpent
For so he calls me. Now I feed myself
With most delicious poison. Think on me, [pinches black,
That am with Phœbus' amorous
And wrinkled deep in time? Broad-fronted Cæsar, [I was
When thou wast here above the ground,
A morsel for a monarch: and great Pompey [in my brow;
Would stand and make his eyes grow
There would he anchor his aspect, and die
With looking on his life.

Enter ALEXAS.

Alex. Sovereign of Egypt, hail!
Cleo. How much unlike art thou Mark Antony!
Yet, coming from him, that great medicine hath
With his tinct gilded thee.
How goes it with my brave Mark Antony? [queen,
Alex. Last thing he did, dear
He kiss'd—the last of many doubled kisses— [in my heart.
This orient pearl. His speech sticks
Cleo. Mine ear must pluck it thence.
Alex. 'Good friend,' quoth he,
'Say, the firm Roman to great Egypt sends [foot,
This treasure of an oyster; at whose
To mend the petty present, I will piece
Her opulent throne with kingdoms; all the east, [he nodded,
Say thou, shall call her mistress.' So
And soberly did mount an arrogant steed, [would have spoke
Who neigh'd so high, that what I
Was beastly dumb'd by him.
Cleo. What, was he sad or merry?
Alex. Like to the time o' the year between the extremes [merry.
Of hot and cold; he was nor sad nor
Cleo. O well-divided disposition! Note him,
Note him, good Charmian, 'tis the man; but note him: [on those
He was not sad; for he would shine
That make their looks by his: he was not merry; [brance lay
Which seem'd to tell them his remem-
In Egypt with his joy; but between both. [merry,
O heavenly mingle! Beest thou sad or
The violence of either thee becomes,
So does it no man else.—Met'st thou my posts? [messengers:
Alex. Ay, madam, twenty several
Why do you send so thick?
Cleo. Who 's born that day
When I forget to send to Antony,
Shall die a beggar.—Ink and paper, Charmian.— [Charmian,
Welcome, my good Alexas.—Did I,
Ever love Cæsar so?
Char. O that brave Cæsar!
Cleo. Be choked with such another emphasis!
Say, the brave Antony.

Char. The valiant Cæsar!
Cleo. By Isis, I will give thee bloody teeth,
If thou with Cæsar paragon again
My man of men. [pardon,
Char. By your most gracious
I sing but after you.
Cleo. My salad days,
When I was green in judgment: cold in blood, [away;
To say as I said then! But come,
Get me ink and paper: [greeting,
He shall have every day a several
Or I'll unpeople Egypt. [Exeunt.

ACT II.

SCENE I.—Messina. POMPEY'S House.

Enter POMPEY, MENECRATES, and MENAS.

Pom. If the great gods be just, they shall assist
The deeds of justest men.
Mene. Know, worthy Pompey,
That what they do delay, they not deny. [their throne, decays
Pom. Whiles we are suitors to
The thing we sue for.
Mene. We, ignorant of ourselves,
Beg often our own harms, which the wise powers [profit
Deny us for our good; so find we
By losing of our prayers.
Pom. I shall do well:
The people love me, and the sea is mine; [ing hope
My power's a crescent, and my augur-
Says it will come to the full. Mark Antony
In Egypt sits at dinner, and will make
No wars without doors: Cæsar gets money where [both,
He loses hearts: Lepidus flatters
Of both is flatter'd; but he neither loves,
Nor either cares for him.
Men. Cæsar and Lepidus
Are in the field; a mighty strength they carry. [false.
Pom. Where have you this? 'tis
Men. From Silvius, sir.
Pom. He dreams: I know they are in Rome together,
Looking for Antony. But all the charms of love,
Salt Cleopatra, soften thy waned lip!
Let witchcraft join with beauty, lust with both!
Tie up the libertine in a field of feasts,
Keep his brain fuming; Epicurean cooks [tite;
Sharpen with cloyless sauce his appe-
That sleep and feeding may prorogue his honour
Even till a Lethe'd dulness!

Enter VARRIUS.

How now, Varrius!
Var. This is most certain that I shall deliver:
Mark Antony is every hour in Rome
Expected: since he went from Egypt 'tis
A space for further travel.
Pom. I could have given less matter
A better ear. Menas, I did not think
This amorous surfeiter would have donn'd his helm
For such a petty war: his soldiership
Is twice the other twain: but let us rear [ing
The higher our opinion, that our stirr-
Can from the lap of Egypt's widow pluck
The ne'er-lust-wearied Antony.
Men. I cannot hope
Cæsar and Antony shall well greet together: [Cæsar;
His wife that's dead did trespasses to
His brother warr'd upon him; although, I think,
Not moved by Antony.
Pom. I know not, Menas,
How lesser enmities may give way to greater. [them all,
Were 't not that we stand up against
'Twere pregnant they should square between themselves;
For they have entertained cause enough
To draw their swords: but how the fear of us [up
May cement their divisions and bind
The petty difference, we yet not know.
Be 't as our gods will have 't! It only stands [hands.
Our lives upon to use our strongest Come, Menas. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—Rome. The House of LEPIDUS.

Enter ENOBARBUS and LEPIDUS.

Lep. Good Enobarbus, 'tis a worthy deed,
And shall become you well, to entreat your captain
To soft and gentle speech.
Eno. I shall entreat him
To answer like himself: if Cæsar move him,
Let Antony look over Cæsar's head
And speak as loud as Mars. By Jupiter,
Were I the wearer of Antonius' beard,
I would not shave 't to-day.
Lep. 'Tis not a time
For private stomaching.
Eno. Every time
Serves for the matter that is then born in it.
Lep. But small to greater matters must give way.
Eno. Not if the small come first.
Lep. Your speech is passion:
But, pray you, stir no embers up. Here comes
The noble Antony.

Enter ANTONY and VENTIDIUS.

Eno. And yonder, Cæsar.

Enter CÆSAR, MECÆNAS, and AGRIPPA.

Ant. If we compose well here, to Parthia:
Hark you, Ventidius.
Cæs. I do not know,
Mecænas; ask Agrippa.
Lep. Noble friends,
That which combined us was most great, and let not a leaner action rend us. What 's amiss,
May it be gently heard: when we debate our trivial difference loud, we do commit
Murder in healing wounds: then, noble partners,
The rather, for I earnestly beseech,
Touch you the sourest points with sweetest terms,
Nor curstness grow to the matter.
Ant. 'Tis spoken well.
Were we before our armies, and to fight,
I should do thus.
Cæs. Welcome to Rome.
Ant. Thank you.
Cæs. Sit.
Ant. Sit, sir.
Cæs. Nay, then.
Ant. I learn, you take things ill which are not so,
Or being, concern you not.
Cæs. I must be laugh'd at,
If, or for nothing or a little, I
Should say myself offended, and with you
Chiefly i' the world; more laugh'd at,
Once name you derogately, when to sound your name
It not concern'd me.
Ant. My being in Egypt, Cæsar,
What was 't to you?
Cæs. No more than my residing here at Rome
Might be to you in Egypt: yet, if you there
Did practise on my state, your being in Egypt
Might be my question.
Ant. How intend you, practised?
Cæs. You may be pleased to catch at mine intent
By what did here befall me. Your wife and brother made wars upon me; and their contestation
Was theme for you, you were the word of war.
Ant. You do mistake your business; my brother never it;
Did urge me in his act: I did inquire
And have my learning from some true reports that drew their swords with you. Did he not rather Discredit my authority with yours;
And make the wars alike against my stomach, having alike your cause? Of this my letters
Before did satisfy you. If you'll patch a quarrel, as matter whole you have not to make it with,
It must not be with this.
Cæs. You praise yourself
By laying defects of judgment to me, but
You patch'd up your excuses.
Ant. Not so, not so;
I know you could not lack, I am certain on't,
Very necessity of this thought, that I,
Your partner in the cause 'gainst which he fought,
Could not with graceful eyes attend those wars
Which fronted mine own peace. As for my wife, I would you had her spirit in such another:
The third o' the world is yours; which with a snaffle you may pace easy, but not such a wife.
Eno. Would we had all such wives, that the men might go to wars with the women! [boils, Cæsar,

Ant. So much uncurbable, her gar-
Made out of her impatience, which not wanted [grant
Shrewdness of policy too, I grieving
Did you too much disquiet: for that you must
But say, I could not help it.
Cæs. I wrote to you
When rioting in Alexandria; you Did pocket up my letters, and with taunts
Did gibe my missive out of audience.
Ant. Sir,
He fell upon me ere admitted: then
Three kings I had newly feasted, and did want [next day
Of what I was i' the morning; but I told him of myself; which was as much [this fellow
As to have ask'd him pardon. Let
Be nothing of our strife; if we contend,
Out of our question wipe him.
Cæs. You have broken
The article of your oath; which you shall never
Have tongue to charge me with.
Lep. Soft, Cæsar!
Ant. No, Lepidus, let him speak:
The honour 's sacred which he talks on now, [Cæsar;
Supposing that I lack'd it. But on,
The article of my oath.
Cæs. To lend me arms and aid when
I required them;
The which you both denied.
Ant. Neglected, rather;
And then when poison'd hours had bound me up [as I may,
From mine own knowledge. As nearly I'll play the penitent to you: but mine honesty [my power
Shall not make poor my greatness, nor Work without it. Truth is, that Fulvia,
To have me out of Egypt, made wars
here; [do
For which myself, the ignorant motive,
So far ask pardon as befits mine honour
To stoop in such a case.
Lep. 'Tis noble spoken.
Mec. If it might please you, to enforce no further [quite
The griefs between ye: to forget them
Were to remember that the present need
Speaks to atone you.
Lep. Worthily spoken, Mecænas.
Eno. Or, if you borrow one another's love for the instant, you may, when you hear no more words of Pompey, return it again: you shall have time to wrangle in when you have nothing else to do. [no more.
Ant. Thou art a soldier only: speak
Eno. That truth should be silent I had almost forgot.
Ant. You wrong this presence;
therefore speak no more.
Eno. Go to, then; your considerate stone. [ter, but
Cæs. I do not much dislike the mat-
The manner of his speech; for it cannot be [conditions
We shall remain in friendship, our So differing in their acts. Yet, if I knew [from edge to edge
What hoop should hold us stanch,
O' the world I would pursue it.
Agr. Give me leave, Cæsar,—
Cæs. Speak, Agrippa.
Agr. Thou hast a sister by the mother's side,
Admired Octavia: great Mark Antony
Is now a widower.
Cæs. Say not so, Agrippa:
If Cleopatra heard you, your reproof
Were well deserved of rashness.
Ant. I am not married, Cæsar: let me hear
Agrippa further speak.
Agr. To hold you in perpetual amity,
To make you brothers, and to knit your hearts
With an unslipping knot, take Antony
Octavia to his wife; whose beauty claims [of men;
No worse a husband than the best
Whose virtue and whose general graces speak [this marriage,
That which none else can utter. By All little jealousies, which now seem great, [their dangers,
And all great fears, which now import
Would then be nothing: truths would be tales, [love to both
Where now half tales be truths: her
Would each to other and all loves to both [spoke;
Draw after her. Pardon what I have
For 'tis a studied, not a present thought,
By duty ruminated.

Ant. Will Cæsar speak?
Cæs. Not till he hears how Antony is touch'd
With what is spoke already.
Ant. What power is in Agrippa,
If I would say, 'Agrippa, be it so,'
To make this good?
Cæs. The power of Cæsar, and His power unto Octavia.
Ant. May I never
To this good purpose, that so fairly shows, [thy hand:
Dream of impediment! Let me have Further this act of grace; and from this hour [loves
The heart of brothers govern in our
And sway our great designs!
Cæs. There is my hand.
A sister I bequeath you, whom no brother
Did ever love so dearly: let her live
To join our kingdoms and our hearts; and never Fly off our loves again!
Lep. Happily, amen!
Ant. I did not think to draw my sword 'gainst Pompey;
For he hath laid strange courtesies and great [only,
Of late upon me: I must thank him
Lest my remembrance suffer ill report;
At heel of that, defy him.
Lep. Time calls upon us:
Of us must Pompey presently be sought,
Or else he seeks out us.
Ant. Where lies he?
Cæs. About the Mount Misenum.
Ant. What's his strength
By land? [sea
Cæs. Great and increasing; but by
He is an absolute master.
Ant. So is the fame.
Would we had spoke together! Haste we for it: [dispatch we
Yet, ere we put ourselves in arms,
The business we have talk'd of.
Cæs. With most gladness;
And do invite you to my sister's view,
Whither straight I'll lead you.
Ant. Let us, Lepidus.
Not lack your company.
Lep. Noble Antony,
Not sickness should detain me.

[Flourish. Exeunt CÆSAR, ANTONY, and LEPIDUS.

Mec. Welcome from Egypt, sir.
Eno. Half the heart of Cæsar, worthy Mecænas!—My honourable friend, Agrippa!
Agr. Good Enobarbus!
Mec. We, have cause to be glad that matters are so well digested. You stay'd well by 't in Egypt.
Eno. Ay, sir; we did sleep day out of countenance, and made the night light with drinking.
Mec. Eight wild-boars roasted whole at a breakfast, and but twelve persons there; is this true?
Eno. This was but as a fly by an eagle: we had much more monstrous matter of feast, which worthily deserved noting.
Mec. She 's a most triumphant lady, if report be square to her.
Eno. When she first met Mark Antony, she pursed up his heart, upon the river of Cydnus.
Agr. There she appeared indeed; or my reporter devised well for her.
Eno. I will tell you. [throne,
The barge she sat in, like a burnish'd
Burn'd on the water: the poop was beaten gold;
Purple the sails, and so perfumed that
The winds were love-sick with them: the oars were silver,
Which to the tune of flutes kept stroke, and made [faster,
The water which they beat to follow
As amorous of their strokes. For her own person,
It beggar'd all description: she did lie
In her pavilion—cloth-of-gold of tissue—
O'er-picturing that Venus where we see
The fancy outwork nature: on each side her [ing Cupids,
Stood pretty dimpled boys, like smil-
With divers-colour'd fans, whose wind did seem [did cool,
To glow the delicate cheeks which they
And what they undid did.
Agr. O, rare for Antony!
Eno. Her gentlewomen, like the Nereides, [the eyes,
So many mermaids, tended her i'
And made their bends adornings: at the helm [tackle
A seeming mermaid steers; the silken
Swell with the touches of those flower-soft hands, [barge
That yarely frame the office. From the

A strange invisible perfume hits the sense
Of the adjacent wharfs. The city cast
Her people out upon her; and Antony,
Enthroned i' the market-place, did sit alone, [vacancy,
Whistling to the air; which, but for
Had gone to gaze on Cleopatra too,
And made a gap in nature.
Agr. Rare Egyptian!
Eno. Upon her landing, Antony sent to her,
Invited her to supper: she replied,
It should be better he became her guest; [Antony,
Which she entreated: our courteous
Whom ne'er the word of 'No' woman heard speak, [the feast;
Being barber'd ten times o'er, goes to
And, for his ordinary, pays his heart
For what his eyes eat only.
Agr. Royal wench!
She made great Cæsar lay his sword to bed:
He plough'd her, and she cropp'd.
Eno. I saw her once
Hop forty paces through the public street; [and panted,
And having lost her breath, she spoke,
That she did make defect perfection,
And, breathless, power breathe forth.
Mec. Now Antony must leave her utterly.
Eno. Never; he will not: [stale
Age cannot wither her, nor custom
Her infinite variety: other women cloy [makes hungry
The appetites they feed, but she
Where most she satisfies; for vilest things [holy priests
Become themselves in her; that the
Bless her when she is riggish.
Mec. If beauty, wisdom, modesty, can settle
The heart of Antony, Octavia is
A blessed lottery to him.
Agr. Let us go.
Good Enobarbus, make yourself my guest
Whilst you abide here.
Eno. Humbly, sir, I thank you.
[Exeunt.

SCENE III.—The Same. CÆSAR'S House.

Enter CÆSAR, ANTONY, OCTAVIA between them, and Attendants.

Ant. The world and my great office will sometimes Divide me from your bosom.
Octa. All which time
Before the gods my knee shall bow my prayers
To them for you.
Ant. [To CÆSAR.] Good night, sir.—
My Octavia, [report:
Read not my blemishes inethe world's
I have not kept my squar; but that to come [night, dear lady.—
Shall all be done by the rule. Good
Good night, sir.
Cæs. Good night.
[Exeunt all but ANTONY.

Enter Soothsayer.

Ant. Now, sirrah; you do wish yourself in Egypt?
Sooth. Would I had never come from thence, nor you Thither!
Ant. If you can, your reason?
Sooth. I see it in
My motion, have it not in my tongue: but yet
Hie you again to Egypt.
Ant. Say to me,
Whose fortunes shall rise higher, Cæsar's or mine?
Sooth. Cæsar's. [side:
Therefore, O Antony, stay not by his Thy demon, that 's thy spirit which keeps thee, is Noble, courageous, high, unmatchable,
Where Cæsar's is not; but, near him, thy angel [therefore Becomes a Fear, as being o'erpower'd;
Make space enough between you.
Ant. Speak this no more.
Sooth. To none but thee; no more but when to thee. [game,
If thou dost play with him at any
Thou art sure to lose; and, of that natural luck,
He beats thee 'gainst the odds; thy lustre thickens [spirit
When he shines by: I say again, thy
Is all afraid to govern thee near him;
But, he away, 'tis noble.
Ant. Get thee gone:
Say to Ventidius I would speak with him; [Exit Soothsayer.
He shall to Parthia.—Be it art or hap,
He hath spoken true: the very dice obey him;

And in our sports my better cunning faints
Under his chance: if we draw lots, he speeds;
His cocks do win the battle still of mine
When it is all to nought; and his quails ever
Beat mine, inhoop'd, at odds. I will to Egypt:
And though I make this marriage for my peace,
I' the east my pleasure lies.

Enter VENTIDIUS.

O, come, Ventidius,
You must to Parthia: your commission 's ready;
Follow me, and receive it. [Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—The Same. A Street.

Enter LEPIDUS, MECÆNAS, and AGRIPPA.

Lep. Trouble yourselves no further: pray you, hasten
Your generals after.
Agr. Sir, Mark Antony
Will e'en but kiss Octavia, and we'll follow.
Lep. Till I shall see you in your soldier's dress,
Which will become you both, farewell.
Mec. We shall,
As I conceive the journey, be at the Mount
Before you, Lepidus.
Lep. Your way is shorter;
My purposes do draw me much about:
You'll win two days upon me.
Mec. } Sir, good success!
Agr. }
Lep. Farewell. [Exeunt.

SCENE V.—Alexandria. CLEOPATRA'S Palace.

Enter CLEOPATRA, CHARMIAN, IRAS, and ALEXAS.

Cleo. Give me some music; music, moody food
Of us that trade in love.
Attend. The music, ho!

Enter MARDIAN.

Cleo. Let it alone; let us to billiards: come, Charmian.
Char. My arm is sore; best play with Mardian.
Cleo. As well a woman with an eunuch play'd
As with a woman.—Come, you'll play with me, sir?
Mar. As well as I can, madam.
Cleo. And when good will is show'd, though 't come too short,
The actor may plead pardon. I'll none now:
Give me mine angle; we'll to the river: there,
My music playing far off, I will betray
Tawny-finn'd fishes; my bended hook shall pierce
Their slimy jaws; and, as I draw them up,
I'll think them every one an Antony,
And say 'Ah, ha! you're caught.'
Char. 'Twas merry when
You wager'd on your angling; when your diver
Did hang a salt-fish on his hook, which he
With fervency drew up.
Cleo. That time,—O times!—
I laugh'd him out of patience; and that night
I laugh'd him into patience: and next morn,
Ere the ninth hour, I drunk him to his bed;
Then put my tires and mantles on him, whilst
I wore his sword Philippan.

Enter a Messenger.

O, from Italy!
Ram thou thy fruitful tidings in mine ears,
That long time have been barren.
Mess. Madam, madam,—
Cleo. Antony 's dead! If thou say so, villain,
Thou kill'st thy mistress; but well and free,
If thou so yield him, there is gold, and here
My bluest veins to kiss; a hand that kings
Have lipp'd, and trembled kissing.
Mess. First, madam, he is well.
Cleo. Why, there 's more gold.
But, sirrah, mark, we use to say the dead are well: bring it to that,
The gold I give thee will I melt and pour
Down thy ill-uttering throat.
Mess. Good madam, hear me.
Cleo. Well, go to, I will;
But there 's no goodness in thy face: if Antony
Be free and healthful,—so tart a favour
To trumpet such good tidings! If not well,
Thou shouldst come like a Fury crown'd with snakes,

Not like a formal man.
Mess. Will 't please you hear me ?
Cleo. I have a mind to strike thee ere thou speak'st :
Yet, if thou say Antony lives, is well,
Or friends with Cæsar, or not captive to him, [hail
I'll set thee in a shower of gold, and Rich pearls upon thee.
Mess. Madam, he 's well.
Cleo. Well said.
Mess. And friends with Cæsar.
Cleo. Thou'rt an honest man.
Mess. Cæsar and he are greater friends than ever. [me.
Cleo. Make thee a fortune from Mess. But yet, madam,—
Cleo. I do not like ' But yet,' it does allay [yet ' !
The good precedence ; fie upon ' But
' But yet ' is as a gaoler to bring forth
Some monstrous malefactor. Prithee, friend, [ear,
Pour out the pack of matter to mine
The good and bad together : he 's friends with Cæsar ;
In state of health, thou say'st ; and, thou say'st, free.
Mess. Free, madam ! no ; I make no such report :
He 's bound unto Octavia.
Cleo. For what good turn ?
Mess. For the best turn i' the bed.
Cleo. I am pale, Charmian.
Mess. Madam, he 's married to Octavia.
Cleo. The most infectious pestilence upon thee ! [Strikes him down.
Mess. Good madam, patience.
Cleo. What say you ? Hence, [Strikes him again.
Horrible villain ! or I'll spurn thine eyes
Like balls before me ; I'll unhair thy head :
[She hales him up and down.
Thou shalt be whipp'd with wire, and stew'd in brine,
Smarting in lingering pickle.
Mess. Gracious madam,
I that do bring the news made not the match. [will give thee,
Cleo. Say 'tis not so, a province I
And make thy fortunes proud : the blow thou hadst [to rage ;
Shall make thy peace for moving me
And I will boot thee with what gift beside Thy modesty can beg.
Mess. He 's married, madam.
Cleo. Rogue, thou hast lived too long. [Draws a knife.
Mess. Nay, then I'll run :—
What mean you, madam ? I have made no fault. [Exit.
Char. Good madam, keep yourself within yourself :
The man is innocent.
Cleo. Some innocents 'scape not the thunderbolt. [tures
Melt Egypt into Nile ! and kindly crea-
Turn all to serpents ! Call the slave again : [call.
Though I am mad, I will not bite him :
Char. He is afeard to come.
Cleo. I will not hurt him. [Exit CHARMIAN.
These hands do lack nobility, that they strike
A meaner than myself ; since I myself
Have given myself the cause.

Re-enter CHARMIAN and Messenger.

Come hither, sir.
Though it be honest, it is never good
To bring bad news : give to a gracious message [ings tell
An host of tongues ; but let ill tid-
Themselves when they be felt.
Mess. I have done my duty.
Cleo. Is he married ?
I cannot hate thee worser than I do,
If thou again say ' Yes.'
Mess. He 's married, madam.
Cleo. The gods confound thee ! dost thou hold there still ?
Mess. Should I lie, madam ?
Cleo. O, I would thou didst,
So half my Egypt were submerged and made [thee hence :
A cistern for scaled snakes ! Go, get
Hadst thou Narcissus in thy face, to me
Thou wouldst appear most ugly. He is married ?
Mess. I crave your highness' pardon.
Cleo. He is married ?
Mess. Take no offence that I would not offend you : [do
To punish me for what you make me
Seems much unequal : he 's married to Octavia. [a knave of thee,
Cleo. O, that his fault should make

That art not what thou'rt sure of! Get thee hence:
The merchandise which thou hast brought from Rome
Are all too dear for me; lie they upon thy hand,
And be undone by 'em!
[Exit Messenger.
Char. Good your highness, patience.
Cleo. In praising Antony, I have dispraised Cæsar.
Char. Many times, madam.
Cleo. I am paid for 't now.
Lead me from hence;
I faint: O Iras, Charmian!—'tis no matter:— [him
Go to the fellow, good Alexas; bid
Report the feature of Octavia, her years,
Her inclination; let him not leave out
The colour of her hair: bring me word quickly. [Exit ALEXAS.
Let him for ever go:—let him not—Charmian, [a Gorgon,
Though he be painted one way like
The other way 's a Mars. [To MARDIAN] Bid you Alexas
Bring me word how tall she is.—Pity me, Charmian,
But do not speak to me. Lead me to my chamber. [Exeunt.

SCENE VI.—Near Misenum.

Flourish. Enter POMPEY and MENAS, at one side, with Drum and Trumpet; at another, CÆSAR, ANTONY, LEPIDUS, ENOBARBUS, MECÆNAS, with Soldiers marching.

Pom. Your hostages I have, so have you mine;
And we shall talk before we fight.
Cæs. Most meet
That first we come to words; and therefore have we
Our written purposes before us sent;
Which, if thou hast consider'd, let us know
If 'twill tie up thy discontented sword,
And carry back to Sicily much tall youth
That else must perish here.
Pom. To you all three,
The senators alone of this great world,
Chief factors for the gods, I do not know [want,
Wherefore my father should revengers
Having a son and friends; since Julius Cæsar, [ghosted,
Who at Philippi the good Brutus
There saw you labouring for him. What was 't [and what
That moved pale Cassius to conspire?
Made the all-honour'd, honest Roman, Brutus, [teous freedom,
With the arm'd rest, courtiers of beau-
To drench the Capitol, but that they would [is it
Have one man but a man? And that
Hath made me rig my navy; at whose burden [I meant
The anger'd ocean foams; with which
To scourge the ingratitude that despiteful Rome
Cast on my noble father.
Cæs. Take your time.
Ant. Thou canst not fear us, Pompey, with thy sails;
We'll speak with thee at sea: at land, thou know'st
How much we do o'ercount thee.
Pom. At land, indeed,
Thou dost o'ercount me of my father's house: [himself,
But, since the cuckoo builds not for
Remain in 't as thou mayst.
Lep. Be pleased to tell us—
For this is from the present—how you take
The offers we have sent you.
Cæs. There 's the point.
Ant. Which do not be entreated to, but weigh
What it is worth embraced.
Cæs. And what may follow,
To try a larger fortune.
Pom. You have made me offer
Of Sicily, Sardinia; and I must Rid all the sea of pirates; then, to send Measures of wheat to Rome; this 'greed upon, [bear back
To part with unhack'd edges, and
Our targes undinted.
Cæs. } That 's our offer.
Ant. }
Lep. }
Pom. Know then,
I came before you here a man prepared
To take this offer: but Mark Antony
Put me to some impatience. Though I lose [know
The praise of it by telling, you must

When Cæsar and your brother were at blows, [find
Your mother came to Sicily and did
Her welcome friendly.

Ant. I have heard it, Pompey;
And am well studied for a liberal thanks
Which I do owe you.

Pom. Let me have your hand:
I did not think, sir, to have met you here.

Ant. The beds i' the east are soft; and thanks to you,
That call'd me timelier than my purpose hither;
For I have gain'd by 't.

Cæs. Since I saw you last,
There is a change upon you.

Pom. Well, I know not
What counts harsh Fortune casts upon my face;
But in my bosom shall she never come,
To make my heart her vassal.

Lep. Well met here.

Pom. I hope so, Lepidus.—Thus we are agreed: [ten,
I crave our composition may be writ-
And seal'd between us.

Cæs. That 's the next to do.

Pom. We'll feast each other ere we part; and let 's
Draw lots who shall begin.

Ant. That will I, Pompey.

Pom. No, Antony, take the lot:
But, first or last, your fine Egyptian cookery
Shall have the fame. I have heard that Julius Cæsar
Grew fat with feasting there.

Ant. You have heard much.

Pom. I have fair meanings, sir.

Ant. And fair words to them.

Pom. Then so much have I heard:
And I have heard, Apollodorus carried—

Eno. No more of that: he did so.

Pom. What, I pray you?

Eno. A certain queen to Cæsar in a mattress. [thou, soldier?

Pom. I know thee now; how farest

Eno. Well;
And well am like to do; for I perceive
Four feasts are toward.

Pom. Let me shake thy hand;
I never hated thee: I have seen thee fight,
When I have envied thy behaviour.

Eno. Sir,
I never loved you much; but I ha' praised ye [times as much
When you have well deserved ten
As I have said you did.

Pom. Enjoy thy plainness,
It nothing ill becomes thee.
Aboard my galley I invite you all:
Will you lead, lords?

Cæs.
Ant.
Lep. } Show us the way, sir.

Pom. Come.

[Exeunt all but MENAS and ENOBARBUS.

Men. [Aside.] Thy father, Pompey, would ne'er have made this treaty. [To ENOBARBUS] You and I have known, sir.

Eno. At sea, I think.

Men. We have, sir.

Eno. You have done well by water.

Men. And you by land.

Eno. I will praise any man that will praise me; though it cannot be denied what I have done by land. [water.

Men. Nor what I have done by

Eno. Yes, something you can deny for your own safety: you have been a great thief by sea.

Men. And you by land.

Eno. There I deny my land service. But give me your hand, Menas: if our eyes had authority, here they might take two thieves kissing.

Men. All men's faces are true, whatsoe'er their hands are.

Eno. But there is never a fair woman has a true face.

Men. No slander; they steal hearts.

Eno. We came hither to fight with you.

Men. For my part, I am sorry it is turned to a drinking. Pompey doth this day laugh away his fortune.

Eno. If he do, sure he cannot weep 't back again.

Men. You have said, sir. We looked not for Mark Antony here: pray you, is he married to Cleopatra?

Eno. Cæsar's sister is called Octavia.

Men. True, sir; she was the wife of Caius Marcellus. [Marcus Antonius.

Eno. But she is now the wife of Men. Pray you, sir?

Eno. 'Tis true. [knit together.

Men. Then is Cæsar and he for ever

Eno. If I were bound to divine of this unity, I would not prophesy so.

Men. I think the policy of that purpose made more in the marriage than the love of the parties.

Eno. I think so too. But you shall find, the band that seems to tie their friendship together will be the very strangler of their amity: Octavia is of a holy, cold, and still conversation.

Men. Who would not have his wife so?

Eno. Not he that himself is not so; which is Mark Antony. He will to his Egyptian dish again: then shall the sighs of Octavia blow the fire up in Cæsar; and, as I said before, that which is the strength of their amity shall prove the immediate author of their variance. Antony will use his affection where it is: he married but his occasion here.

Men. And thus it may be. Come, sir, will you aboard? I have a health for you.

Eno. I shall take it, sir: we have used our throats in Egypt.

Men. Come, let's away. [Exeunt.

SCENE VII.—On board POMPEY'S Galley, off Misenum.

Music. Enter two or three Servants, with a Banquet.

First Serv. Here they'll be, man. Some o' their plants are ill-rooted already; the least wind i' the world will blow them down.

Sec. Serv. Lepidus is high-coloured.

First Serv. They have made him drink alms-drink.

Sec. Serv. As they pinch one another by the disposition, he cries out 'No more;' reconciles them to his entreaty, and himself to the drink.

First Serv. But it raises the greater war between him and his discretion.

Sec. Serv. Why, this it is to have a name in great men's fellowship: I had as lief have a reed that will do me no service as a partisan I could not heave.

First Serv. To be called into a huge sphere, and not to be seen to move in't, are the holes where eyes should be, which pitifully disaster the cheeks.

A Sennet sounded. Enter CÆSAR, ANTONY, LEPIDUS, POMPEY, AGRIPPA, MECÆNAS, ENOBARBUS, MENAS, with other Captains.

Ant. [To CÆSAR.] Thus do they, sir: they take the flow o' the Nile
By certain scales i' the pyramid; they know,
By the height, the lowness, or the mean, if dearth
Or foison follow: the higher Nilus swells,
The more it promises: as it ebbs, the seedsman
Upon the slime and ooze scatters his grain,
And shortly comes to harvest.

Lep. You've strange serpents there.

Ant. Ay, Lepidus.

Lep. Your serpent of Egypt is bred now of your mud by the operation of your sun: so is your crocodile.

Ant. They are so.

Pom. Sit,—and some wine! A health to Lepidus!

Lep. I am not so well as I should be, but I'll ne'er out.

Eno. Not till you have slept; I fear me you'll be in till then.

Lep. Nay, certainly, I have heard the Ptolemies' pyramises are very goodly things; without contradiction, I have heard that.

Men. [Aside to POMPEY.] Pompey, a word.

Pom. [Aside to MENAS.] Say in mine ear: what is 't?

Men. [Aside to POMPEY.] Forsake thy seat, I do beseech thee, captain,
And hear me speak a word.

Pom. [Aside to MENAS.] Forbear me till anon.—
This wine for Lepidus!

Lep. What manner o' thing is your crocodile?

Ant. It is shaped, sir, like itself; and it is as broad as it hath breadth: it is just so high as it is, and moves with its own organs: it lives by that which nourisheth it; and the elements once out of it, it transmigrates.

Lep. What colour is it of?

Ant. Of its own colour too.

Lep. 'Tis a strange serpent.

Ant. 'Tis so. And the tears of it are wet.

Cæs. Will this description satisfy him?

Ant. With the health that Pompey gives him, else he is a very epicure.

Pom. [Aside to MENAS.] Go hang,

sir, hang! Tell me of that? away! [call'd for?
Do as I bid you.—Where's this cup I
Men. [Aside to POMPEY.] If for the sake of merit thou wilt hear me,
Rise from thy stool.
Pom. [Aside to MENAS.] I think thou'rt mad. The matter? [Rises, and walks aside.
Men. I have ever held my cap off to thy fortunes.
Pom. Thou hast served me with much faith. What 's else to say?—
Be jolly, lords.
Ant. These quicksands, Lepidus,
Keep off them, for you sink. [world?
Men. Wilt thou be lord of all the
Pom. What say'st thou?
Men. Wilt thou be lord of the whole world? That 's twice.
Pom. How should that be?
Men. But entertain it, and,
Although thou think me poor, I am the man
Will give thee all the world.
Pom. Hast thou drunk well?
Men. No, Pompey, I have kept me from the cup. [Jove:
Thou art, if thou darest be, the earthly
Whate'er the ocean pales, or sky inclips,
Is thine, if thou wilt ha 't.
Pom. Show me which way.
Men. These three world-sharers, these competitors, [cable;
Are in thy vessel: let me cut the
And, when we are put off, fall to their throats:
All there is thine. [done,
Pom. Ah, this thou shouldst have
And not have spoke on 't! In me 'tis villany; [must know,
In thee 't had been good service. Thou
'Tis not my profit that does lead mine honour; [tongue
Mine honour, it. Repent that e'er thy Hath so betray'd thine act: being done unknown, [done;
I should have found it afterwards well
But must condemn it now. Desist, and drink.
Men. [Aside.] For this, [more.
I'll never follow thy pall'd fortunes
Who seeks, and will not take when once 'tis offer'd,
Shall never find it more.
Pom. This health to Lepidus!
Ant. Bear him ashore. I'll pledge it for him, Pompey.
Eno. Here 's to thee, Menas!
Men. Enobarbus, welcome!
Pom. Fill till the cup be hid.
Eno. There 's a strong fellow, Menas. [Pointing to the Attendant who carries off LEPIDUS.
Men. Why?
Eno. 'A bears the third part of the world, man; see'st not?
Men. The third part, then, is drunk: would it were all,
That it might go on wheels!
Eno. Drink thou; increase the reels.
Men. Come. [feast.
Pom. This is not yet an Alexandrian
Ant. It ripens towards it.—Strike the vessels, ho!
Here is to Cæsar!
Cæs. I could well forbear it.
It's monstrous labour, when I wash my brain,
And it grows fouler.
Ant. Be a child o' the time.
Cæs. Possess it, I'll make answer:
But I had rather fast from all four days
Than drink so much in one.
Eno. [To ANTONY.] Ha, my brave emperor! [Bacchanals,
Shall we dance now the Egyptian
And celebrate our drink?
Pom. Let 's ha 't, good soldier.
Ant. Come, let us all take hands,
Till that the conquering wine hath steep'd our sense
In soft and delicate Lethe.
Eno. All take hands.
Make battery to our ears with the loud music: [shall sing;
The while I'll place you: then the boy
The holding every man shall bear as loud
As his strong sides can volley.
[Music plays. ENOBARBUS places them hand in hand.

THE SONG.

'Come, thou monarch of the vine,
Plumpy Bacchus with pink eyne!
In thy vats our cares be drown'd,
With thy grapes our hairs be crown'd:
Cup us, till the world go round,
Cup us, till the world go round!'

Cæs. What would you more? Pompey, good night. Good brother, [business
Let me request you off: our graver
Frowns at this levity. Gentle lords, let 's part;
You see we have burnt our cheeks: strong Enobarb [own tongue
Is weaker than the wine; and mine
Splits what it speaks: the wild disguise hath almost Antick'd us all. What needs more words? Good night.
Good Antony, your hand.
Pom. I'll try you on the shore.
Ant. And shall, sir: give 's your hand.
Pom. O Antony,
You have my father's house,—But what? we are friends.
Come, down into the boat.
Eno. Take heed you fall not.
[Exeunt all but ENOBARBUS and MENAS.
Menas, I'll not on shore.
Men. No, to my cabin.
These drums! these trumpets, flutes! what! [well
Let Neptune hear we bid a loud fare-
To these great fellows: sound and be hang'd, sound out!
[A Flourish of Trumpets, with Drums.
Eno. Ho! says 'a. There 's my cap.
Men. Ho! Noble captain, come.
[Exeunt.

ACT III.

SCENE I.—A Plain in Syria.

Enter VENTIDIUS as it were in triumph, with SILIUS, and other Romans, Officers, and Soldiers; the dead body of PACORUS borne before him.

Ven. Now, darting Parthia, art thou struck; and now
Pleased Fortune does of Marcus Crassus' death [son's body
Make me revenger.—Bear the king's Before our army,—Thy Pacorus, Orodes,
Pays this for Marcus Crassus.
Sil. Noble Ventidius,
Whilst yet with Parthian blood thy sword is warm,
The fugitive Parthians follow; spur through Media,
Mesopotamia, and the shelters whither
The routed fly: so thy grand captain Antony [and Shall set thee on triumphant chariots,
Put garlands on thy head.
Ven. O Silius, Silius,
I have done enough: a lower place, note well, [this, Silius;
May make too great an act; for learn
Better to leave undone, than by our deed [we serve 's away.
Acquire too high a fame when him
Cæsar and Antony have ever won
More in their officer than person: Sossius, [ant,
One of my place in Syria, his lieuten-
For quick accumulation of renown,
Which he achieved by the minute, lost his favour. [captain can
Who does i' the wars more than his
Becomes his captain's captain: and ambition, [choice of loss,
The soldier's virtue, rather makes
Than gain which darkens him.
I could do more to do Antonius good,
But 'twould offend him; and in his offence
Should my performance perish.
Sil. Thou hast, Ventidius, that Without the which a soldier, and his sword,
Grants scarce distinction. Thou wilt write to Antony? [name,
Ven. I'll humbly signify what in his
That magical word of war, we have effected; [paid ranks,
How, with his banners and his well-
The ne'er-yet-beaten horse of Parthia
We have jaded out o' the field.
Sil. Where is he now?
Ven. He purposeth to Athens: whither, with what haste
The weight we must convey with 's will permit,
We shall appear before him. On, there; pass along! [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—Rome. An Ante-chamber in CÆSAR'S House.

Enter AGRIPPA and ENOBARBUS, meeting.

Agr. What, are the brothers parted?
Eno. They have dispatch'd with Pompey; he is gone;
The other three are sealing. Octavia weeps [and Lepidus,
To part from Rome; Cæsar is sad;

Since Pompey's feast, as Menas says, is troubled
With the green sickness.
Agr. 'Tis a noble Lepidus.
Eno. A very fine one: O, how he loves Cæsar!
Agr. Nay, but how dearly he adores Mark Antony!
Eno. Cæsar? Why, he's the Jupiter of men. [Jupiter.
Agr. What's Antony? The god of
Eno. Spake you of Cæsar? How! the nonpareil! [bird!
Agr. O Antony! O thou Arabian
Eno. Would you praise Cæsar, say 'Cæsar:' go no further.
Agr. Indeed, he plied them both with excellent praises.
Eno. But he loves Cæsar best; yet he loves Antony:
Ho! hearts, tongues, figures, scribes, bards, poets, cannot [ho!
Think, speak, cast, write, sing, number,
His love to Antony. But as for Cæsar,
Kneel down, kneel down, and wonder.
Agr. Both he loves.
Eno. They are his shards, and he their beetle. [Trumpets within.] So;
This is to horse. Adieu, noble Agrippa.
Agr. Good fortune, worthy soldier; and farewell.

Enter CÆSAR, ANTONY, LEPIDUS, and OCTAVIA.

Ant. No further, sir. [of myself;
Cæs. You take from me a great part
Use me well in 't.—Sister, prove such a wife [furthest band
As my thoughts make thee, and as my Shall pass on thy approof.—Most noble Antony, [set
Let not the piece of virtue, which is Betwixt us as the cement of our love,
To keep it builded, be the ram to batter
The fortress of it; for better might we
Have loved without this mean, if on both parts
This be not cherish'd.
Ant. Make me not offended
In your distrust.
Cæs. I have said.
Ant. You shall not find,
Though you be therein curious, the least cause [gods keep you,
For what you seem to fear: so, the
And make the hearts of Romans serve your ends!
We will here part. [fare thee well:
Cæs. Farewell, my dearest sister,
The elements be kind to thee, and make
Thy spirits all of comfort! fare thee well,
Octa. My noble brother!
Ant. The April's in her eyes: it is love's spring,
And these the showers to bring it on. Be cheerful.
Octa. Sir, look well to my husband's house; and—
Cæs. What,
Octavia?
Octa. I'll tell you in your ear.
Ant. Her tongue will not obey her heart, nor can
Her heart inform her tongue,—the swan's down-feather,
That stands upon the swell at full of tide,
And neither way inclines.
Eno. [Aside to AGRIPPA.] Will Cæsar weep?
Agr. [Aside to ENO.] He has a cloud in 's face.
Eno. [Aside to AGRIPPA.] He were the worse for that, were he a horse;
So is he, being a man. [bus,
Agr. [Aside to ENO.] Why, Enobar-
When Antony found Julius Cæsar dead, [wept
He cried almost to roaring; and he
When at Philippi he found Brutus slain.
Eno. [Aside to AGRIPPA.] That year, indeed, he was troubled with a rheum; [wail'd,
What willingly he did confound he
Believe 't, till I wept too.
Cæs. No, sweet Octavia,
You shall hear from me still; the time shall not Outgo my thinking on you.
Ant. Come, sir, come;
I'll wrestle with you in my strength of love: [go,
Look, here I have you; thus I let you
And give you to the gods.
Cæs. Adieu; be happy!
Lep. Let all the number of the stars give light
To thy fair way!
Cæs. Farewell, farewell! [Kisses OCTAVIA.

Ant. Farewell!

[Trumpets sound. Exeunt.

SCENE III.—Alexandria. Cleopatra's Palace.

Enter CLEOPATRA, CHARMIAN, IRAS, and ALEXAS.

Cleo. Where is the fellow?

Alex. Half afeard to come.

Cleo. Go to, go to.

Enter Messenger.

Come hither, sir.

Alex. Good majesty,
Herod of Jewry dare not look upon you
But when you are well pleased.

Cleo. That Herod's head
I'll have: but how, when Antony is gone
Through whom I might command it? Come thou near.

Mess. Most gracious majesty,—

Cleo. Didst thou behold
Octavia?

Mess. Ay, dread queen.

Cleo. Where?

Mess. Madam, in Rome;
I look'd her in the face, and saw her led
Between her brother and Mark Antony.

Cleo. Is she as tall as me?

Mess. She is not, madam.

Cleo. Didst hear her speak? is she shrill-tongued or low?

Mess. Madam, I heard her speak; she is low-voiced.

Cleo. That 's not so good: he cannot like her long. [sible.

Char. Like her! O Isis! 'tis impos-

Cleo. I think so, Charmian: dull of tongue, and dwarfish!
What majesty is in her gait? Remember,
If e'er thou look'dst on majesty.

Mess. She creeps:
Her motion and her station are as one;
She shows a body rather than a life,
A statue than a breather.

Cleo. Is this certain?

Mess. Or I have no observance.

Char. Three in Egypt
Cannot make better note.

Cleo. He 's very knowing;
I do perceive 't: there 's nothing in her yet:
The fellow has good judgment.

Char. Excellent.

Cleo. Guess at her years, I prithee.

Mess. Madam,
She was a widow,—

Cleo. Widow!—Charmian, hark.

Mess. And I do think she 's thirty.

Cleo. Bear'st thou her face in mind? is 't long or round?

Mess. Round even to faultiness.

Cleo. For the most part, too, they are foolish that are so.
Her hair, what colour? [head

Mess. Brown, madam: and her fore-
As low as she would wish it.

Cleo. There 's gold for thee.
Thou must not take my former sharpness ill: [thee
I will employ thee back again; I find
Most fit for business: go make thee ready;
Our letters are prepared.

[Exit Messenger.

Char. A proper man.

Cleo. Indeed, he is so: I repent me much [thinks, by him,
That so I harried him. Why, me-
This creature 's no such thing.

Char. Nothing, madam.

Cleo. The man hath seen some majesty, and should know.

Char. Hath he seen majesty? Isis else defend,
And serving you so long!

Cleo. I have one thing more to ask him yet, good Charmian:
But 'tis no matter; thou shalt bring him to me [enough.
Where I will write. All may be well

Char. I warrant you, madam.

[Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—Athens. A Room in ANTONY'S House.

Enter ANTONY and OCTAVIA.

Ant. Nay, nay, Octavia, not only that,— [sands more
That were excusable, that, and thou-
Of semblable import,—but he hath waged
New wars 'gainst Pompey; made his will, and read it
To public ear:
Spoke scantly of me: when perforce he could not [sickly
But pay me terms of honour, cold and
He vented them; most narrow measure lent me;

When the best hint was given him, he not took 't,
Or did it from his teeth.
Octa. O my good lord,
Believe not all; or, if you must believe,
Stomach not all. A more unhappy lady, [between,
If this division chance, ne'er stood
Praying for both parts:
The good gods will mock me presently,
When I shall pray, 'O, bless my lord and husband!' [loud,
Undo that prayer, by crying out as 'O, bless my brother!' Husband win, win brother,
Prays, and destroys the prayer; no midway
'Twixt these extremes at all.
Ant. Gentle Octavia,
Let your best love draw to that point, which seeks [our,
Best to preserve it: if I lose mine hon-
I lose myself: better I were not yours
Than yours so branchless. But, as you requested, [time, lady,
Yourself shall go between 's: the mean-
I'll raise the preparation of a war
Shall stain your brother: make your soonest haste;
So your desires are yours.
Octa. Thanks to my lord.
The Jove of power make me most weak, most weak,
Your reconciler! Wars 'twixt you twain would be
As if the world should cleave, and that slain men
Should solder up the rift.
Ant. When it appears to you where this begins, [our faults
Turn your displeasure that way; for
Can never be so equal, that your love
Can equally move with them. Provide your going;
Choose your own company, and command what cost
Your heart has mind to. [Exeunt.

SCENE V.—The Same. Another Room in ANTONY'S House.

Enter ENOBARBUS and EROS, meeting.

Eno. How now, friend Eros!
Eros. There's strange news come, sir.
Eno. What, man?
Eros. Cæsar and Lepidus have made wars upon Pompey. [cess?
Eno. This is old: what is the suc-
Eros. Cæsar, having made use of him in the wars 'gainst Pompey, presently denied him rivality; would not let him partake in the glory of the action: and not resting here, accuses him of letters he had formerly wrote to Pompey; upon his own appeal, seizes him: so the poor third is up, till death enlarge his confine.
Eno. Then, world, thou hast a pair of chaps, no more;
And throw between them all the food thou hast,
They'll grind the one the other. Where 's Antony?
Eros. He 's walking in the garden—thus; and spurns
The rush that lies before him; cries 'Fool Lepidus!' [officer
And threats the throat of that his
That murder'd Pompey.
Eno. Our great navy's rigged.
Eros. For Italy and Cæsar. More, Domitius; [news
My lord desires you presently: my
I might have told hereafter.
Eno. 'Twill be naught:
But let it be. Bring me to Antony.
Eros. Come, sir. [Exeunt.

SCENE VI.—Rome. A Room in CÆSAR'S House.

Enter CÆSAR, AGRIPPA, and MECÆNAS.

Cæs. Contemning Rome, he has done all this, and more, [it:
In Alexandria:—here 's the manner of
I' the market-place, on a tribunal silver'd, [gold
Cleopatra and himself in chairs of
Were publicly enthroned: at the feet sat [son,
Cæsarion, whom they call my father's
And all the unlawful issue that their lust [unto her
Since then hath made between them.
He gave the stablishment of Egypt; made her
Of lower Syria, Cyprus, Lydia,
Absolute queen.
Mec. This in the public eye?
Cæs. I' the common show-place, where they exercise.
His sons he there proclaim'd the kings of kings;
Great Media, Parthia, and Armenia,
He gave to Alexander; to Ptolemy he assign'd

Syria, Cilicia, and Phœnicia: she
In the habiliments of the goddess Isis
That day appear'd; and oft before gave audience,
As 'tis reported, so.
Mec. Let Rome be thus
Inform'd. [solence
Agr. Who, queasy with his in-
Already, will their good thoughts call from him.
Cæs. The people know it; and have now received
His accusations.
Agr. Whom does he accuse?
Cæs. Cæsar: and that, having in Sicily [rated him
Sextus Pompeius spoil'd, we had not
His part o' the isle: then does he say, he lent me [frets
Some shipping unrestored: lastly, he
That Lepidus of the triumvirate
Should be deposed; and, being, that we detain
All his revenue.
Abr. Sir, this should be answer'd.
Cæs. 'Tis done already, and the messenger gone. [too cruel;
I have told him, Lepidus was grown
That he his high authority abused,
And did deserve his change: for what I have conquer'd, [Armenia,
I grant him part; but then, in his
And other of his conquer'd kingdoms, I
Demand the like.
Mec. He'll never yield to that.
Cæs. Nor must not then be yielded to in this.

Enter OCTAVIA, with her Train.

Octa. Hail, Cæsar, and my lord! hail, most dear Cæsar!
Cæs. That ever I should call thee castaway!
Octa. You have not call'd me so, nor have you cause.
Cæs. Why have you stol'n upon us thus? You come not Like Cæsar's sister: the wife of Antony
Should have an army for an usher, and
The neighs of horse to tell of her approach [the way
Long ere she did appear; the trees by
Should have borne men; and expectation fainted,
Longing for what it had not; nay, the dust [heaven,
Should have ascended to the roof of
Raised by your populous troops: but you are come [prevented
A market-maid to Rome; and have
The ostentation of our love, which, left unshown, [met you
Is often left unloved: we should have
By sea and land; supplying every stage
With an augmented greeting.
Octa. Good my lord,
To come thus was I not constrain'd, but did it [Antony,
On my free will. My lord, Mark
Hearing that you prepared for war, acquainted [begg'd
My grieved ear withal; whereon, I
His pardon for return.
Cæs. Which soon he granted,
Being an obstruct 'tween his lust and him.
Octa. Do not say so, my lord.
Cæs. I have eyes upon him,
And his affairs come to me on the wind.
Where is he now?
Octa. My lord, in Athens.
Cæs. No, my most wronged sister; Cleopatra
Hath nodded him to her. He hath given his empire
Up to a whore; who now are levying
The kings o' the earth for war: he hath assembled [laus,
Bocchus, the King of Libya; Archelaus,
Of Cappadocia; Philadelphos, King
Of Paphlagonia; the Thracian king, Adallas; [Pont;
King Malchus of Arabia; King of Herod of Jewry; Mithridates, King
Of Comagene; Polemon and Amyntas,
The Kings of Mede and Lycaonia,
With a more larger list of sceptres.
Octa. Ay me, most wretched,
That have my heart parted betwixt two friends
That do afflict each other!
Cæs. Welcome hither:
Your letters did withhold our breaking forth; [wrong led,
Till we perceived, both how you were
And we in negligent danger. Cheer your heart: [which drives
Be you not troubled with the time,
O'er your content these strong necessities;
But let determined things to destiny

Hold unbewail'd their way. Welcome to Rome ; [abused
Nothing more dear to me. You are Beyond the mark of thought : and the high gods, [ters
To do you justice, make them minis-
Of us and those that love you. Best of comfort ;
And ever welcome to us.
Agr. Welcome, lady.
Mec. Welcome, dear madam.
Each heart in Rome does love and pity you : [large
Only the adulterous Antony, most
In his abominations, turns you off ;
And gives his potent regiment to a trull,
That noises it against us.
Octa. Is it so, sir ?
Cæs. Most certain. Sister, welcome :
pray you,
Be ever known to patience : my dear'st sister ! [Exeunt.

SCENE VII.—ANTONY'S Camp, near the Promontory of Actium.

Enter CLEOPATRA and ENOBARBUS.

Cleo. I will be even with thee, doubt it not.
Eno. But why, why, why ?
Cleo. Thou hast forspoke my being in these wars,
And say'st it is not fit.
Eno. Well, is it, is it ?
Cleo. If not denounced against us, why should not we
Be there in person ?
Eno. [Aside.] Well, I could reply :
If we should serve with horse and mares together,
The horse were merely lost ; the mares would bear
A soldier and his horse.
Cleo. What is 't you say ?
Eno. Your presence needs must puzzle Antony ;
Take from his heart, take from his brain, from 's time,
What should not then be spared. He is already [Rome
Traduced for levity ; and 'tis said in
That Photinus an eunuch and your maids
Manage this war. [rot
Cleo. Sink Rome, and their tongues
That speak against us ! A charge we bear i' the war, [will
And, as the president of my kingdom, Appear there for a man. Speak not against it ;
I will not stay behind.
Eno. Nay, I have done.
Here comes the emperor.

Enter ANTONY and CANIDIUS.

Ant. Is 't not strange, Canidius,
That from Tarentum and Brundusium
He could so quickly cut the Ionian sea,
And take in Toryne ?—You have heard on 't, sweet ? [mired
Cleo. Celerity is never more ad-
Than by the negligent.
Ant. A good rebuke,
Which might have well becomed the best of men,
To taunt at slackness. Canidius, we
Will fight with him by sea.
Cleo. By sea ! what else ?
Can. Why will my lord do so ?
Ant. For that he dares us to 't.
Eno. So hath my lord dared him to single fight. [Pharsalia,
Can. Ay, and to wage this battle at Where Cæsar fought with Pompey :
but these offers,
Which serve not for his vantage, he shakes off ;
And so should you. [mann'd ;
Eno. Your ships are not well
Your mariners are muleters, reapers, people [fleet
Ingross'd by swift impress ; in Cæsar's
Are those that often have 'gainst Pompey fought : [no disgrace
Their ships are yare ; yours, heavy :
Shall fall you for refusing him at sea,
Being prepared for land.
Ant. By sea, by sea.
Eno. Most worthy sir, you therein throw away [land ;
The absolute soldiership you have by Distract your army, which doth most consist [executed
Of war-mark'd footmen ; leave un-
Your own renowned knowledge ; quite forego [and
The way which promises assurance ;
Give up yourself merely to chance and hazard,
From firm security.
Ant. I'll fight at sea.
Cleo. I have sixty sails, Cæsar none better. [we burn ;
Ant. Our overplus of shipping will

And, with the rest full-mann'd, from the head of Actium
Beat the approaching Cæsar. But if we fail,
We then can do 't at land.

Enter a Messenger.

Thy business?

Mess. The news is true, my lord; he is descried;
Cæsar has taken Toryne.

Ant. Can he be there in person? 'tis impossible; [dius,
Strange that his power should be. Cani-
Our nineteen legions thou shalt hold by land, [to our ship:
And our twelve thousand horse. We'll Away, my Thetis!

Enter a Soldier.

How now, worthy soldier!

Sold. O noble emperor, do not fight by sea; [misdoubt
Trust not to rotten planks. Do you
This sword and these my wounds? Let the Egyptians [we
And the Phœnicians go a-ducking:
Have used to conquer, standing on the earth,
And fighting foot to foot.

Ant. Well, well: away!

[Exeunt Antony, Cleopatra, and Enobarbus.

Sold. By Hercules, I think I am i' the right.

Can. Soldier, thou art: but his whole action grows
Not in the power on 't: so our leader 's led,
And we are women's men.

Sold. You keep by land
The legions and the horse whole, do you not? [teius,

Can. Marcus Octavius, Marcus Jus-
Publicola, and Cælius, are for sea:
But we keep whole by land. This speed of Cæsar's
Carries beyond belief.

Sold. While he was yet in Rome,
His power went out in such distractions as Beguiled all spies. [you?

Can. Who 's his lieutenant, hear

Sold. They say, one Taurus.

Can. Well I know the man.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. The emperor calls Canidius.

Can. With news the time 's with labour, and throes forth,
Each minute, some. [Exeunt.

Scene VIII.—A Plain near Actium.

Enter Cæsar, Taurus, Officers, and Others.

Cæs. Taurus!

Taur. My lord?

Cæs. Strike not by land; keep whole: provoke not battle,
Till we have done at sea. Do not exceed [tune lies
The prescript of this scroll: our for-
Upon this jump. [Exeunt.

Enter Antony and Enobarbus.

Ant. Set we our squadrons on yond side o' the hill, [place
In eye of Cæsar's battle; from which
We may the number of the ships behold,
And so proceed accordingly. [Exeunt.

Enter Canidius, marching with his Land Army one way over the Stage; and Taurus, the Lieutenant of Cæsar, the other way. After their going in, is heard the noise of a Sea-Fight.

Alarum. Re-enter Enobarbus.

Eno. Naught, naught, all naught! I can behold no longer:
The Antoniad, the Egyptian admiral,
With all their sixty, fly and turn the rudder;
To see 't mine eyes are blasted.

Enter Scarus.

Scar. Gods and goddesses,
All the whole synod of them!

Eno. What's thy passion?

Scar. The greater cantle of the world is lost [away
With very ignorance; we have kiss'd
Kingdoms and provinces.

Eno. How appears the fight?

Scar. On our side like the token'd pestilence, [nag of Egypt,—
Where death is sure. Yon ribaudred
Whom leprosy o'ertake!—i' the midst o' the fight, [appear'd,
When vantage like a pair of twins
Both as the same, or rather ours the elder, [June,
The breese upon her, like a cow in

Hoists sails and flies.
Eno. That I beheld:
Mine eyes did sicken at the sight, and could not Endure a further view.
Scar. She once being loof'd,
The noble ruin of her magic, Antony,
Claps on his sea-wing, and, like a doting mallard, [her:
Leaving the fight in height, flies after
I never saw an action of such shame;
Experience, manhood, honour, ne'er before
Did violate so itself.
Eno. Alack, alack!

Enter CANIDIUS.

Can. Our fortune on the sea is out of breath, [general
And sinks most lamentably. Had our
Been what he knew himself, it had gone well:
O, he has given example for our flight,
Most grossly, by his own!
Eno. Ay, are you thereabouts?
Why then good night indeed.
Can. Towards Peloponnesus are they fled. [will attend
Scar. 'Tis easy to 't; and there I
What further comes.
Can. To Cæsar will I render
My legions and my horse; six kings already
Show me the way of yielding.
Eno. I'll yet follow
The wounded chance of Antony, though my reason
Sits in the wind against me. [Exeunt.

SCENE IX.—Alexandria. CLEOPATRA'S Palace.

Enter ANTONY, and Attendants.

Ant. Hark! the land bids me tread no more upon 't;
It is ashamed to bear me! Friends, come hither:
I am so lated in the world, that I
Have lost my way for ever: I have a ship [fly,
Laden with gold; take that, divide it;
And make your peace with Cæsar.
All. Fly! not we.
Ant. I have fled myself; and have instructed cowards
To run and show their shoulders. Friends, be gone;
I have myself resolved upon a course
Which has no need of you; be gone:
My treasure 's in the harbour, take it. O,
I follow'd that I blush to look upon:
My very hairs do mutiny; for the white [and they them
Reprove the brown for rashness,
For fear and doting. Friends, be gone; you shall [that will Have letters from me to some friends
Sweep your way for you. Pray you, look not sad, [the hint
Nor make replies of lothness: take
Which my despair proclaims; let that be left [straightway:
Which leaves itself: to the sea-side
I will possess you of that ship and treasure. [now:—
Leave me, I pray, a little: pray you
Nay, do so; for, indeed, I have lost command,
Therefore I pray you: I'll see you by and by. [Sits down.

Enter CLEOPATRA, led by CHARMIAN and IRAS; EROS following.

Eros. Nay, gentle madam, to him, comfort him.
Iras. Do, most dear queen.
Char. Do! Why, what else?
Cleo. Let me sit down. O Juno!
Ant. No, no, no, no, no.
Eros. See you here, sir?
Ant. O fie, fie, fie!
Char. Madam!
Iras. Madam, O good empress!
Eros. Sir, sir,— [Philippi kept
Ant. Yes, my lord, yes; he at
His sword e'en like a dancer; while I struck ['twas I
The lean and wrinkled Cassius; and
That the mad Brutus ended: he alone
Dealt on lieutenantry, and no practice had [—No matter.
In the brave squares of war: yet now
Cleo. Ah! stand by. [queen.
Eros. The queen, my lord, the Iras. Go to him, madam, speak to him;
He is unqualitied with very shame.
Cleo. Well then, sustain me: O!
Eros. Most noble sir, arise; the queen approaches:
Her head 's declined, and death will seize her, but
Your comfort makes the rescue.

Ant. I have offended reputation;
A most unnoble swerving.
Eros. Sir, the queen.
Ant. O, whither hast thou led me, Egypt? See, [eyes
How I convey my shame out of thine
By looking back on what I have left behind
'Stroy'd in dishonour.
Cleo. O my lord, my lord,
Forgive my fearful sails! I little thought
You would have follow'd.
Ant. Egypt, thou knew'st too well
My heart was to thy rudder tied by the strings, [my spirit
And thou shouldst tow me after: o'er
Thy full supremacy thou knew'st; and that [the gods
Thy beck might from the bidding of Command me.
Cleo. O, my pardon!
Ant. Now I must
To the young man send humble treaties, dodge [who
And palter in the shifts of lowness;
With half the bulk o' the world play'd as I pleased, [did know
Making and marring fortunes. You
How much you were my conqueror; and that [would
My sword, made weak by my affection,
Obey it on all cause.
Cleo. O pardon, pardon!
Ant. Fall not a tear, I say; one of them rates [kiss;
All that is won and lost: give me a
Even this repays me.—We sent our schoolmaster; [of lead.
Is he come back?—Love, I am full
Some wine, within there, and our viands!—Fortune knows
We scorn her most when most she offers blows. [Exeunt.

SCENE X.—Egypt. CÆSAR'S Camp.

Enter CÆSAR, DOLABELLA, THYREUS, and Others.

Cæs. Let him appear that 's come from Antony.
Know you him?
Dol. Cæsar, 'tis his schoolmaster:
An argument that he is pluck'd, when hither
He sends so poor a pinion of his wing,
Which had superfluous kings for messengers
Not many moons gone by.

Enter EUPHRONIUS.

Cæs. Approach, and speak.
Euph. Such as I am, I come from Antony:
I was of late as petty to his ends
As is the morn-dew on the myrtle-leaf
To his grand sea. [office.
Cæs. Be it so: declare thine
Euph. Lord of his fortunes he salutes thee, and Requires to live in Egypt: which not granted, [sues:
He lessens his requests; and to thee
To let him breathe between the heavens and earth,
A private man in Athens: this for him.
Next, Cleopatra does confess thy greatness; [craves:
Submits her to thy might; and of thee
The circle of the Ptolemies for her heirs,
Now hazarded to thy grace.
Cæs. For Antony,
I have no ears to his request. The queen [she:
Of audience nor desire shall fail, so
From Egypt drive her all-disgraced friend, [form,
Or take his life there: this if she per-
She shall not sue unheard. So to them both.
Euph. Fortune pursue thee!
Cæs. Bring him through the bands. [Exit EUPHRONIUS.
[To THYREUS] To try thy eloquence, now 'tis time: dispatch;
From Antony win Cleopatra: promise,
And in our name, what she requires; add more, [are not
From thine invention, offers: women
In their best fortunes strong; but want will perjure
The ne'er-touch'd vestal: try thy cunning, Thyreus;
Make thine own edict for thy pains which we
Will answer as a law.
Thyr. Cæsar, I go.
Cæs. Observe how Antony becomes his flaw, [speaks
And what thou think'st his very action
In every power that moves.
Thyr. Cæsar, I shall. [Exeunt.

SCENE XI.—Alexandria. CLEOPATRA'S Palace.

Enter CLEOPATRA, ENOBARBUS, CHARMIAN, and IRAS.

Cleo. What shall we do, Enobarbus?
Eno. Think, and die.
Cleo. Is Antony or we in fault for this? [his will Eno. Antony only, that would make
Lord of his reason. What though you fled [several ranges
From that great face of war, whose Frighted each other? why should he follow? [then
The itch of his affection should not
Have nick'd his captainship; at such a point, [he being
When half to half the world opposed,
The mered question: 'twas a shame no less [flags,
Than was his loss, to course your flying
And leave his navy gazing.
Cleo. Prithee, peace.

Enter ANTONY, with EUPHRONIUS.

Ant. Is that his answer?
Euph. Ay, my lord.
Ant. The queen shall then have courtesy, so she
Will yield us up.
Euph. He say so.
Ant. Let her know it.
[To CLEO.] To the boy Cæsar send this grizzled head,
And he will fill thy wishes to the brim
With principalities.
Cleo. That head, my lord?
Ant. To him again: tell him he wears the rose
Of youth upon him; from which the world should note
Something particular: his coin, ships, legions, [would prevail
May be a coward's; whose ministers
Under the service of a child as soon
As i' the command of Cæsar: I dare him therefore
To lay his gay comparisons apart,
And answer me declined, sword against sword, [me.
Ourselves alone. I'll write it: follow
[Exeunt ANTONY and EUPHRONIUS.
Eno. [Aside.] Yes, like enough, high-battled Cæsar will Unstate his happiness, and be staged to the show,
Against a sworder! I see men's judgments are
A parcel of their fortunes; and things outward
Do draw the inward quality after them,
To suffer all alike. That he should dream, [will Knowing all measures, the full Cæsar
Answer his emptiness! Cæsar, thou hast subdued
His judgment too.

Enter an Attendant.

Attend. A messenger from Cæsar.
Cleo. What, no more ceremony? See, my women! [their nose
Against the blown rose may they stop
That kneel'd unto the buds.—Admit him, sir. [Exit Attendant.
Eno. [Aside.] Mine honesty and I begin to square. [make
The loyalty well held to fools does
Our faith mere folly: yet he that can endure
To follow with allegiance a fall'n lord
Does conquer him that did his master conquer,
And earns a place i' the story.

Enter THYREUS.

Cleo. Cæsar's will?
Thyr. Hear it apart.
Cleo. None but friends: say boldly.
Thyr. So, haply, are they friends to Antony. [sar has,
Eno. He needs as many, sir, as Cæ-
Or needs not us. If Cæsar please, our master [know
Will leap to be his friend: for us, you
Whose he is we are; and that's Cæsar's.
Thyr. So.
Thus then, thou most renown'd: Cæsar entreats, [stand'st,
Not to consider in what case thou
Further than he is Cæsar.
Cleo. Go on: right royal.
Thyr. He knows that you embrace not Antony
As you did love, but as you fear'd him,
Cleo. O!
Thyr. The scars upon your honour therefore he Does pity as constrained blemishes,
Not as deserved.
Cleo. He is a god, and knows
What is most right: mine honour was not yielded,

But conquer'd merely.
Eno. [Aside.] To be sure of that,
I will ask Antony. Sir, sir, thou'rt so leaky, [for
That we must leave thee to thy sinking,
Thy dearest quit thee. [Exit.
Thyr. Shall I say to Cæsar
What you require of him? for he partly begs
To be desired to give. It much would please him, [a staff
That of his fortunes you should make
To lean upon: but it would warm his spirits,
To hear from me you had left Antony,
And put yourself under his shroud,
The universal landlord.
Cleo. What 's your name?
Thyr. My name is Thyreus.
Cleo. Most kind messenger,
Say to great Cæsar this: in deputation
I kiss his conquering hand: tell him, I am prompt [to kneel:
To lay my crown at 's feet, and there
Tell him, from his all-obeying breath I hear
The doom of Egypt.
Thyr. 'Tis your noblest course.
Wisdom and fortune combating together, [can,
If that the former dare but what it
No chance may shake it. Give me grace to lay
My duty on your hand.
Cleo. Your Cæsar's father oft,
When he hath mused of taking kingdoms in, [place,
Bestow'd his lips on that unworthy
As it rain'd kisses.

Re-enter ANTONY and ENOBARBUS.

Ant. Favours, by Jove that thunders!
What art thou, fellow?
Thyr. One that but performs
The bidding of the fullest man, and worthiest
To have command obey'd.
Eno. [Aside.] You will be whipp'd.
Ant. Approach, there!—Ay, you kite!—Now, gods and devils!
Authority melts from me: of late, when I cried 'Ho!'
Like boys unto a muss, kings would start forth,
And cry 'Your will?' Have you no ears? I am Antony yet.

Enter Attendants.

Take hence this Jack, and whip him.
Eno. [Aside.] 'Tis better playing with a lion's whelp
Than with an old one dying.
Ant. Moon and stars!
Whip him. Were 't twenty of the greatest tributaries
That do acknowledge Cæsar, should I find them
So saucy with the hand of she here,—what 's her name, [fellows,
Since she was Cleopatra?—Whip him,
Till, like a boy, you see him cringe his face, [hence,
And whine aloud for mercy: take him
Thyr. Mark Antony,— [whipp'd,
Ant. Tug him away: being Bring him again: this Jack of Cæsar's shall Bear us an errand to him.
[Exeunt Attendants with THYREUS.
[To CLEO.] You were half blasted ere I knew you: ha! [Rome,
Have I my pillow left unpress'd in
Forborne the getting of a lawful race,
And by a gem of women, to be abused
By one that looks on feeders?
Cleo. Good my lord,—
Ant. You have been a boggler ever:
But when we in our viciousness grow hard— [our eyes;
O misery on 't!— the wise gods see
In our own filth drop our clear judgments; make us [we strut
Adore our errors; laugh at 's while
To our confusion.
Cleo. O, is 't come to this?
Ant. I found you as a morsel cold upon [a fragment
Dead Cæsar's trencher; nay, you were
Of Cneius Pompey's; besides what hotter hours,
Unregister'd in vulgar fame, you have
Luxuriously pick'd out: for I am sure,
Though you can guess what temperance should be,
You know not what it is.
Cleo. Wherefore is this?
Ant. To let a fellow that will take rewards [with
And say 'God quit you!' be familiar
My playfellow, your hand; this kingly seal [I were
And plighter of high hearts! O, that

Upon the hill of Basan, to outroar
The horned herd! for I have savage cause;
And to proclaim it civilly, were like
A halter'd neck which does the hangman thank
For being yare about him.

Re-enter Attendants, with THYREUS.

Is he whipp'd?

First Attend. Soundly, my lord.

Ant. Cried he? and begg'd he pardon?

First Attend. He did ask favour.

Ant. If that thy father live, let him repent
Thou wast not made his daughter; and
To follow Cæsar in his triumph, since
Thou hast been whipp'd for following him: henceforth
The white hand of a lady fever thee,
Shake thou to look on 't. Get thee back to Cæsar,
Tell him thy entertainment: look,
He makes me angry with him; for he seems Proud and disdainful; harping on
Not what he knew I was: he makes me angry;
And at this time most easy 'tis to do 't,
When my good stars, that were my former guides,
Have empty left their orbs, and shot
Into the abysm of hell. If he mislike
My speech and what is done, tell him he has Hipparchus, my enfranchised bondman, whom
He may at pleasure whip, or hang, or torture,
As he shall like, to quit me: urge it
Hence with thy stripes, be gone!

[Exit THYREUS.

Cleo. Have you done yet?

Ant. Alack, our terrene moon
Is now eclipsed; and it portends alone
The fall of Antony!

Cleo. I must stay his time.

Ant. To flatter Cæsar, would you mingle eyes
With one that ties his points?

Cleo. Not know me yet?

Ant. Cold-hearted toward me?

Cleo. Ah, dear, if I be so,
From my cold heart let heaven engender hail,
And poison it in the source; and the Drop in my neck: as it determines, so
Dissolve my life! The next Cæsarion smite!
Till by degrees the memory of my womb,
Together with my brave Egyptians all,
By the discandying of this pelleted storm
Lie graveless, till the flies and gnats of Nile
Have buried them for prey!

Ant. I am satisfied.
Cæsar sits down in Alexandria; where
I will oppose his fate. Our force by land
Hath nobly held; our sever'd navy too
Have knit again, and fleet, threatening most sealike.
Where hast thou been, my heart? Dost thou hear, lady?
If from the field I shall return once more
To kiss these lips, I will appear in blood;
And my sword will earn our chronicle:
There is hope in it yet.

Cleo. That 's my brave lord!

Ant. I will be treble-sinew'd, hearted, breathed,
And fight maliciously: for when mine hours
Were nice and lucky, men did ransom lives
Of me for jests; but now I'll set my teeth,
And send to darkness all that stop me. Come,
Let 's have one other gaudy night: call to me
All my sad captains; fill our bowls once more;
Let 's mock the midnight bell.

Cleo. It is my birthday:
I had thought to have held it poor; but, since my lord
Is Antony again, I will be Cleopatra.

Ant. We'll yet do well.

Cleo. Call all his noble captains to my lord.

Ant. Do so, we'll speak to them; and to-night I'll force
The wine peep through their scars.—Come on, my queen;
There 's sap in 't yet. The next time I do fight
I'll make death love me, for I will contend
Even with his pestilent scythe.

[Exeunt all but ENOBARBUS.

Eno. Now he'll outstare the lightning. To be furious
Is to be frighted out of fear; and in that mood
The dove will peck the estridge; and I see still,
A diminution in our captain's brain

Restores his heart: when valour preys on reason, [will seek
It eats the sword it fights with. I Some way to leave him. [Exit.

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—Before Alexandria. CÆSAR'S Camp.

Enter CÆSAR, reading a Letter; AGRIPPA, MECÆNAS, and Others.

Cæs. He calls me boy, and chides, as he had power [ger
To beat me out of Egypt; my messen-
He hath whipp'd with rods; dares me to personal combat,
Cæsar to Antony. Let the old ruffian know [time
I have many other ways to die; mean-
Laugh at his challenge.

Mec. Cæsar must think,
When one so great begins to rage, he 's hunted [but now
Even to falling. Give him no breath,
Make boot of his distraction: never anger
Made good guard for itself.

Cæs. Let our best heads
Know that to-morrow the last of many battles [there are,
We mean to fight. Within our files
Of those that served Mark Antony but late,
Enough to fetch him in. See it done:
And feast the army; we have store to do 't,
And they have earn'd the waste. Poor Antony! [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—Alexandria. A Room in CLEOPATRA'S Palace.

Enter ANTONY, CLEOPATRA, ENOBARBUS, CHARMIAN, IRAS, ALEXAS, and Others.

Ant. He will not fight with me, Domitius.

Eno. No.

Ant. Why should he not?

Eno. He thinks, being twenty times of better fortune,
He is twenty men to one.

Ant. To-morrow, soldier,
By sea and land I'll fight: or I will live,
Or bathe my dying honour in the blood
Shall make it live again. Woo't thou fight well?

Eno. I'll strike, and cry 'Take all!'

Ant. Well said; come on.
Call forth my household servants: let [to-night
Be bounteous at our meal.

Enter three or four Servitors.

Give me thy hand,
Thou hast been rightly honest;—so hast thou;—
And thou,—and thou,—and thou:—you have served me well,
And kings have been your fellows.

Cleo. [Aside to ENO.] What means this?

Eno. [Aside to CLEO.] 'Tis one of those odd tricks which sorrow shoots
Out of the mind.

Ant. And thou art honest too.
I wish I could be made so many men,
And all of you clapp'd up together in An Antony; that I might do you service
So good as you have done.

Servitors. The gods forbid!

Ant. Well, my good fellows, wait on me to-night:
Scant not my cups; and make as much of me [too,
As when mine empire was your fellow
So good as you have done.
And suffer'd my command.

Cleo. [Aside to ENO.] What does he mean?

Eno. [Aside to CLEO.] To make his followers weep.

Ant. Tend me to-night;
May be it is the period of your duty:
Haply you shall not see me more; or if,
A mangled shadow: perchance to-morrow [on you
You'll serve another master. I look
As one that takes his leave. Mine honest friends, [master
I turn you not away; but, like a
Married to your good service, stay till death: [more,
Tend me to-night two hours, I ask no
And the gods yield you for 't!

Eno. What mean you, sir,
To give them this discomfort? Look, they weep; [shame,
And I, an ass, am onion-eyed: for Transform us not to women.

Ant. Ho, ho, ho!

Now the witch take me, if I meant it thus! [My hearty friends,
Grace grow where those drops fall! You take me in too dolorous a sense;
For I spake to you for your comfort; did desire you
To burn this night with torches: know, my hearts, [lead you
I hope well of to-morrow, and will Where rather I'll expect victorious life
Than death and honour. Let's to supper, come,
And drown consideration. [Exeunt.

SCENE III.—The Same. Before the Palace.

Enter two Soldiers to their Guard.

First Sold. Brother, good night: to-morrow is the day.
Sec. Sold. It will determine one way: fare you well. [streets?
Heard you of nothing strange about the First Sold. Nothing. What news?
Sec. Sold. Belike 'tis but a rumour. Good night to you.
First Sold. Well, sir, good night.

Enter two other Soldiers.

Sec. Sold. Soldiers, have careful watch. [good night.
Third Sold. And you. Good night,
[The first two place themselves at their posts.
Fourth Sold. Here we.
[They take their posts.
And if to-morrow
Our navy thrive, I have an absolute hope
Our landmen will stand up.
Third Sold. 'Tis a brave army,
And full of purpose.
[Music of Hautboys as under the stage.
Fourth Sold. Peace! what noise?
First Sold. List, list!
Sec. Sold. Hark!
First Sold. Music i' the air.
Third Sold. Under the earth.
Fourth Sold. It signs well, does it not?
Third Sold. No.
First Sold. Peace, I say!
What should this mean?
Sec. Sold. 'Tis the god Hercules, whom Antony loved,
Now leaves him.
First Sold. Walk; let 's see if other watchmen
Do hear what we do.
[They advance to another post.
Sec. Sold. How now, masters!
All. [Speaking together.] How now!—How now!—do you hear this?
First Sold. Ay; is 't not strange?
Third Sold. Do you hear, masters? do you hear?
First Sold. Follow the noise so far as we have quarter;
Let 's see how 'twill give off.
All. Content.—'Tis strange.
[Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—The Same. A Room in the Palace.

Enter ANTONY and CLEOPATRA; CHARMIAN and Others attending.

Ant. Eros! mine armour, Eros!
Cleo. Sleep a little.
Ant. No, my chuck.—Eros, come; mine armour, Eros!

Enter EROS, with armour.

Come, good fellow, put mine iron on:
If Fortune be not ours to-day, it is Because we brave her: come.
Cleo. Nay, I'll help too.
What 's this for?
Ant. Ah, let be, let be! thou art
The armourer of my heart: false, false; this, this.
Cleo. Sooth, la, I'll help: thus it must be.
Ant. Well, well;
We shall thrive now.—Seest thou, my good fellow?
Go put on thy defences.
Eros. Briefly, sir.
Cleo. Is not this buckled well?
Ant. Rarely, rarely:
He that unbuckles this, till we do please
To doff 't for our repose, shall hear a storm. [a squire
Thou fumblest, Eros; and my queen 's
More tight at this than thou: dispatch.
—O love, [and knew'st
That thou couldst see my wars to-day,
The royal occupation! thou shouldst see
A workman in 't.

Enter an armed Soldier.

Good-morrow to thee; welcome:

Thou look'st like him that knows a war like charge: [time,
To business that we love we rise be-
And go to 't with delight.
Sold. A thousand, sir,
Early though 't be, have on their riveted trim,
And at the port expect you.
[Shout. Trumpets flourish.

Enter Officers and Soldiers.

Offi. The morn is fair. Good-morrow, general.
All. Good-morrow, general.
Ant. 'Tis well blown, lads:
This morning, like the spirit of a youth
That means to be of note, begins betimes.
[To CLEO.] So, so; come, give me that: this way; well said.
Fare thee well, dame, whate'er becomes of me:
[Kissing her] This is a soldier's kiss: rebukable [to stand
And worthy shameful check it were,
On more mechanic compliment; I'll leave thee [will fight,
Now, like a man of steel.—You that Follow me close; I'll bring you to 't.—Adieu.
[Exeunt ANTONY, EROS, Officers, and Soldiers.
Char. Please you, retire to your chamber.
Cleo. Lead me.
He goes forth gallantly. That he and Cæsar might [fight!
Determine this great war in single
Then Antony,—but now,—Well, on.
[Exeunt.

SCENE V.—Alexandria. ANTONY'S Camp.

Trumpets sound. Enter ANTONY and EROS; a Soldier meeting them.

Sold. The gods make this a happy day to Antony!
Ant. Would thou and those thy scars had once prevail'd
To make me fight at land!
Sold. Hadst thou done so,
The kings that have revolted, and the soldier [have still
That has this morning left thee, would Follow'd thy heels.
Ant. Who 's gone this morning?
Sold. Who
One ever near thee: call for Enobarbus
He shall not hear thee; or from Cæsar's camp
Say 'I am none of thine.'
Ant. What say'st thou?
Sold. Sir
He is with Cæsar.
Eros. Sir, his chests and treasure
He has not with him.
Ant. Is he gone?
Sold. Most certain.
Ant. Go, Eros, send his treasure after; do it; [him—
Detain no jot, I charge thee: write to
I will subscribe—gentle adieus and greetings; [cause
Say that I wish he never find more
To change a master. O, my fortunes have Corrupted honest men. Dispatch.—Enobarbus! [Exeunt.

SCENE VI.—Alexandria. CÆSAR'S Camp.

Flourish. Enter CÆSAR, with AGRIPPA, ENOBARBUS, and Others.

Cæs. Go forth, Agrippa, and begin the fight:
Our will is Antony be took alive;
Make it so known.
Agr. Cæsar, I shall. [Exit.
Cæs. The time of universal peace is near: [nook'd world
Prove this a prosperous day, the three
Shall bear the olive freely.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Antony
Is come into the field.
Cæs. Go charge Agrippa
Plant those that have revolted in the van, [fury
That Antony may seem to spend his Upon himself.
[Exeunt all but ENOBARBUS.
Eno. Alexas did revolt; and went to Jewry [suade
On affairs of Antony; there did per-
Great Herod to incline himself to Cæsar, [pain
And leave his master Antony: for this Cæsar hath hang'd him. Canidius and the rest
That fell away have entertainment, but
No honourable trust. I have done ill

Of which I do accuse myself so sorely,
That I will joy no more.

Enter a Soldier of CÆSAR'S.

Sold. Enobarbus, Antony,
Hath after thee sent all thy treasure, with
His bounty overplus: the messenger
Came on my guard; and at thy tent is now
Unloading of his mules.

Eno. I give it you.

Sold. Mock not, Enobarbus:
I tell you true: best you safed the bringer [office,
Out of the host; I must attend mine
Or would have done 't myself. Your emperor Continues still a Jove. [Exit.

Eno. I am alone the villain of the earth,
And feel I am so most. O Antony,
Thou mine of bounty, how wouldst thou have paid
My better service, when my turpitude
Thou dost so crown with gold! This blows my heart:
If swift thought break it not, a swifter mean [will do 't, I feel.
Shall outstrike thought: but thought
I fight against thee! No: I will go seek [best fits
Some ditch wherein to die; the foul'st
My latter part of life. [Exit.

SCENE VII.—Field of Battle between the Camps.

Alarum. Drums and Trumpets. Enter AGRIPPA, and Others.

Agr. Retire, we have engaged ourselves too far:
Cæsar himself has work, and our oppression
Exceeds what we expected. [Exeunt.

Alarums. Enter ANTONY, and SCARUS wounded.

Scar. O my brave emperor, this is fought indeed!
Had we done so at first, we had droven them home
With clouts about their heads.

Ant. Thou bleed'st apace.

Scar. I had a wound here that was like a T,
But now 'tis made an H.

[Retreat afar off.

Ant. They do retire.

Scar. We'll beat 'em into bench-holes: I have yet
Room for six scotches more.

Enter EROS.

Eros. They are beaten, sir; and our advantage serves
For a fair victory.

Scar. Let us score their backs,
And snatch 'em up, as we take hares, behind:
'Tis sport to maul a runner.

Ant. I will reward thee
Once for thy spritely comfort, and tenfold
For thy good valour. Come thee on.

Scar. I'll halt after. [Exeunt.

SCENE VIII.—Under the Walls of Alexandria.

Alarum. Enter ANTONY, marching; SCARUS, and Forces.

Ant. We have beat him to his camp: run one before,
And let the queen know of our gests. To-morrow, [the blood
Before the sun shall see 's, we'll spill
That has to-day escaped. I thank you all; [fought
For doughty-handed are you, and have
Not as you served the cause, but as 't had been [all Hectors.
Each man's like mine; you have shown
Enter the city, clip your wives, your friends, [joyful tears
Tell them your feats; whilst they with
Wash the congealment from your wounds, and kiss
The honour'd gashes whole. [To SCARUS] Give me thy hand;

Enter CLEOPATRA, attended.

To this great fairy I'll commend thy acts,
Make her thanks bless thee. [To CLEO.] O thou day o' the world,
Chain mine arm'd neck; leap thou, attire and all,
Through proof of harness to my heart, and there
Ride on the pants triumphing!

Cleo. Lord of lords!
O infinite virtue, comest thou smiling from
The world's great snare uncaught?

Ant. My nightingale,

We have beat them to their beds. What, girl! though grey
Do something mingle with our younger brown, yet ha' we [can
A brain that nourishes our nerves, and Get goal for goal of youth. Behold this man; [hand:—
Commend unto his lips thy favourmg
Kiss it, my warrior:—he hath fought to-day
As if a god, in hate of mankind, had Destroy'd in such a shape.
Cleo. I'll give thee, friend,
An armour all of gold; it was a king's.
Ant. He has deserved it, were it carbuncled [hand:
Like holy Phœbus' car. Give me thy
Through Alexandria make a jolly march; [that owe them:
Bear our hack'd targets like the men
Had our great palace the capacity
To camp this host, we all would sup together, [fate,
And drink carouses to the next day's
Which promises royal peril. Trumpeters, [ear;
With brazen din blast you the city's
Make mingle with our rattling tabourines;
That heaven and earth make strike their sounds together,
Applauding our approach. [Exeunt.

SCENE IX.—CÆSAR'S Camp.

Sentinels at their Post.

First Sold. If we be not relieved within this hour,
We must return to the court of guard: the night [battle
Is shiny; and they say we shall em-
By the second hour i' the morn.
Sec. Sold. This last day was
A shrewd one to 's.

Enter ENOBARBUS.

Eno. O, bear me witness, night,—
Third Sold. What man is this?
Sec. Sold. Stand close, and list him.
Eno. Be witness to me, O thou blessed moon,
When men revolted shall upon record
Bear hateful memory, poor Enobarbus did
Before thy face repent!
First Sold. Enobarbus!
Third Sold. Peace!
Hark further.

Eno. O sovereign mistress of true melancholy,
The poisonous damp of night disponge upon me;
That life, a very rebel to my will,
May hang no longer on me: throw my heart [fault;
Against the flint and hardness of my
Which, being dried with grief, will break to powder, [Antony,
And finish all foul thoughts. O
Nobler than my revolt is infamous,
Forgive me in thine own particular;
But let the world rank me in register
A master-leaver and a fugitive:
O Antony! O Antony! [Dies.
Sec. Sold. Let 's speak to him,
First Sold. Let 's hear him, for the things he speaks
May concern Cæsar. [sleeps.
Third Sold. Let 's do so. But he
First Sold. Swoons rather; for so bad a prayer as his
Was never yet for sleep.
Sec. Sold. Go we to him.
Third Sold. Awake, awake, sir; speak to us.
Sec. Sold. Hear you, sir?
First Sold. The hand of death hath raught him. [Drums afar off.] Hark! the drums
Demurely wake the sleepers. Let us bear him [our hour
To the court of guard; he is of note:
Is fully out.
Third Sold. Come on, then;
He may recover yet.
[Exeunt with the body.

SCENE X.—Between the two Camps.

Enter ANTONY and SCARUS, with Forces, marching.

Ant. Their preparation is to-day by sea;
We please them not by land.
Scar. For both, my lord.
Ant. I would they'd fight i' the fire or in the air; [our foot
We'd fight there too. But this it is;
Upon the hills adjoining to the city
Shall stay with us: order for sea is given; [ward then,
They have put forth the haven: for-
Where their appointment we may best discover,
And look on their endeavour. [Exeunt.

SCENE XI.—Another Part of the Same.

Enter CÆSAR and his Forces, marching.

Cæs. But being charged, we will be still by land, [best force
Which, as I take 't, we shall; for his
Is forth to man his galleys. To the vales,
And hold our best advantage. [Exeunt.

SCENE XII.—Hills adjoining to Alexandria.

Enter ANTONY and SCARUS.

Ant. Yet they're not join'd: where yonder pine does stand,
I shall discover all: I'll bring thee word
Straight, how 'tis like to go. [Exit.
Scar. Swallows have built
In Cleopatra's sails their nests: the augurers [look grimly,
Say they know not, they cannot tell;
And dare not speak their knowledge. Antony [starts,
Is valiant, and dejected; and, by
His fretted fortunes give him hope and fear
Of what he has and has not.
[Alarum afar off, as at a Sea-Fight.

Re-enter ANTONY.

Ant. All is lost;
This foul Egyptian hath betrayed me:
My fleet hath yielded to the foe; and yonder [together
They cast their caps up and carouse
Like friends long lost. Triple-turn'd whore! 'tis thou [heart
Hast sold me to this novice; and my
Makes only wars on thee.—Bid them all fly;
For when I am revenged upon my charm,
I have done all. Bid them all fly; be gone. [Exit SCARUS.
O sun, thy uprise shall I see no more:
Fortune and Antony part here; even here [The hearts
Do we shake hands. All come to this?
That spaniel'd me at heels, to whom I gave
Their wishes, do discandy, melt their sweets [is bark'd,
On blossoming Cæsar; and this pine
That overtopp'd them all. Betray'd I am. [charm,—
O this false soul of Egypt! this grave
Whose eye beck'd forth my wars, and call'd them home;
Whose bosom was my crownet, my chief end,— [loose,
Like a right gipsy, hath, at fast and
Beguiled me to the very heart of loss.
What, Eros, Eros!

Enter CLEOPATRA.

Ah, thou spell! Avaunt!
Cleo. Why is my lord enraged against his love?
Ant. Vanish, or I shall give thee thy deserving,
And blemish Cæsar's triumph. Let him take thee, [plebeians:
And hoist thee up to the shouting
Follow his chariot, like the greatest spot [shown
Of all thy sex; most monster-like, be
For poor'st diminutives, for doits; and let [up
Patient Octavia plough thy visage
With her prepared nails.
[Exit CLEOPATRA.
'Tis well thou'rt gone,
If it be well to live; but better 'twere
Thou fell'st into my fury, for one death
Might have prevented many.—Eros, ho!— [me,
The shirt of Nessus is upon me: teach
Alcides, thou mine ancestor, thy rage:
Let me lodge Lichas on the horns o' the moon;
And with those hands, that grasp'd the heaviest club,
Subdue my worthiest self. The witch shall die:
To the young Roman boy she hath sold me, and I fall
Under this plot; she dies for 't.—Eros, ho! [Exit.

SCENE XIII.—Alexandria. A Room in CLEOPATRA'S Palace.

Enter CLEOPATRA, CHARMIAN, IRAS, and MARDIAN.

Cleo. Help me, my women! O, he is more mad
Than Telamon for his shield; the boar of Thessaly
Was never so emboss'd.
Char. To the monument!
There lock yourself, and send him word you are dead.
The soul and body rive not more in parting

Than greatness going off.
Cleo. To the monument!
Mardian, go tell him I have slain myself; [tony,'
Say, that the last I spoke was 'An-
And word it, prithee, piteously: hence,
Mardian; and bring me how he takes my death.
To the monument! [Exeunt.

SCENE XIV.—The Same. Another Room in the Palace.

Enter ANTONY and EROS.

Ant. Eros, thou yet behold'st me?
Eros. Ay, noble lord.
Ant. Sometime we see a cloud that's dragonish;
A vapour sometime like a bear or lion,
A tower'd citadel, a pendent rock,
A forked mountain, or blue promontory
With trees upon 't, that nod unto the world
And mock our eyes with air: thou hast seen these signs;
They are black vesper's pageants.
Eros. Ay, my lord.
Ant. That which is now a horse, even with a thought [tinct.
The rack dislimns, and makes it indis-
As water is in water.
Eros. It does, my lord.
Ant. My good knave Eros, now thy captain is Even such a body: here I am Antony;
Yet cannot hold this visible shape, my knave. [queen,—
I made these wars for Egypt; and the Whose heart I thought I had, for she had mine; [unto 't
Which, whilst it was mine, had annex'd
A million more, now lost,—she, Eros, has [play'd my glory
Pack'd cards with Cæsar, and false-
Unto an enemy's triumph. [left us
Nay, weep not, gentle Eros; there is Ourselves to end ourselves.

Enter MARDIAN.

O, thy vile lady!
She has robb'd me of my sword.
Mar. No, Antony;
My mistress loved thee, and her fortunes mingled
With thine entirely.

Ant. Hence, saucy eunuch; peace!
She hath betray'd me and shall die the death. [paid but once,
Mar. Death of one person can be
And that she has discharged: what thou wouldst do [spake
Is done unto thy hand: the last she
Was 'Antony! most noble Antony!'
Then in the midst a tearing groan did break
The name of Antony; it was divided Between her heart and lips: she render'd life,
Thy name so buried in her.
Ant. Dead, then?
Mar. Dead.
Ant. Unarm, Eros; the long day's task is done,
And we must sleep. [To MARDIAN] That thou depart'st hence safe,
Does pay thy labour richly; go.
[Exit MARDIAN.
Off, pluck off:
The sevenfold shield of Ajax cannot keep [my sides!
The battery from my heart. O, cleave,
Heart, once be stronger than thy continent, [apace!—
Crack thy frail case!—Apace, Eros,
No more a soldier.—Bruised pieces, go;
You have been nobly borne.—From me awhile. [Exit EROS.
I will o'ertake thee, Cleopatra, and
Weep for my pardon. So it must be, for now [is out,
All length is torture: since the torch
Lie down, and stray no further: now all labour [entangles
Mars what it does; yea, very force
Itself with strength: seal then, and all is done. [Stay for me:
Eros!—I come, my queen.—Eros!—
Where souls do couch on flowers, we'll hand in hand,
And with our sprightly port make the ghosts gaze:
Dido and her Æneas shall want troops,
And all the haunt be ours.—Come, Eros, Eros!

Re-enter EROS.

Eros. What would my lord?
Ant. Since Cleopatra d'ed,
I have lived in such dishonour, that the gods [sword
Detest my baseness. I, that with my

Quarter'd the world, and o'er green Neptune's back
With ships made cities, condemn myself to lack [mind
The courage of a woman; less noble
Than she which by her death our Cæsar tells [sworn, Eros,
'I am conqueror of myself.' Thou art
That, when the exigent should come—which now [hind me
Is come indeed—when I should see behe-
The inevitable prosecution of Disgrace and horror, that, on my command, [time is come:
Thou then wouldst kill me: do 't; the
Thou strikest not me, 'tis Cæsar thou defeat'st.
Put colour in thy cheek.
Eros. The gods withhold me!
Shall I do that which all the Parthian darts, [not?
Though enemy, lost aim, and could
Ant. Eros,
Wouldst thou be window'd in great Rome, and see
Thy master thus with pleach'd arms, bending down
His corrigible neck, his face subdued
To penetrative shame; whilst the wheel'd seat [branded
Of fortunate Cæsar, drawn before him,
His baseness that ensued?
Eros. I would not see 't.
Ant. Come then; for with a wound I must be cured.
Draw that thy honest sword, which thou hast worn
Most useful for thy country.
Eros. O, sir, pardon me!
Ant. When I did make thee free, sworest thou not then
To do this when I bade thee? Do it at once;
Or thy precedent services are all
But accidents unpurposed. Draw, and come.
Eros. Turn from me, then, that noble countenance,
Wherein the worship of the whole world lies.
Ant. Lo thee! [Turning from him.
Eros. My sword is drawn.
Ant. Then let it do at once
The thing why thou hast drawn it.
Eros. My dear master,
My captain, and my emperor, let me say,
Before I strike this bloody stroke, farewell.
Ant. 'Tis said, man;—and farewell.
Eros. Farewell, great chief. Shall I strike now?
Ant. Now, Eros.
Eros. Why, there then. [Falls on his sword.] Thus do I escape the sorrow
Of Antony's death. [Dies.
Ant. Thrice-nobler than myself!
Thou teachest me, O valiant Eros, what
I should, and thou couldst not. My queen and Eros [upon me
Have by their brave instruction got
A nobleness in record: but I will be
A bridegroom in my death, and run into 't [and, Eros,
As to a lover's bed. Come, then;
Thy master dies thy scholar: to do thus [Falling on his sword.
I learn'd of thee. How! not dead? not dead?—
The guard, ho!—O, dispatch me!

Enter DERCETAS and Guard.

First Guard. What 's the noise?
Ant. I have done my work ill, friends; O, make an end
Of what I have begun.
Sec. Guard. The star is fallen.
First Guard. And time is at his period.
All. Alas, and woe!
Ant. Let him that loves me strike me dead.
First Guard. Not I.
Sec. Guard. Nor I.
Third Guard. Nor any one.
[Exeunt Guard.
Der. Thy death and fortunes bid thy followers fly.
This sword but shown to Cæsar, with this tidings,
Shall enter me with him.

Enter DIOMEDES.

Dio. Where 's Antony?
Der. There, Diomed, there.
Dio. Lives he?
Wilt thou not answer, man?
[Exit DERCETAS.
Ant. Art thou there, Diomed? Draw thy sword, and give me
Sufficing strokes for death.
Dio. Most absolute lord,
My mistress Cleopatra sent me to thee.
Ant. When did she send thee?

Dio. Now, my lord.
Ant. Where is she?
Dio. Lock'd in her monument. She had a prophesying fear
Of what hath come to pass: for when she saw—
Which never shall be found—you did suspect [your rage
She had disposed with Cæsar, and that
Would not be purged, she sent you word she was dead;
But, fearing since how it might work, hath sent [come,
Me to proclaim the truth; and I am
I dread, too late.
Ant. Too late, good Diomed: call my guard, I prithee.
Dio. What, ho! the emperor's guard! The guard, what, ho!
Come, your lord calls.

Enter some of the Guard.

Ant. Bear me, good friends, where Cleopatra bides;
'Tis the last service that I shall command you.
First Guard. Woe, woe are we, sir, you may not live to wear
All your true followers out.
All. Most heavy day!
Ant. Nay, good my fellows, do not please sharp fate
To grace it with your sorrows; bid that welcome [punish it
Which comes to punish us, and we Seeming to bear it lightly. Take me up: [good friends,
I have led you oft: carry me now,
And have my thanks for all.

[Exeunt, bearing Antony.

Scene XV.—The Same. A Monument.

Enter above, Cleopatra and her Maids, with Charmian and Iras.

Cleo. O Charmian, I will never go from hence.
Char. Be comforted, dear madam.
Cleo. No, I will not:
All strange and terrible events are welcome, [sorrow,
But comforts we despise; our size of Proportion'd to our cause, must be as great
As that which makes it.

Enter, below, Diomedes.

How now! is he dead?
Dio. His death 's upon him, but not dead. [ment;
Look out o' the other side your monu-
His guard have brought him thither.

Enter, below, Antony, borne by the Guard.

Cleo. O sun,
Burn the great sphere thou movest in! darkling stand [Antony.
The varying shore o' the world. O
Antony, Antony! Help, Charmian, help, Iras, help; [hither.
Help, friends below; let 's draw him
Ant. Peace!
Not Cæsar's valour hath o'erthrown Antony,
But Antony's hath triumph'd on itself.
Cleo. So it should be, that none but Antony [so!
Should conquer Antony; but woe 'tis
Ant. I am dying, Egypt, dying; only
I here importune Death awhile, until
Of many thousand kisses the poor last
I lay upon thy lips.
Cleo. I dare not, dear,—
Dear my lord, pardon,—I dare not,
Lest I be taken: not the imperious show
Of the full-fortuned Cæsar ever shall
Be brooch'd with me; if knife, drugs, serpents, have Edge, sting, or operation, I am safe:
Your wife Octavia, with her modest eyes [honour
And still conclusion, shall acquire no
Demuring upon me. But come, come, Antony,— [thee up:
Help me, my women,—we must draw
Assist, good friends.
Ant. O, quick, or I am gone.
Cleo. Here 's sport, indeed! How heavy weighs my lord!
Our strength is all gone into heaviness;
That makes the weight. Had I great Juno's power,
The strong-wing'd Mercury should fetch thee up,
And set thee by Jove's side. Yet come a little,— [come, come;
Wishers were ever fools,—O, come,
[They heave Antony aloft to Cleopatra.
And welcome, welcome! die where thou hast lived:
Quicken with kissing: had my lips that power,

Thus would I wear them out.
All. A heavy sight!
Ant. I am dying, Egypt, dying:
Give me some wine, and let me speak a little.
Cleo. No, let me speak; and let me rail so high,
That the false housewife Fortune break her wheel,
Provoked by my offence.
Ant. One word, sweet queen:
Of Cæsar seek your honour, with your safety. O!
Cleo. They do not go together.
Ant. Gentle, hear me:
None about Cæsar trust but Proculeius.
Cleo. My resolution and my hands I'll trust;
None about Cæsar.
Ant. The miserable change now at my end
Lament nor sorrow at; but please your thoughts
In feeding them with those my former fortunes
Wherein I lived, the greatest prince o' the world,
The noblest; and do now not basely die,
Not cowardly put off my helmet to
My countryman,—a Roman by a Roman Valiantly vanquish'd. Now, my spirit is going;
I can no more.
Cleo. Noblest of men, woo't die?
Hast thou no care of me? shall I abide
In this dull world, which in thy absence is
No better than a sty?—O, see, my women,
The crown o' the earth doth melt. My lord!
O, wither'd is the garland of the war,
The soldier's pole is fall'n: young boys and girls
Are level now with men; the odds is gone,
And there is nothing left remarkable
Beneath the visiting moon.
[She faints.
Char. O, quietness, lady!
Iras. She is dead too, our sovereign.
Char. Lady!
Iras. Madam!
Char. O madam, madam, madam!
Iras. Royal Egypt!
Empress!
Char. Peace, peace, Iras!
Cleo. No more, but e'en a woman; and commanded
By such poor passion as the maid that milks
And does the meanest chares. It were for me
To throw my sceptre at the injurious gods;
To tell them that this world did equal theirs
Till they had stol'n our jewel. All 's but naught;
Patience is sottish, and impatience does
Become a dog that 's mad: then is it sin
To rush into the secret house of Death,
Ere Death dare come to us? How do you, women?
What, what! good cheer! Why, how now, Charmian!
My noble girls! Ah, women, women, look,
Our lamp is spent, it 's out. [To the Guard below] Good sirs, take heart:—
We'll bury him; and then, what 's brave, what 's noble,
Let 's do it after the high Roman fashion,
And make Death proud to take us. Come, away:
This case of that huge spirit now is cold.
Ah, women, women! Come; we have no friend
But resolution, and the briefest end.
[Exeunt; those above bearing off ANTONY'S body.

ACT V.

SCENE I.—Alexandria. CÆSAR'S Camp.

Enter CÆSAR, AGRIPPA, DOLABELLA, MECÆNAS, GALLUS, PROCULEIUS, and Others.

Cæs. Go to him, Dolabella, bid him yield;
Being so frustrate, tell him he mocks us by
The pauses that he makes.
Dol. Cæsar, I shall.
[Exit.

Enter DERCETAS, with the sword of ANTONY.

Cæs. Wherefore is that? and what art thou that darest
Appear thus to us?
Der. I am call'd Dercetas;
Mark Antony I served, who best was worthy
Best to be served: whilst he stood up and spoke,
He was my master, and I wore my life
To spend upon his haters. If thou please
To take me to thee, as I was to him
I'll be to Cæsar; if thou pleasest not,
I yield thee up my life.

Cæs. What is 't thou say'st ?
Der. I say, O Cæsar, Antony is dead.
Cæs. The breaking of so great a thing should make
A greater crack ; [1]the round world
Should have shook lions into civil streets,
And citizens to their dens. The death of Antony
Is not a single doom ; in the name lay
A moiety of the world.
Der. He is dead, Cæsar ;
Not by a public minister of justice,
Nor by a hired knife ; but that self hand, [did,
Which writ his honour in the acts it
Hath, with the courage which the heart did lend it,
Splitted the heart. This is his sword ;
I robb'd his wound of it ; behold it stain'd
With his most noble blood.
Cæs. Look you sad, friends ?
The gods rebuke me, but it is tidings
To wash the eyes of kings.
Agr. And strange it is,
That nature must compel us to lament
Our most persisted deeds.
Mec. His taints and honours
Waged equal with him.
Agr. A rarer spirit never Did steer humanity : but you, gods, will give us
Some faults to make us men. Cæsar is touch'd.
Mec. When such a spacious mirror 's set before him,
He needs must see himself.
Cæs. O Antony !
I have follow'd thee to this : but we do lance [force
Diseases in our bodies : I must per-
Have shown to thee such a declining day, [together
Or look on thine ; we could not stall
In the whole world : but yet let me lament, [of hearts,
With tears as sovereign as the blood
That thou, my brother, my competitor
In top of all design, my mate in empire,
Friend and companion in the front of war, [heart,
The arm of mine own body, and the
Where mine his thoughts did kindle,—that our stars,
Unreconciliable, should divide

[1] Some words are here lost.

Our equalness to this. Hear me, good friends,—

Enter an Egyptian.

But I will tell you at some meeter season : [him ;
The business of this man looks out o
We'll hear him what he says.—Whence are you ?
Egyp. A poor Egyptian yet. The queen my mistress,
Confined in all she has, her monument,
Of thy intents desires instruction,
That she preparedly may frame herself
To the way she 's forced to.
Cæs. Bid her have good heart :
She soon shall know of us, by some of ours,
How honourable and how kindly we Determine for her ; for Cæsar cannot live
To be ungentle.
Egyp. So the gods preserve thee ! [Exit.
Cæs. Come hither, Proculeius. Go and say, [what comforts
We purpose her no shame : give her
The quality of her passion shall require
Lest, in her greatness, by some mortal stroke
She do defeat us ; for her life in Rome
Would be eternal in our triumph : go,
And with your speediest bring us what she says,
And how you find of her.
Pro. Cæsar, I shall. [Exit.
Cæs. Gallus, go you along. [Exit GALLUS.] Where 's Dolabella
To second Proculeius ?
All. Dolabella !
Cæs. Let him alone, for I remember now [be ready
How he 's employ'd : he shall in time
Go with me to my tent ; where you shall see [war
How hardly I was drawn into thi
How calm and gentle I proceeded still
In all my writings : go with me, and see
What I can show in this. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—Alexandria. The Monument.

Enter CLEOPATRA, CHARMIAN, and IRAS

Cleo. My desolation does begin t make

A better life. 'Tis paltry to be Cæsar;
Not being Fortune, he 's but Fortune's knave,
A minister of her will; and it is great
To do that thing that ends all other deeds;
Which shackles accidents and bolts up change;
Which sleeps, and never palates more the dug,
The beggar's nurse and Cæsar's.

Enter, to the Gates of the Monument, PROCULEIUS, GALLUS, and Soldiers.

Pro. Cæsar sends greeting to the Queen of Egypt;
And bids thee study on what fair demands
Thou mean'st to have him grant thee.
Cleo. What's thy name?
Pro. My name is Proculeius.
Cleo. Antony
Did tell me of you, bade me trust you; but I do not greatly care to be deceived,
That have no use for trusting. If your master
Would have a queen his beggar, you must tell him,
That majesty, to keep decorum, must
No less beg than a kingdom: if he please
To give me conquer'd Egypt for my son,
He gives me so much of mine own as I
Will kneel to him with thanks.
Pro. Be of good cheer;
You are fall'n into a princely hand; fear nothing:
Make your full reference freely to my lord,
Who is so full of grace, that it flows over
On all that need. Let me report to him
Your sweet dependency; and you shall find
A conqueror that will pray in aid for kindness,
Where he for grace is kneel'd to.
Cleo. Pray you, tell him
I am his fortune's vassal, and I send him
The greatness he has got. I hourly learn
A doctrine of obedience; and would gladly
Look him i' the face.
Pro. This I'll report, dear lady.
Have comfort; for I know your plight is pitied
Of him that caused it.
Gal. [Aside to PRO.] You see how easily she may be surprised.

[Here PROCULEIUS, and two of the Guard, ascend the Monument by a ladder placed against a window, and, having descended, come behind CLEOPATRA. Some of the Guard unbar and open the Gates.

[To PROCULEIUS and the Guard] Guard her till Cæsar come. [Exit.

Iras. Royal queen!
Char. O Cleopatra! thou art taken, queen!
Cleo. Quick, quick, good hands. [Drawing a dagger.
Pro. Hold, worthy lady, hold: [Seizes and disarms her.
Do not yourself such wrong, who are in this
Relieved, but not betray'd.
Cleo. What, of death too,
That rids our dogs of languish?
Pro. Cleopatra,
Do not abuse my master's bounty by
The undoing of yourself: let the world see
His nobleness well acted, which your death
Will never let come forth.
Cleo. Where art thou, Death?
Come hither, come! come, come, and take a queen
Worth many babes and beggars!
Pro. O temperance, lady,
Cleo. Sir, I will eat no meat, I'll not drink, sir;
If idle talk will once be necessary,
I'll not sleep neither: this mortal house I'll ruin,
Do Cæsar what he can. Know, sir, that I
Will not wait pinion'd at your master's court;
Nor once be chastised with the sober eye
Of dull Octavia. Shall they hoist me up
And show me to the shouting varletry
Of censuring Rome? Rather a ditch in Egypt
Be gentle grave to me! rather on Nilus' mud
Lay me stark naked, and let the water-flies
Blow me into abhorring! rather make
My country's high pyramides my gibbet,
And hang me up in chains!
Pro. You do extend
These thoughts of horror further than you shall Find cause in Cæsar.

Enter DOLABELLA.

Dol. Proculeius,
What thou hast done thy master Cæsar knows,
And he hath sent for thee: for the queen,
I'll take her to my guard.
Pro. So, Dolabella,
It shall content me best: be gentle to her.
[To CLEO.] To Cæsar I will speak what you shall please,
If you'll employ me to him.
Cleo. Say, I would die.
[Exeunt PROCULEIUS, and Soldiers.
Dol. Most noble empress, you have heard of me?
Cleo. I cannot tell.
Dol. Assuredly you know me.
Cleo. No matter, sir, what I have heard or known.
You laugh when boys or women tell their dreams;
Is 't not your trick?
Dol. I understand not, madam.
Cleo. I dream'd there was an Emperor Antony:
O, such another sleep, that I might see
But such another man!
Dol. If it might please ye,—
Cleo. His face was as the heavens; and therein stuck
A sun and moon, which kept their course, and lighted
The little O, the earth.
Dol. Most sovereign creature,—
Cleo. His legs bestrid the ocean: his rear'd arm
Crested the world: his voice was propertied
As all the tuned spheres, and that to friends;
But when he meant to quail and shake the orb,
He was as rattling thunder. For his bounty,
There was no winter in 't; an autumn 'twas
That grew the more by reaping: his delights
Were dolphin-like; they show'd his back above
The element they lived in: in his livery
Walk'd crowns and crownets; realms and islands were
As plates dropp'd from his pocket.
Dol. Cleopatra,—
Cleo. Think you there was, or might be, such a man
As this I dream'd of?
Dol. Gentle madam, no.
Cleo. You lie, up to the hearing of the gods.
But, if there be, or ever were, one such
It 's past the size of dreaming: Nature wants stuff
To vie strange forms with fancy; yet, to imagine
An Antony, were Nature's piece 'gainst fancy, Condemning shadows quite.
Dol. Hear me, good madam.
Your loss is as yourself, great; and you bear it
As answering to the weight: would I might never O'ertake pursued success, but I do feel,
By the rebound of yours, a grief that smites
My very heart at root.
Cleo. I thank you, sir.
Know you what Cæsar means to do with me?
Dol. I am loth to tell you what I would you knew.
Cleo. Nay, pray you, sir,—
Dol. Though he be honourable,—
Cleo. He'll lead me, then, in triumph?
Dol. Madam, he will; I know 't.
[Flourish and shout within: 'Make way there: Cæsar!'

Enter CÆSAR, GALLUS, PROCULEIUS, MECÆNAS, SELEUCUS, and Attendants.

Cæs. Which is the Queen of Egypt?
Dol. It is the emperor, madam.
[CLEOPATRA kneels.
Cæs. Arise, you shall not kneel:
I pray you, rise; rise, Egypt.
Cleo. Sir, the gods
Will have it thus; my master and my lord
I must obey.
Cæs. Take to you no hard thoughts:
The record of what injuries you did us,
Though written in our flesh, we shall remember
As things but done by chance.
Cleo. Sole sir o' the world,
I cannot project mine own cause so well
To make it clear; but do confess I have Been laden with like frailties which before
Have often shamed our sex.
Cæs. Cleopatra, know,
We will extenuate rather than enforce:
If you apply yourself to our intents,
Which towards you are most gentle, you shall find
A benefit in this change; but if you seek
To lay on me a cruelty, by taking

Antony's course, you shall bereave yourself
Of my good purposes, and put your children
To that destruction which I'll guard them from,
If thereon you rely. I'll take my leave.
Cleo. And may, through all the world: 'tis yours; and we,
Your scutcheons and your signs of conquest, shall Hang in what place you please. Here, my good lord.
Cæs. You shall advise me in all for Cleopatra.
Cleo. This is the brief of money, plate, and jewels,
I am possess'd of: 'tis exactly valued;
Not petty things admitted.—Where 's Seleucus?
Sel. Here, madam.
Cleo. This is my treasurer: let him speak, my lord,
Upon his peril, that I have reserved
To myself nothing. Speak the truth, Seleucus.
Sel. Madam, peril,
I had rather seal my lips, than, to my
Speak that which is not.
Cleo. What have I kept back?
Sel. Enough to purchase what you have made known.
Cæs. Nay, blush not, Cleopatra; I approve
Your wisdom in the deed.
Cleo. See, Cæsar! O, behold,
How pomp is follow'd! mine will now be yours;
And, should we shift estates, yours would be mine.
The ingratitude of this Seleucus does
Even make me wild. O slave, of no more trust
Than love that 's hired! What, goest thou back? thou shalt
Go back, I warrant thee; but I'll catch thine eyes,
Though they had wings: slave, soulless villain, dog!
O rarely base! you.
Cæs. Good queen, let us entreat
Cleo. O Cæsar, what a wounding shame is this; me,
That, thou vouchsafing here to visit
Doing the honour of thy lordliness
To one so meek, that mine own servant should Parcel the sum of my disgraces by Addition of his envy! Say, good Cæsar,
That I some lady trifles have reserved,
Immoment toys, things of such dignity
As we greet modern friends withal; and say,
Some nobler token I have kept apart
For Livia and Octavia, to induce
Their mediation; must I be unfolded
With one that I have bred? The gods! it smites me
Beneath the fall I have. [To SELEUCUS] Prithee, go hence;
Or I shall show the cinders of my spirits
Through the ashes of my chance: wert thou a man,
Thou wouldst have mercy on me.
Cæs. Forbear, Seleucus.
[Exit SELEUCUS.
Cleo. Be it known, that we, the greatest, are misthought
For things that others do; and, when we fall,
We answer others' merits in our name,
Are therefore to be pitied.
Cæs. Cleopatra,
Not what you have reserved, nor what acknowledged, yours;
Put we i' the roll of conquest: still be't
Bestow it at your pleasure, and believe
Cæsar 's no merchant, to make prize with you fore be cheer'd;
Of things that merchants sold. Therefore
Make not your thoughts your prisons: no, dear queen;
For we intend so to dispose you as Yourself shall give us counsel. Feed, and sleep: you,
Our care and pity is so much upon
That we remain your friend; and so, adieu.
Cleo. My master, and my lord!
Cæs. Not so. Adieu.
[Flourish. Exeunt CÆSAR and his Train.
Cleo. He words me, girls, he words me, that I should not
Be noble to myself: but hark thee, Charmian.
[Whispers CHARMIAN.
Iras. Finish, good lady; the bright day is done,
And we are for the dark.
Cleo. Hie thee again:
I have spoke already, and it is provided;
Go put it to the haste.
Char. Madam, I will.

Re-enter DOLABELLA.

Dol. Where is the queen?

Char. Behold, sir. [Exit.
Cleo. Dolabella!
Dol. Madam, as thereto sworn by your command,
Which my love makes religion to obey,
I tell you this: Cæsar through Syria
Intends his journey; and within three days [fore:
You with your children will he send be-
Make your best use of this: I have perform'd
Your pleasure and my promise.
Cleo. Dolabella,
I shall remain your debtor.
Dol. I your servant.
Adieu, good queen; I must attend on Cæsar.
Cleo. Farewell, and thanks.
[Exit DOLABELLA.
Now, Iras, what think'st thou?
Thou, an Egyptian puppet, shalt be shown [slaves
In Rome, as well as I: mechanic
With greasy aprons, rules and hammers, shall [breaths,
Uplift us to the view: in their thick
Rank of gross diet, shall we be enclouded,
And forced to drink their vapour.
Iras. The gods forbid!
Cleo. Nay, 'tis most certain, Iras: saucy lictors
Will catch at us like strumpets, and scald rhymers [dians
Ballad us out o' tune: the quick comedians
Extemporally will stage us, and present
Our Alexandrian revels; Antony
Shall be brought drunken forth, and I shall see [greatness
Some squeaking Cleopatra boy my
I' the posture of a whore.
Iras. O the good gods!
Cleo. Nay, that 's certain.
Iras. I'll never see 't; for I am sure my nails
Are stronger than mine eyes.
Cleo. Why, that 's the way
To fool their preparation, and to conquer
Their most absurd intents.

Re-enter CHARMIAN.

Now, Charmian!
Show me, my women, like a queen: go fetch [nus,
My best attires: I am again for Cydo-
To meet Mark Antony: sirrah Iras, go.
Now, noble Charmian, we'll dispatch indeed;
And, when thou hast done this chare, I'll give thee leave
To play till doomsday. Bring our crown and all.
[Exit IRAS. A noise within.
Wherefore 's this noise?

Enter one of the Guard.

Guard. Here is a rural fellow
That will not be denied your highness' presence:
He brings you figs.
Cleo. Let him come in. [Exit Guard.
What poor an instrument
May do a noble deed! he brings me liberty. [nothing
My resolution 's placed, and I have
Of woman in me: now from head to foot [ing moon
I am marble-constant; now the fleet-
No planet is of mine.

Re-enter Guard, with Clown bringing in a basket.

Guard. This is the man.
Cleo. Avoid, and leave him.
[Exit Guard.
Hast thou the pretty worm of Nilus there,
That kills and pains not?
Clown. Truly, I have him; but I would not be the party that should desire you to touch him, for his biting is immortal; those that do die of it do seldom or never recover.
Cleo. Remember'st thou any that have died on 't?
Clown. Very many, men and women too. I heard of one of them no longer than yesterday: a very honest woman, but something given to lie; as a woman should not do, but in the way of honesty: how she died of the biting of it, what pain she felt,—truly, she makes a very good report o' the worm; but he that will believe all that they say, shall never be saved by half that they do: but this is most fallible, the worm 's an odd worm.
Cleo. Get thee hence; farewell.
Clown. I wish you all joy of the worm. [Setting down the basket.
Cleo. Farewell.
Clown. You must think this, look you, that the worm will do his kind.

Cleo. Ay, ay; farewell.

Clown. Look you, the worm is not to be trusted but in the keeping of wise people; for indeed there is no goodness in the worm. [be heeded.

Cleo. Take thou no care; it shall

Clown. Very good. Give it nothing, I pray you, for it is not worth the feeding.

Cleo. Will it eat me?

Clown. You must not think I am so simple but I know the devil himself will not eat a woman: I know that a woman is a dish for the gods, if the devil dress her not. But, truly, these same whoreson devils do the gods great harm in their women; for in every ten that they make, the devils mar five.

Cleo. Well, get thee gone; farewell.

Clown. Yes, forsooth; I wish you joy o' the worm. [Exit.

Re-enter IRAS, with a robe, crown, etc.

Cleo. Give me my robe, put on my crown; I have [more
Immortal longings in me: now no
The juice of Egypt's grape shall moist this lip: [thinks I hear
Yare, yare, good Iras; quick. Me-
Antony call; I see him rouse himself
To praise my noble act; I hear him mock [give men
The luck of Cæsar, which the gods
To excuse their after wrath. Husband, I come: [my title!
Now to that name my courage prove
I am fire and air; my other elements
I give to baser life.—So,—have you done? [of my lips.
Come then, and take the last warmth
Farewell, kind Charmian;—Iras, long farewell.

[Kisses them. IRAS falls and dies.

Have I the aspic in my lips? Dost fall?
If thou and nature can so gently part,
The stroke of death is as a lover's pinch,
Which hurts, and is desired. Dost thou lie still? [world
If thus thou vanishest, thou tell'st the
It is not worth leave-taking.

Char. Dissolve, thick cloud, and rain; that I may say,
The gods themselves do weep!

Cleo. This proves me base:
If she first meet the curled Antony,
He'll make demand of her, and spend that kiss
Which is my heaven to have. Come, thou mortal wretch,

[To an asp, which she applies to her breast.

With thy sharp teeth this knot intrinsicate [fool,
Of life at once untie: poor venomous
Be angry, and dispatch. O, couldst thou speak! [Cæsar ass
That I might hear thee call great Unpolicied!

Char. O eastern star!

Cleo. Peace, peace!
Dost thou not see my baby at my breast,
That sucks the nurse asleep?

Char. O, break! O, break!

Cleo. As sweet as balm, as soft as air, as gentle,—
O Antony!—Nay, I will take thee too:

[Applying another asp to her arm.

What should I stay— [Dies.

Char. In this vile world?—So, fare thee well. [sion lies
Now boast thee, Death, in thy posses-
A lass unparallel'd.—Downy windows, close;
And golden Phœbus never be beheld
Of eyes again so royal! Your crown's awry;
I'll mend it, and then play.

Enter the Guard, rushing in.

First Guard. Where is the queen?

Char. Speak softly, wake her not.

First Guard. Cæsar hath sent—

Char. Too slow a messenger.

[Applies an asp.

O, come apace, dispatch! I partly feel thee.

First Guard. Approach, ho! All 's not well: Cæsar 's beguiled.

Sec. Guard. There 's Dolabella sent from Cæsar; call him.

First Guard. What work is here!—Charmian, is this well done?

Char. It is well done, and fitting for a princess
Descended of so many royal kings.
Ah, soldier! [Dies.

Re-enter DOLABELLA.

Dol. How goes it here?

Sec. Guard. All dead.

Dol. Cæsar, thy thoughts

Touch their effects in this: thyself art coming
To see perform'd the dreaded act which thou
So sought'st to hinder.

[A cry within: 'A way there, a way for Cæsar!'

Re-enter CÆSAR, and all his Train.

Dol. O sir, you are too sure an augurer;
That you did fear is done.

Cæs. Bravest at the last:
She levell'd at our purposes, and, being royal,
Took her own way.—The manner of their deaths?
I do not see them bleed.

Dol. Who was last with them?

First Guard. A simple countryman, that brought her figs:
This was his basket.

Cæs. Poison'd, then.

First Guard. O Cæsar,
This Charmian lived but now; she stood and spake:
I found her trimming up the diadem
On her dead mistress; tremblingly she stood,
And on the sudden dropp'd.

Cæs. O noble weakness!
If they had swallow'd poison, 'twould appear by external swelling: but she looks like sleep,
As she would catch another Antony
In her strong toil of grace.

Dol. Here, on her breast,
There is a vent of blood, and something blown:
The like is on her arm.

First Guard. This is an aspic's trail: and these fig-leaves
Have slime upon them, such as the aspic leaves
Upon the caves of Nile.

Cæs. Most probable
That so she died; for her physician tells me
She hath pursued conclusions infinite
Of easy ways to die. Take up her bed;
And bear her women from the monument:
She shall be buried by her Antony:
No grave upon the earth shall clip in it
A pair so famous. High events as these Strike those that make them; and their story is
No less in pity than his glory which Brought them to be lamented. Our army shall
In solemn show attend this funeral;
And then to Rome. Come, Dolabella, see
High order in this great solemnity.

[Exeunt.

SCENE, sometimes in Britain; sometimes in Italy.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—Britain. The Garden of CYMBELINE'S Palace.

Enter two Gentlemen.

First Gent. You do not meet a man but frowns: our bloods
No more obey the heavens than our courtiers
Still seem as does the king.
Sec. Gent. But what 's the matter?
First Gent. His daughter, and the heir of 's kingdom, whom
He purposed to his wife's sole son—a widow
That late he married—hath referr'd herself [she 's wedded;
Unto a poor but worthy gentleman:
Her husband banish'd; she imprison'd: all [the king
Is outward sorrow; though I think
Be touch'd at very heart.
Sec. Gent. None but the king?
First Gent. He that hath lost her too: so is the queen,
That most desired the match; but not a courtier, [bent
Although they wear their faces to the
Of the king's looks, hath a heart that is not Glad at the thing they scowl at.
Sec. Gent. And why so?
First Gent. He that hath miss'd the princess is a thing
Too bad for bad report: and he that hath her— [man!
I mean, that married her, alack, good
And therefore banish'd—is a creature such [earth
As, to seek through the regions of the
For one his like, there would be something failing [think
In him that should compare. I do not
So fair an outward and such stuff within Endows a man but he.
Sec. Gent. You speak him far.
First Gent. I do extend him, sir, within himself,
Crush him together rather than unfold
His measure duly. [birth?
Sec. Gent. What 's his name and
First Gent. I cannot delve him to the root: his father
Was call'd Sicilius, who did join his honour
Against the Romans with Cassibelan,
But had his titles by Tenantius, whom
He served with glory and admired success,
So gain'd the sur-addition, Leonatus;
And had, besides this gentleman in question, [the time
Two other sons, who in the wars o'

Died with their swords in hand; for which their father, [sorrow
Then old and fond of issue, took such
That he quit being; and his gentle lady,
Big of this gentleman our theme, deceased [the babe
As he was born. The king he takes
To his protection; calls him Posthumus Leonatus;
Breeds him and makes him of his bedchamber: [time
Puts to him all the learnings that his
Could make him the receiver of; which he took, [and
As we do air, fast as 'twas minister'd,
In 's spring became a harvest; lived in court— [most loved;
Which rare it is to do—most praised,
A sample to the youngest, to the more mature [graver
A glass that feated them, and to the
A child that guided dotards; to his mistress, [own price
For whom he now is banish'd, her
Proclaims how she esteem'd him and his virtue;
By her election may be truly read
What kind of man he is.

Sec. Gent. I honour him
Even out of your report. But, pray you, tell me,
Is she sole child to the king?

First Gent. His only child.
He had two sons,—if this be worth your hearing, [years old,
Mark it,—the eldest of them at three
I' the swathing-clothes the other, from their nursery
Were stol'n; and to this hour no guess in knowledge
Which way they went.

Sec. Gent. How long is this ago?

First Gent. Some twenty years.

Sec. Gent. That a king's children should be so convey'd!
So slackly guarded! and the search so slow,
That could not trace them!

First Gent. Howsoe'er 'tis strange,
Or that the negligence may well be laugh'd at,
Yet is it true, sir.

Sec. Gent. I do well believe you.

First Gent. We must forbear: here comes the gentleman,
The queen, and princess. [Exeunt.

Enter the QUEEN, POSTHUMUS, and IMOGEN.

Queen. No, be assured you shall not find me, daughter,
After the slander of most stepmothers,
Evil-eyed unto you: you're my prisoner, but
Your gaoler shall deliver you the keys
That lock up your restraint. For you, Posthumus,
So soon as I can win the offended king,
I will be known your advocate: marry, yet [good
The fire of rage is in him, and 'twere
You lean'd unto his sentence with what patience
Your wisdom may inform you.

Post. Please your highness,
I will from hence to-day.

Queen. You know the peril.
I'll fetch a turn about the garden, pitying [the king
The pangs of barr'd affections, though
Hath charged you should not speak together. [Exit.

Imo. O
Dissembling courtesy! How fine this tyrant [dearest husband,
Can tickle where she wounds! My
I something fear my father's wrath; but nothing—
Always reserved my holy duty—what
His rage can do on me: you must be gone;
And I shall here abide the hourly shot
Of angry eyes, not comforted to live,
But that there is this jewel in the world
That I may see again.

Post. My queen! my mistress!
O lady, weep no more, lest I give cause
To be suspected of more tenderness
Than doth become a man! I will remain
The loyal'st husband that did e'er plight troth.
My residence in Rome at one Philario's;
Who to my father was a friend, to me
Known but by letter: thither write, my queen,
And with mine eyes I'll drink the words you send,
Though ink be made of gall.

Re-enter QUEEN.

Queen. Be brief, I pray you:
If the king come, I shall incur I know not

How much of his displeasure. [Aside]
Yet I'll move him [wrong,
To walk this way: I never do him
But he does buy my injuries, to be friends;
Pays dear for my offences. [Exit.
Post. Should we be taking leave
As long a term as yet we have to live,
The lothness to depart would grow.
Adieu!
Imo. Nay, stay a little: [self,
Were you but riding forth to air your-
Such parting were too petty. Look here, love; [it, heart;
This diamond was my mother's: take
But keep it till you woo another wife,
When Imogen is dead.
Post. How, how! another?
You gentle gods, give me but this I have, [a next
And sear up my embracements from
With bonds of death! [Putting on the ring.] Remain, remain thou here [sweetest, fairest,
While sense can keep it on! And,
As I my poor self did exchange for you,
To your so infinite loss, so in our trifles
I still win of you: for my sake wear this;
It is a manacle of love; I'll place it
Upon this fairest prisoner.
[Putting a bracelet on her arm.
Imo. O the gods!
When shall we see again?

Enter CYMBELINE and Lords.

Post. Alack, the king!
Cym. Thou basest thing, avoid! hence, from my sight!
If after this command thou fraught the court [away!
With thy unworthiness, thou diest:
Thou 'rt poison to my blood.
Post. The gods protect you,
And bless the good remainders of the court!
I am gone. [Exit.
Imo. There cannot be a pinch in death
More sharp than this is.
Cym. O disloyal thing,
That shouldst repair my youth, thou heap'st
A year's age on me!
Imo. I beseech you, sir,
Harm not yourself with your vexation:
I am senseless of your wrath; a touch more rare
Subdues all pangs, all fears.
Cym. Past grace? obedience?
Imo. Past hope, and in despair; that way, past grace.
Cym. That mightst have had the sole son of my queen!
Imo. O blest, that I might not! I chose an eagle,
And did avoid a puttock.
Cym. Thou took'st a beggar; wouldst have made my throne
A seat for baseness.
Imo. No; I rather added
A lustre to it.
Cym. O thou vile one!
Imo. Sir,
It is your fault that I have loved Posthumus: [he is
You bred him as my playfellow, and
A man worth any woman; overbuys me
Almost the sum he pays.
Cym. What, art thou mad?
Imo. Almost, sir: heaven restore me! Would I were
A neat-herd's daughter! and my Leonatus
Our neighbour shepherd's son!

Re-enter QUEEN.

Cym. [To the QUEEN.] Thou foolish thing! [done
They were again together: you have
Not after our command. Away with her,
And pen her up. [—Peace,
Queen. Beseech your patience.
Dear lady daughter, peace!—Sweet sovereign,
Leave us to ourselves; and make yourself some comfort
Out of your best advice.
Cym. Nay, let her languish
A drop of blood a day; and, being aged,
Die of this folly!
[Exeunt CYMBELINE and Lords.
Queen. Fie! you must give way.

Enter PISANIO.

Here is your servant.—How now, sir! What news? [master.
Pis. My lord your son drew on my Queen. Ha!
No harm, I trust, is done?
Pis. There might have been,

But that my master rather play'd than fought, [parted
And had no help of anger: they were
By gentlemen at hand.
Queen. I am very glad on't.
Imo. Your son 's my father's friend; he takes his part.
To draw upon an exile! O brave sir!
I would they were in Afric both together; [prick Myself by with a needle, that I might
The goer-back.—Why came you from your master?
Pis. On his command: he would not suffer me [notes
To bring him to the haven; left these
Of what commands I should be subject to,
When 't pleased you to employ me.
Queen. This hath been
Your faithful servant: I dare lay mine honour
He will remain so.
Pis. I humbly thank your highness.
Queen. Pray, walk awhile.
Imo. About some half-hour hence, I pray you, speak with me: you shall at least Go see my lord aboard: for this time leave me. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—The Same. A Public Place.

Enter CLOTEN and two Lords.

First Lord. Sir, I would advise you to shift a shirt; the violence of action hath made you reek as a sacrifice: where air comes out, air comes in: there 's none abroad so wholesome as that you vent.

Clo. If my shirt were bloody, then to shift it. Have I hurt him?

Sec. Lord. [Aside.] No, faith; not so much as his patience.

First Lord. Hurt him! his body 's a passable carcass, if he be not hurt: it is a thoroughfare for steel, if it be not hurt.

Sec. Lord. [Aside.] His steel was in debt; it went o' the backside the town.

Clo. The villain would not stand me.

Sec. Lord. [Aside.] No; but he fled forward still, toward your face.

First Lord. Stand you! You have land enough of your own: but he added to your having; gave you some ground.

Sec. Lord. [Aside.] As many inches as you have oceans. Puppies!

Clo. I would they had not come between us.

Sec. Lord. [Aside.] So would I, till you had measured how long a fool you were upon the ground.

Clo. And that she should love this fellow, and refuse me!

Sec. Lord. [Aside.] If it be a sin to make a true election, she is damned.

First Lord. Sir, as I told you always, her beauty and her brain go not together: she 's a good sign, but I have seen small reflection of her wit.

Sec. Lord. [Aside.] She shines not upon fools, lest the reflection should hurt her.

Clo. Come, I'll to my chamber. Would there had been some hurt done!

Sec. Lord. [Aside.] I wish not so; unless it had been the fall of an ass, which is no great hurt.

Clo. You'll go with us? [ship.

First Lord. I'll attend your lord-

Clo. Nay, come, let 's go together.

Sec. Lord. Well, my lord. [Exeunt.

SCENE III.—The Same. A Room in CYMBELINE'S Palace.

Enter IMOGEN and PISANIO.

Imo. I would thou grew'st unto the shores o' the haven,
And question'dst every sail: if he should write,
And I not have it, 'twere a paper lost,
As offer'd mercy is. What was the last
That he spake to thee?
Pis. 'Twas his queen, his queen!
Imo. Then waved his handkerchief?
Pis. And kiss'd it, madam.
Imo. Senseless linen! happier therein than I!
And that was all?
Pis. No, madam; for so long
As he could make me with this eye or ear [keep Distinguish him from others, he did
The deck, with glove, or hat, or handkerchief, [mind
Still waving, as the fits and stirs of 's
Could best express how slow his soul sail'd on,
How swift his ship.
Imo. Thou shouldst have made him
As little as a crow, or less, ere left

To after-eye him.
Pis. Madam, so I did.
Imo. I would have broke mine eye-strings, crack'd them, but
To look upon him, till the diminution
Of space had pointed him sharp as my needle; [from Nay, follow'd him, till he had melted
The smallness of a gnat to air; and then [good Pisanio,
Have turn'd mine eye and wept. But, When shall we hear from him?
Pis. Be assured, madam,
With his next vantage. [but had
Imo. I did not take my leave of him,
Most pretty things to say: ere I could tell him
How I would think on him at certain hours.
Such thoughts and such; or I could make him swear
The shes of Italy should not betray
Mine interest and his honour; or have charged him, [midnight,
At the sixth hour of morn, at noon, at
To encounter me with orisons, for then
I am in heaven for him; or ere I could Give him that parting kiss which I had set [in my father,
Betwixt two charming words, comes
And, like the tyrannous breathing of the north,
Shakes all our buds from growing.

Enter a Lady.

Lady. The queen, madam,
Desires your highness' company.
Imo. Those things I bid you do, get them dispatch'd.—
I will attend the queen.
Pis. Madam, I shall.
[Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—Rome. PHILARIO'S House.

Enter PHILARIO, IACHIMO, a Frenchman, a Dutchman, and a Spaniard.

Iach. Believe it, sir, I have seen him in Britain: he was then of a crescent note; expected to prove so worthy as since he hath been allowed the name of: but I could then have looked on him without the help of admiration; though the catalogue of his endowments had been tabled by his side, and I to peruse him by items.

Phi. You speak of him when he was less furnished than now he is with that which makes him both without and within.

French. I have seen him in France: we had very many there could behold the sun with as firm eyes as he.

Iach. This matter of marrying his king's daughter, wherein he must be weighed rather by her value than his own, words him, I doubt not, a great deal from the matter.

French. And then his banishment.

Iach. Ay, and the approbation of those that weep this lamentable divorce under her colours are wonderfully to extend him; be it but to fortify her judgment, which else an easy battery might lay flat, for taking a beggar without less quality. But how comes it he is to sojourn with you? how creeps acquaintance?

Phi. His father and I were soldiers together; to whom I have been often bound for no less than my life. Here comes the Briton: let him be so entertained amongst you as suits, with gentlemen of your knowing, to a stranger of his quality.

Enter POSTHUMUS.

I beseech you all, be better known to this gentleman; whom I commend to you as a noble friend of mine: how worthy he is I will leave to appear hereafter, rather than story him in his own hearing. [gether in Orleans.
French. Sir, we have known to-
Post. Since when I have been debtor to you for courtesies, which I will be ever to pay and yet pay still.

French. Sir, you o'errate my poor kindness: I was glad I did atone my countryman and you; it had been pity you should have been put together with so mortal a purpose as then each bore, upon importance of so slight and trivial a nature.

Post. By your pardon, sir, I was then a young traveller; rather shunned to go even with what I heard than in my every action to be guided by others experiences: but upon my mended judgment—if I offend not to say it is mended—my quarrel was not altogether slight.

French. Faith, yes, to be put to the arbitrement of swords; and by such two that would, by all likelihood, have confounded one the other, or have fallen both.

Iach. Can we, with manners, ask what was the difference?

French. Safely, I think: 'twas a contention in public, which may, without contradiction, suffer the report. It was much like an argument that fell out last night, where each of us fell in praise of our country mistresses; this gentleman at that time vouching—and upon warrant of bloody affirmation—his to be more fair, virtuous, wise, chaste, constant-qualified, and less attemptable, than any the rarest of our ladies in France.

Iach. That lady is not now living, or this gentleman's opinion by this worn out. [I my mind.

Post. She holds her virtue still, and Iach. You must not so far prefer her 'fore ours of Italy.

Post. Being so far provoked as I was in France, I would abate her nothing; though I profess myself her adorer, not her friend.

Iach. As fair and as good—a kind of hand-in-hand comparison—had been something too fair and too good for any lady in Britain. If she went before others I have seen, as that diamond of yours outlustres many I have beheld, I could not but believe she excelled many: but I have not seen the most precious diamond that is, nor you the lady. [so do I my stone.

Post. I praised her as I rated her:

Iach. What do you esteem it at?

Post. More than the world enjoys.

Iach. Either your unparagoned mistress is dead, or she 's outprized by a trifle.

Post. You are mistaken: the one may be sold, or given, if there were wealth enough for the purchase, or merit for the gift: the other is not a thing for sale, and only the gift of the gods. [you?

Iach. Which the gods have given

Post. Which, by their graces, I will keep.

Iach. You may wear her in title yours: but, you know, strange fowl light upon neighbouring ponds. Your ring may be stolen too: so your brace of unprizable estimations: the one is but frail, and the other casual; a cunning thief, or a that-way-accomplished courtier, would hazard the winning both of first and last.

Post. Your Italy contains none so accomplished a courtier to convince the honour of my mistress; if, in the holding or loss of that, you term her frail. I do nothing doubt you have store of thieves; notwithstanding, I fear not my ring.

Phi. Let us leave here, gentlemen.

Post. Sir, with all my heart. This worthy signior, I thank him, makes no stranger of me; we are familiar at first.

Iach. With five times so much conversation, I should get ground of your fair mistress; make her go back, even to the yielding, had I admittance and opportunity to friend.

Post. No, no.

Iach. I dare thereupon pawn the moiety of my estate to your ring; which, in my opinion, o'ervalues it something; but I make my wager rather against your confidence than her reputation: and, to bar your offence herein too, I durst attempt it against any lady in the world.

Post. You are a great deal abused in too bold a persuasion; and I doubt not you sustain what you're worthy of by your attempt.

Iach. What 's that?

Post. A repulse: though your attempt, as you call it, deserve more; a punishment too.

Phi. Gentlemen, enough of this: it came in too suddenly; let it die as it was born, and, I pray you, be better acquainted.

Iach. Would I had put my estate and my neighbour's on the approbation of what I have spoke! [to assail?

Post. What lady would you choose

Iach. Yours; whom in constancy you think stands so safe. I will lay you ten thousand ducats to your ring, that, commend me to the court where your lady is, with no more advantage than the opportunity of a second conference, and I will bring from thence that honour of hers which you imagine so reserved.

Post. I will wage against your gold, gold to it: my ring I hold dear as my finger; 'tis part of it.

Iach. You are afraid, and therein the wiser. If you buy ladies' flesh at a million a dram, you cannot preserve it from tainting: but I see you have some religion in you, that you fear.

Post. This is but a custom in your tongue; you bear a graver purpose, I hope.

Iach. I am the master of my speeches, and would undergo what 's spoken, I swear.

Post. Will you? I shall but lend my diamond till your return: let there be covenants drawn between 's: my mistress exceeds in goodness the hugeness of your unworthy thinking: I dare you to this match: here 's my ring.

Phi. I will have it no lay.

Iach. By the gods, it is one. If I bring you no sufficient testimony that I have enjoyed the dearest bodily part of your mistress, my ten thousand ducats are yours; so is your diamond too: if I come off, and leave her in such honour as you have trust in, she your jewel, this your jewel, and my gold are yours: provided I have your commendation for my more free entertainment.

Post. I embrace these conditions; let us have articles betwixt us. Only, thus far you shall answer: if you make your voyage upon her, and give me directly to understand you have prevailed, I am no further your enemy; she is not worth our debate: if she remain unseduced, you not making it appear otherwise, for your ill opinion and the assault you have made to her chastity you shall answer me with your sword.

Iach. Your hand; a covenant: we will have these things set down by lawful counsel, and straight away for Britain, lest the bargain should catch cold and starve: I will fetch my gold, and have our two wagers recorded.

Post. Agreed.

[Exeunt POSTHUMUS and IACHIMO.

French. Will this hold, think you?

Phi. Signior Iachimo will not from it. Pray, let us follow 'em. [Exeunt.

SCENE V.—Britain. A Room in CYMBELINE'S Palace.

Enter QUEEN, Ladies, and CORNELIUS.

Queen. Whiles yet the dew 's on ground, gather those flowers;
Make haste: who has the note of them?
First Lady. I, madam.
Queen. Dispatch. [Exeunt Ladies.
Now, master doctor, have you brought those drugs?
Cor. Pleaseth your highness, ay: here they are, madam:
[Presenting a small box.
But I beseech your grace, without offence,— [fore you have My conscience bids me ask—where-
Commanded of me these most poisonous compounds, [death;
Which are the movers of a languishing
But, though slow, deadly?
Queen. I wonder, doctor,
Thou ask'st me such a question. Have I not been [me how Thy pupil long? Hast thou not learn'd
To make perfumes? distil? preserve? yea, so [me oft
That our great king himself doth woo
For my confections? Having thus far proceeded,— Unless thou think'st me devilish,—is 't not meet
That I did amplify my judgment in Other conclusions? I will try the forces [tures as
Of these thy compounds on such crea-
We count not worth the hanging, but none human,
To try the vigour of them, and apply
Allayments to their act; and by them gather
Their several virtues and effects.
Cor. Your highness
Shall from this practice but make hard your heart:
Besides, the seeing these effects will be
Both noisome and infectious.
Queen. O, content thee.

Enter PISANIO.

[Aside] Here comes a flattering rascal; upon him
Will I first work: he 's for his master,
And enemy to my son.—How now, Pisanio!— [ended;
Doctor, your service for this time is
Take your own way.
Cor. [Aside.] I do suspect you, madam;
But you shall do no harm.

Queen. [To PISANIO.] Hark thee, a word.

Cor. [Aside.] I do not like her. She doth think she has Strange lingering poisons: I do know her spirit, [with
And will not trust one of her malice
A drug of such damn'd nature. Those she has
Will stupefy and dull the sense awhile;
Which first, perchance, she'll prove on cats and dogs, [is
Then afterward up higher; but there
No danger in what show of death it makes, [a time,
More than the locking-up the spirits
To be more fresh, reviving. She is fool'd [truer,
With a most false effect; and I the
So to be false with her.

Queen. No further service, doctor,
Until I send for thee.

Cor. I humbly take my leave. [Exit.

Queen. Weeps she still, say'st thou? Dost thou think in time
She will not quench, and let instructions enter [work:
Where folly now possesses? Do thou
When thou shalt bring me word she loves my son, [then
I'll tell thee on the instant thou art
As great as is thy master; greater, for
His fortunes all lie speechless and his name
Is at last gasp: return he cannot, nor Continue where he is: to shift his being
Is to exchange one misery with another;
And every day that comes comes to decay [thou expect,
A day's work in him. What shalt
To be depender on a thing that leans,
Who cannot be new built, nor has no friends,
So much as but to prop him? [The QUEEN drops the box: PISANIO takes it up.] Thou takest up [for thy labour:
Thou know'st not what; but take it
It is a thing I made, which hath the king [not know
Five times redeem'd from death: I do
What is more cordial: nay, I prithee, take it;
It is an earnest of a further good
That I mean to thee. Tell thy mistress how
The case stands with her; do 't as from thyself.
Think what a chance thou changest on; but think [my son,
Thou hast thy mistress still; to boot,
Who shall take notice of thee: I'll move the king
To any shape of thy preferment, such
As thou'lt desire; and then myself, I chiefly,
That set thee on to this desert, am bound [women:
To load thy merit richly. Call my
Think on my words. [Exit PISANIO.
A sly and constant knave;
Not to be shaked: the agent for his master;
And the remembrancer of her to hold
The hand-fast to her lord. I have given him that [her
Which, if he take, shall quite unpeople
Of liegers for her sweet; and which she after, [assured
Except she bend her humour, shall be
To taste of too.

Re-enter PISANIO, with Ladies.

So, so; well done, well done:
The violets, cowslips, and the primroses, [Pisanio;
Bear to my closet.—Fare thee well,
Think on my words.
[Exeunt QUEEN and Ladies.

Pis. And shall do:
But when to my good lord I prove untrue,
I'll choke myself: there 's all I'll do for you. [Exit.

SCENE VI.—The Same. Another Room in the Palace.

Enter IMOGEN.

Imo. A father cruel, and a step-dame false;
A foolish suitor to a wedded lady,
That hath her husband banish'd;—O, that husband! [repeated
My supreme crown of grief! and those Vexations of it! Had I been thief-stol'n, [miserable
As my two brothers, happy! but most
Is the desire that 's glorious: blest be those, [honest wills,
How mean soe'er, that have their
Which seasons comfort.—Who may this be? Fie!

Enter PISANIO and IACHIMO.

Pis. Madam, a noble gentleman of Rome,
Comes from my lord with letters.
Iach. Change you, madam ?
The worthy Leonatus is in safety,
And greets your highness dearly.
[Presents a letter.
Imo. Thanks, good sir :
You're kindly welcome.
Iach. [Aside.] All of her that is out of door most rich !
If she be furnish'd with a mind so rare,
She is alone the Arabian bird, and I
Have lost the wager. Boldness be my friend !
Arm me, audacity, from head to foot !
Or, like the Parthian, I shall flying fight ;
Rather, directly fly.
Imo. [Reads.]

'He is one of the noblest note, to whose kindnesses I am most infinitely tied. Reflect upon him accordingly, as you value your trust—

'LEONATUS.'

So far I read aloud :
But even the very middle of my heart
Is warm'd by the rest, and takes it thankfully.
You are as welcome, worthy sir, as I
Have words to bid you, and shall find it so
In all that I can do.
Iach. Thanks, fairest lady.
What, are men mad ? Hath Nature given them eyes [crop
To see this vaulted arch and the rich
Of sea and land, which can distinguish 'twixt [stones
The fiery orbs above and the twinn'd
Upon the number'd beach, and can we not [precious
Partition make with spectacles so
'Twixt fair and foul ? [tion ?
Imo. What makes your admira-
Iach. It cannot be i' the eye ; for apes and monkeys,
'Twixt two such shes, would chatter this way, and Contemn with mows the other : nor i' the judgment ; [would
For idiots, in this case of favour,
Be wisely definite ; nor i' the appetite ;
Sluttery, to such neat excellence opposed,
Should make desire vomit emptiness,
Not so allured to feed.
Imo. What is the matter, trow ?
Iach. The cloyed will,
That satiate yet unsatisfied desire, that tub [first the lamb,
Both fill'd and running, ravening
Longs after for the garbage.
Imo. What, dear sir,
Thus raps you ? Are you well ?
Iach. Thanks, madam ; well
[To PISANIO] Beseech you, sir,
Desire my man's abode where I did leave him :
He 's strange and peevish.
Pis. I was going, sir
To give him welcome. [Exit
Imo. Continues well my lord ? His health, beseech you ?
Iach. Well, madam. [he is
Imo. Is he disposed to mirth ? I hope
Iach. Exceeding pleasant ; none a stranger there [call'd
So merry and so gamesome : he is
The Briton reveller.
Imo. When he was here,
He did incline to sadness, and oft-times
Not knowing why.
Iach. I never saw him sad.
There is a Frenchman his companion, one [much loves
An eminent monsieur, that, it seems,
A Gallian girl at home : he furnaces
The thick sighs from him ; whiles the jolly Briton—
Your lord, I mean—laughs from 's free lungs, cries ' O,
Can my sides hold, to think that man, who knows
By history, report, or his own proof,
What woman is, yea, what she cannot choose [guish for
But must be, will his free hours lan-
Assured bondage ? '
Imo. Will my lord say so ?
Iach. Ay, madam ; with his eyes in flood with laughter :
It is a recreation to be by
And hear him mock the Frenchman.
But, heavens know,
Some men are much to blame.
Imo. Not he, I hope.
Iach. Not he : but yet heaven's bounty towards him might
Be used more thankfully. In himself, 'tis much ; [talents,
In you, which I account his beyond all

Whilst I am bound to wonder, I am bound
To pity too.
Imo. What do you pity, sir?
Iach. Two creatures, heartily.
Imo. —Am I one, sir?
You look on me: what wreck discern you in me
Deserves your pity?
Iach. Lamentable! What,
To hide me from the radiant sun, and solace
I' the dungeon by a snuff?
Imo. I pray you, sir,
Deliver with more openness your answers [me?
To my demands. Why do you pity
Iach. That others do— [But I was about to say—enjoy your——
It is an office of the gods to venge it,
Not mine to speak on 't.
Imo. You do seem to know
Something of me, or what concerns me: pray you,—
Since doubting things go ill often hurts more [ties
Than to be sure they do; for certain-
Either are past remedies, or, timely knowing, [me
The remedy then born,—discover to
What both you spur and stop.
Iach. Had I this cheek
To bathe my lips upon; this hand, whose touch,
Whose every touch, would force the feeler's soul [which
To the oath of loyalty; this object,
Takes prisoner the wild motion of mine eye, [then,
Fixing it only here; should I, damn'd
Slaver with lips as common as the stairs [with hands
That mount the Capitol; join gripes
Made hard with hourly falsehood—falsehood, as [an eye
With labour; then by-peeping in Base and unlustrous as the smoky light [were fit
That 's fed with stinking tallow; it
That all the plagues of hell should at one time
Encounter such revolt.
Imo. My lord, I fear,
Has forgot Britain.
Iach. And himself. Not I,
Inclined to this intelligence, pronounce
The beggary of his change; but 'tis your graces [my tongue
That from my mutest conscience to Charms this report out.
Imo. Let me hear no more.
Iach. O dearest soul, your cause doth strike my heart
With pity, that doth make me sick! A lady
So fair, and fasten'd to an empery,
Would make the great'st king double, —to be partner'
With tomboys hired with that self-exhibition
Which your own coffers yield! with diseased ventures
That play with all infirmities for gold
Which rottenness can lend nature! such boil'd stuff
As well might poison poison! Be revenged; [and you
Or she that bore you was no queen,
Recoil from your great stock.
Imo. Revenged!
How should I be revenged? If this be true,— [ears
As I have such a heart that both mine
Must not in haste abuse—if it be true,
How should I be revenged?
Iach. Should he make me
Live, like Diana's priest, betwixt cold sheets,
Whiles he is vaulting variable ramps,
In your despite, upon your purse? Revenge it. [pleasure,
I dedicate myself to your sweet
More noble than that runagate to your bed, [tion,
And will continue fast to your affec-
Still close as sure.
Imo. What ho, Pisanio!
Iach. Let me my service tender on your lips. [ears that have
Imo. Away! I do condemn mine
So long attended thee. If thou wert honourable, [virtue, not Thou wouldst have told this tale for
For such an end thou seek'st,—as base as strange. [far
Thou wrong'st a gentleman who is as
From thy report as thou from honour, and Solicit'st here a lady that disdains
Thee and the devil alike.—What ho, Pisanio!— [acquainted
The king my father shall be made
Of thy assault: if he shall think it fit,

A saucy stranger in his court to mart
As in a Romish stew and to expound
His beastly mind to us, he hath a court
He little cares for and a daughter who
He not respects at all.—What ho, Pisanio! [say:
Iach. O happy Leonatus! I may
The credit that thy lady hath of thee
Deserves thy trust, and thy most perfect goodness
Her assured credit!—Blessed live you long!
A lady to the worthiest sir that ever
Country call'd his! and you his mistress, only [your pardon.
For the most worthiest fit! Give me
I have spoke this, to know if your affiance [your lord
Were deeply rooted; and shall make
The which he is, new o'er: and he is one [witch
That truest manner'd; such a holy
That he enchants societies unto him;
Half all men's hearts are his.
Imo. You make amends.
Iach. He sits 'mongst men like a descended god:
He hath a kind of honour sets him off,
More than a mortal seeming. Be not angry, [ventured
Most mighty princess, that I have ad-
To try your taking of a false report; which hath [judgment
Honour'd with confirmation your great
In the election of a sir so rare,
Which you know cannot err. The love I bear him
Made me to fan you thus, but the gods made you,
Unlike all others, chaffless. Pray, your pardon.
Imo. All's well, sir: take my power i' the court for yours.
Iach. My humble thanks. I had almost forgot [request,
To entreat your grace but in a small
And yet of moment too, for it concerns [friends
Your lord; myself and other noble
Are partners in the business.
Imo. Pray, what is 't?
Iach. Some dozen Romans of us, and your lord—
The best feather of our wing—have mingled sums
To buy a present for the emperor;
Which I, the factor for the rest, have done [and jewels
In France: 'tis plate of rare device,
Of rich and exquisite form; their values great; [strange,
And I am something curious, being
To have them in safe stowage: may it please you
To take them in protection?
Imo. Willingly;
And pawn mine honour for their safety: since
My lord hath interest in them, I will keep them
In my bedchamber.
Iach. They are in a trunk,
Attended by my men: I will make bold [night;
To send them to you, only for this
I must aboard to-morrow.
Imo. O, no, no.
Iach. Yes, I beseech; or I shall short my word [Gallia
By lengthening my return. From
I cross'd the seas on purpose and on promise
To see your grace.
Imo. I thank you for your pains:
But not away to-morrow!
Iach. O, I must, madam:
Therefore I shall beseech you, if you please [to-night:
To greet your lord with writing, do't
I have outstood my time; which is material
To the tender of our present.
Imo. I will write.
Send your trunk to me; it shall safe be kept,
And truly yielded you. You're very welcome. [Exeunt.

ACT II.

SCENE I.—Britain. Before CYMBELINE'S Palace.

Enter CLOTEN, and two Lords.

Clo. Was there ever man had such luck! when I kissed the jack, upon an up-cast to be hit away! I had a hundred pound on 't: and then a whoreson jackanapes must take me up for swearing; as if I borrowed mine oaths of him, and might not spend them at my pleasure.

First Lord. What got he by that?

You have broke his pate with your bowl.

Sec. Lord. [Aside.] If his wit had been like him that broke it, it would have run all out.

Clo. When a gentleman is disposed to swear, it is not for any standers-by to curtail his oaths, ha?

Sec. Lord. No, my lord; [Aside] nor crop the ears of them.

Clo. Whoreson dog! I give him satisfaction?
Would he had been one of my rank!

Sec. Lord. [Aside.] To have smelt like a fool.

Clo. I am not more vexed at any thing in the earth: a pox on't! I had rather not be so noble as I am; they dare not fight with me, because of the queen my mother: every Jack-slave hath his bellyful of fighting, and I must go up and down like a cock that nobody can match.

Sec. Lord. [Aside.] You are cock and capon too; and you crow, cock, with your comb on.

Clo. Sayest thou?

Sec. Lord. It is not fit your lordship should undertake every companion that you give offence to.

Clo. No, I know that: but it is fit I should commit offence to my inferiors. [lordship only.

Sec. Lord. Ay, it is fit for your

Clo. Why, so I say.

First Lord. Did you hear of a stranger that 's come to court to-night?

Clo. A stranger, and I not know on't!

Sec. Lord. [Aside.] He 's a strange fellow himself, and knows it not.

First Lord. There 's an Italian come; and, 'tis thought, one of Leonatus' friends.

Clo. Leonatus! a banished rascal; and he 's another, whatsoever he be. Who told you of this stranger?

First Lord. One of your lordship's pages.

Clo. Is it fit I went to look upon him? is there no derogation in 't?

First Lord. You cannot derogate, my lord.

Clo. Not easily, I think.

Sec. Lord. [Aside.] You are a fool granted; therefore your issues, being foolish, do not derogate.

Clo. Come, I'll go see this Italian: what I have lost to-day at bowls I'll win to-night of him. Come, go.

Sec. Lord. I'll attend your lordship.

[Exeunt CLOTEN and First Lord.

SCENE II.—The Same. IMOGEN'S Bedchamber in CYMBELINE'S Palace: a Trunk in one corner of it.

IMOGEN in bed, reading; a Lady attending.

Imo. Who 's there? my woman Helen?

Lady. Please you, madam.

Imo. What hour is it?

Lady. Almost midnight, madam.

Imo. I have read three hours then: mine eyes are weak:
Fold down the leaf where I have left: to bed: [ing;
Take not away the taper, leave it burn- And if thou canst awake by four o' the clock,
I prithee, call me. Sleep hath seized me wholly. [Exit Lady.
To your protection I commend me, gods! [night
From fairies and the tempters of the Guard me, beseech ye!

[Sleeps. IACHIMO comes from the Trunk.

Iach. The crickets sing, and man's o'er-labour'd sense [thus Repairs itself by rest. Our Tarquin Did softly press the rushes, ere he waken'd

The chastity he wounded. Cytherea,
How bravely thou becomest thy bed! fresh lily!
And whiter than the sheets! That I might touch!
But kiss; one kiss! Rubies unparagon'd,
How dearly they do 't! 'Tis her breathing that Perfumes the chamber thus: the flame o' the taper
Bows toward her, and would underpeep her lids,
To see the enclosed lights, now canopied
Under these windows, white and azure laced
With blue of heaven's own tinct. But my design,
To note the chamber: I will write all down:
Such and such pictures; there the window; such
The adornment of her bed; the arras; such
Such and such figures, the story.
Why, such and such; and the contents o' the story.
Ah, but some natural notes about her body,
Above ten thousand meaner moveables
Would testify, to enrich mine inventory.
O sleep, thou ape of death, lie dull upon her!
And be her sense but as a monument,
Thus in a chapel lying! Come off, come off:
[Taking off her bracelet.
As slippery as the Gordian knot was hard!
'Tis mine; and this will witness outwardly,
As strongly as the conscience does within,
To the madding of her lord. On her left breast
A mole cinque-spotted, like the crimson drops
I' the bottom of a cowslip: here 's a voucher,
Stronger than ever law could make: this secret
Will force him think I have pick'd the lock and ta'en
The treasure of her honour. No more. To what end?
Why should I write this down, that 's riveted,
Screw'd to my memory? She hath been reading late
The tale of Tereus; here the leaf 's turn'd down
Where Philomel gave up. I have enough:
To the trunk again, and shut the spring of it.
Swift, swift, you dragons of the night, that dawning
May bare the raven's eye! I lodge in fear;
Though this a heavenly angel, hell is here.
[Clock strikes.
One, two, three: time, time!
[Goes into the Trunk. The Scene closes.

SCENE III.—The Same. An Antechamber adjoining IMOGEN'S Apartments.

Enter CLOTEN and Lords.

First Lord. Your lordship is the most patient man in loss, the most coldest that ever turned up ace.

Clo. It would make any man cold to lose.

First Lord. But not every man patient after the noble temper of your lordship. You are most hot and furious when you win.

Clo. Winning will put any man into courage. If I could get this foolish Imogen, I should have gold enough. It's almost morning is 't not?

First Lord. Day, my lord.

Clo. I would this music would come: I am advised to give her music o' mornings; they say it will penetrate.

Enter Musicians.

Come on; tune: if you can penetrate her with your fingering, so; we'll try with tongue too: if none will do, let her remain; but I'll never give o'er. First, a very excellent good-conceited thing; after, a wonderful sweet air, with admirable rich words to it,—and then let her consider.

SONG.

'Hark! hark! the lark at heaven's gate sings,
And Phœbus 'gins arise,
His steeds to water at those springs
On chaliced flowers that lies;
And winking Mary-buds begin
To ope their golden eyes:
With every thing that pretty bin,
My lady sweet, arise:
Arise, arise.'

Clo. So, get you gone. If this penetrate, I will consider your music the better: if it do not, it is a vice in her ears, which horse-hairs and cats'-guts, nor the voice of unpaved eunuch to boot, can never amend.

[Exeunt Musicians.

Sec. Lord. Here comes the king.

Clo. I am glad I was up so late; for that 's the reason I was up so early:

he cannot choose but take this service
I have done fatherly.

Enter CYMBELINE and QUEEN.

Good-morrow to your majesty and to my gracious mother.

Cym. Attend you here the door of our stern daughter?
Will she not forth?

Clo. I have assailed her with music, but she vouchsafes no notice.

Cym. The exile of her minion is too new; [more time
She hath not yet forgot him: some Must wear the print of his remembrance out,
And then she 's yours. [king;

Queen. You are most bound to the
Who lets go by no vantages that may Prefer you to his daughter. Frame yourself
To orderly soliciting; and be friended
With aptness of the season; make denials
Increase your services; so seem as if You were inspired to do those duties which [her,
You tender to her; that you in all obey
Save when command to your dismission tends,
And therein you are senseless.

Clo. Senseless! not so.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. So like you, sir, ambassadors from Rome;
The one is Caius Lucius.

Cym. A worthy fellow,
Albeit he comes on angry purpose now;
But that 's no fault of his: we must receive him
According to the honour of his sender;
And towards himself, his goodness fore-
spent on us,
We must extend our notice. [To CLO-
TEN] Our dear son,
When you have given good morning to your mistress, [have need
Attend the queen and us; we shall
To employ you towards this Roman.—
Come, our queen.

[Exeunt all but CLOTEN.

Clo. If she be up, I'll speak with her;
if not,
Let her lie still and dream. [Knocks.]
By your leave, ho! [what
I know her women are about her:
If I do line one of their hands? 'Tis gold [yea, and makes
Which buys admittance; oft it doth;
Diana's rangers false themselves, yield up [and 'tis gold
Their deer to the stand o' the stealer;
Which makes the true man kill'd and saves the thief;
Nay, sometime hangs both thief and true man: what
Can it not do and undo? I will make
One of her women lawyer to me, for
I yet not understand the case myself.
[Knocks.] By your leave.

Enter a Lady.

Lady. Who 's there that knocks?

Clo. A gentleman.

Lady. No more?

Clo. Yes, and a gentlewoman's son.

Lady. That 's more Than some, whose tailors are as dear as yours,
Can justly boast of. What 's your lordship's pleasure?

Clo. Your lady's person: is she ready?

Lady. Ay,
To keep her chamber.

Clo. There 's gold for you; sell me your good report.

Lady. How! my good name? or to report of you
What I shall think is good?—The princess! [Exit.

Enter IMOGEN.

Clo. Good-morrow, fairest: sister, your sweet hand.

Imo. Good-morrow, sir. You lay out too much pains
For purchasing but trouble: the thanks I give
Is telling you that I am poor of thanks
And scarce can spare them.

Clo. Still, I swear I love you.

Imo. If you but said so, 'twere as deep with me: [still
If you swear still, your recompense is
That I regard it not.

Clo. This is no answer.

Imo. But that you shall not say I yield, being silent,
I would not speak. I pray you, spare me: faith,
I shall unfold equal discourtesy

To your best kindness: one of your great knowing [ance.
Should learn, being taught, forbear-
Clo. To leave you in your madness, 'twere my sin:
I will not.
Imo. Fools are not mad folks.
Clo. Do you call me fool?
Imo. As I am mad, I do: [mad:
If you'll be patient, I'll no more be
That cures us both. I am much sorry, sir,
You put me to forget a lady's manners,
By being so verbal: and learn now, for all, [pronounce,
That I, which know my heart, do here
By the very truth of it, I care not for you;
And am so near the lack of charity—
To accuse myself—I hate you; which I had rather
You felt than make 't my boast.
Clo. You sin against
Obedience, which you owe your father. For [base wretch,
The contract you pretend with that
One bred of alms and foster'd with cold dishes, [tract, none:
With scraps o' the court, it is no con-
And though it be allow'd in meaner parties— [their souls,
Yet who than he more mean?—to knit
On whom there is no more dependency
But brats and beggary, in self-figured knot; [ment by
Yet you are curb'd from that enlarge-
The consequence o' the crown; and must not soil [slave,
The precious note of it with a base
A hilding for a livery, a squire's cloth,
A pantler, not so eminent.
Imo. Profane fellow!
Wert thou the son of Jupiter and no more [too base
But what art thou besides, thou wert
To be his groom: thou wert dignified enough, [made
Even to the point of envy, if 'twere
Comparative for your virtues, to be styled [and hated
The under-hangman of his kingdom;
For being preferr'd so well.
Clo. The south-fog rot him!
Imo. He never can meet more mischance than come
To be but named of thee. His meanest garment,
That ever hath but clipp'd his body, is dearer
In my respect than all the hairs above thee, [now, Pisanio!
Were they all made such men.—How

Enter PISANIO.

Clo. 'His garment'! Now, the devil— [thee presently—
Imo. To Dorothy my woman hie
Clo. 'His garment'!
Imo. I am spirited with a fool;
Frighted and anger'd worse: go bid my woman
Search for a jewel that too casually
Hath left mine arm: it was thy master's: 'shrew me
If I would lose it for a revenue
Of any king's in Europe. I do think
I saw't this morning: confident I am
Last night 'twas on mine arm; I kiss'd it:
I hope it be not gone to tell my lord
That I kiss aught but he.
Pis. 'Twill not be lost.
Imo. I hope so: go and search.
[Exit PISANIO.
Clo. You have abused me:—
'His meanest garment'!
Imo. Ay; I said so, sir.
If you will make 't an action, call witness to 't.
Clo. I will inform your father.
Imo. Your mother too:
She 's my good lady, and will conceive, I hope, [sir,
But the worst of me. So, I leave you,
To the worst of discontent. [Exit.
Clo. I'll be revenged:—
'His meanest garment'!—Well. [Exit.

SCENE IV.—Rome. A Room in PHILARIO'S House.

Enter POSTHUMUS and PHILARIO.

Post. Fear it not, sir: I would I were so sure [our
To win the king as I am bold her honWill remain hers. [to him?
Phi. What means do you make
Post. Not any; but abide the change of time; [and wish
Quake in the present winter's state,
That warmer days would come: in these sear'd hopes,
I barely gratify your love; they failing,
I must die much your debtor.

Phi. Your very goodness, and your company,
O'erpays all I can do. By this, your king
Hath heard of great Augustus: Caius Lucius
Will do 's commission throughly: and I think
He'll grant the tribute, send the arrearages,
Or look upon our Romans, whose remembrance
Is yet fresh in their grief.

Post. I do believe,
Statist though I am none, nor like to be,
That this will prove a war; and you shall hear
The legions now in Gallia sooner landed
In our not-fearing Britain than have tidings
Of any penny tribute paid. Our countrymen
Are men more order'd than when Julius Cæsar
Smiled at their lack of skill, but found their courage
Worthy his frowning at: their discipline,
Now mingled with their courages, will make known
To their approvers they are people such
That mend upon the world.

Enter Iachimo.

Phi. See! Iachimo!

Post. The swiftest harts have posted you by land;
And winds of all the corners kiss'd your sails,
To make your vessel nimble.

Phi. Welcome, sir.

Post. I hope the briefness of your answer made
The speediness of your return.

Iach. Your lady
Is one of the fairest that I have look'd upon.

Post. And therewithal the best; or let her beauty
Look through a casement to allure false hearts,
And be false with them.

Iach. Here are letters for you.

Post. Their tenour good, I trust.

Iach. 'Tis very like.

Phi. Was Caius Lucius in the Britain court
When you were there?

Iach. He was expected then,
But not approach'd.

Post. All is well yet.
Sparkles this stone as it was wont? or is 't not Too dull for your good wearing?

Iach. If I had lost it,
I should have lost the worth of it in gold.
I'll make a journey twice as far, to enjoy
A second night of such sweet shortness which
Was mine in Britain; for the ring is won.

Post. The stone 's too hard to come by.

Iach. Not a whit,
Your lady being so easy.

Post. Make not, sir,
Your loss your sport: I hope you know that we Must not continue friends.

Iach. Good sir, we must,
If you keep covenant. Had I not brought
The knowledge of your mistress home,
We were to question further: but I now
Profess myself the winner of her honour,
Together with your ring; and not the wronger
Of her or you, having proceeded but
By both your wills.

Post. If you can make 't apparent
That you have tasted her in bed, my hand
And ring is yours; if not, the foul opinion
You had of her pure honour gains or loses
Your sword, or mine; or masterless leaves both
To who shall find them.

Iach. Sir, my circumstances,
Being so near the truth as I will make them,
Must first induce you to believe: whose strength
I will confirm with oath; which, I doubt not,
You'll give me leave to spare, when you shall find
You need it not.

Post. Proceed.

Iach. First, her bedchamber,—
Where, I confess, I slept not, but profess
Had that was well worth watching—it was hang'd
With tapestry of silk and silver; the story
Proud Cleopatra, when she met her Roman,
And Cydnus swell'd above the banks, or for
The press of boats or pride: a piece of work
So bravely done, so rich, that it did strive
In workmanship and value; which I wonder'd
Could be so rarely and exactly wrought,
Since the true life on 't was—

Post. This is true;
And this you might have heard of here, by me,
Or by some other.
Iach. More particulars
Must justify my knowledge.
Post. So they must,
Or do your honour injury.
Iach. The chimney
Is south the chamber; and the chimney-piece [figures
Chaste Dian bathing: never saw I
So likely to report themselves: the cutter [went her,
Was as another Nature, dumb; outMotion and breath left out.
Post. This is a thing
Which you might from relation likewise reap;
Being, as it is, much spoke of.
Iach. The roof o' the chamber
With golden cherubins is fretted: her andirons— [Cupids
I had forgot them—were two winking
Of silver, each on one foot standing, nicely
Depending on their brands.
Post. This is her honour!
Let it be granted you have seen all this —and praise [description
Be given to your remembrance—the
Of what is in her chamber nothing saves
The wager you have laid.
Iach. Then, if you can,
[Showing the Bracelet.
Be pale: I beg but leave to air this jewel; see! [married
And now 'tis up again: it must be
To that your diamond; I'll keep them.
Post. Jove!
Once more let me behold it: is it that
Which I left with her?
Iach. Sir,—I thank her—that:
She stripp'd it from her arm; I see her yet;
Her pretty action did outsell her gift,
And yet enrich'd it too: she gave it me, and said
She prized it once.
Post. May be she pluck'd it off
To send it me. [she?
Iach. She writes so to you, doth
Post. O, no, no, no! 'tis true. Here, take this too; [Gives the Ring.
It is a basilisk unto mine eye,
Kills me to look on 't. Let there be no honour
Where there is beauty; truth, where semblance; love,
Where there 's another man: the vows of women [are made,
Of no more bondage be, to where they
Than they are to their virtues; which is nothing.
O, above measure false!
Phi. Have patience, sir,
And take your ring again; 'tis not yet won:
It may be probable she lost it; or
Who knows if one of her women, being corrupted,
Hath stol'n it from her?
Post. Very true;
And so, I hope, he came by 't.—Back my ring: [her,
Render to me some corporal sign about
More evident than this; for this was stol'n. [arm.
Iach. By Jupiter, I had it from her
Post. Hark you, he swears; by Jupiter he swears.
'Tis true:—nay, keep the ring—'tis true: I am sure [are
She would not lose it: her attendants
All sworn and honourable:—they induced to steal it!
And by a stranger!—No, he hath enjoy'd her:
The cognizance of her incontinency
Is this: she hath bought the name of whore thus dearly. [of hell
There, take thy hire; and all the fiends
Divide themselves between you!
Phi. Sir, be patient:
This is not strong enough to be believed
Of one persuaded well of—
Post. Never talk on 't;
She hath been colted by him.
Iach. If you seek
For further satisfying, under her breast—
Worthy the pressing—lies a mole, right proud [life,
Of that most delicate lodging: by my
I kiss'd it; and it gave me present hunger [remember
To feed again, though full. You do
This stain upon her?
Post. Ay, and it doth confirm
Another stain, as big as hell can hold,
Were there no more but it.
Iach. Will you hear more?
Post. Spare your arithmetic; never count the turns;
Once, and a million!

Iach. I'll be sworn,—
Post. No swearing.
If you will swear you have not done't, you lie;
And I will kill thee if thou dost deny
Thou hast made me cuckold.
Iach. I will deny nothing.
Post. O, that I had her here, to tear her limb-meal! [before
I will go there and do't; i' the court;
Her father:—I'll do something—[Exit.
Phi. Quite besides
The government of patience!—You have won: [present wrath
Let 's follow him, and pervert the
He hath against himself.
Iach. With all my heart. [Exeunt.

SCENE V.—The Same. Another Room in PHILARIO'S House.

Enter POSTHUMUS.

Post. Is there no way for men to be, but women [tards;
Must be half-workers? We are all bas-
And that most venerable man which I
Did call my father, was I know not where [with his tools
When I was stamp'd; some coiner
Made me a counterfeit: yet my mother seem'd [wife
The Dian of that time: so doth my
The nonpareil of this. O, vengeance, vengeance! [strain'd,
Me of my lawful pleasure she re-
And pray'd me oft forbearance; did it with
A pudency so rosy the sweet view on't
Might well have warm'd old Saturn; that I thought her
As chaste as unsunn'd snow. O, all the devils! [was't not?—
This yellow Iachimo, in an hour,—
Or less,—at first?—perchance he spoke not, but, [one,
Like a full-acorn'd boar, a German
Cried 'O!' and mounted; found no opposition [and she
But what he look'd for should oppose
Should from encounter guard. Could I find out [no motion
The woman's part in me! For there 's
That tends to vice in man, but I affirm
It is the woman's part: be it lying, note it, [ing, hers;
The woman's; flattering, hers; deceiv-
Lust and rank thoughts, hers, hers; revenges, hers; [disdain,
Ambitions, covetings, change of prides,
Nice longings, slanders, mutability,
All faults that may be named, nay, that hell knows, [all;
Why, hers, in part or all; but rather,
For even to vice [ing still
They are not constant, but are chang-
One vice, but of a minute old, for one
Not half so old as that. I'll write against them, [greater skill
Detest them, curse them:—yet 'tis
In a true hate, to pray they have their will:
The very devils cannot plague them better. [Exit.

ACT III.

SCENE I.—Britain. A Room of State in CYMBELINE'S Palace.

Enter CYMBELINE, QUEEN, CLOTEN, and Lords, at one Door; and at another, CAIUS LUCIUS and Attendants.

Cym. Now say, what would Augustus Cæsar with us?
Luc. When Julius Cæsar, whose remembrance yet
Lives in men's eyes and will to ears and tongues [Britain
Be theme and hearing ever, was in this
And conquer'd it, Cassibelan, thine uncle,— [less
Famous in Cæsar's praises, no whit
Than in his feats deserving it—for him
And his succession granted Rome a tribute, [by thee lately
Yearly three thousand pounds; which
Is left untender'd.
Queen. And, to kill the marvel,
Shall be so ever.
Clo. There be many Cæsars,
Ere such another Julius. Britain is
A world by itself; and we will nothing pay
For wearing our own noses.
Queen. That opportunity
Which then they had to take from 's, to resume
We have again. [To the KING] Remember, sir, my liege,
The kings your ancestors; together with [which stands
The natural bravery of your isle;
As Neptune's park, ribbed and paled in

With rocks unscaleable and roaring waters; [enemies' boats,
With sands that will not bear your
But suck them up to the topmast. A kind of conquest [his brag
Cæsar made here; but made not here
Of 'Came' and 'saw' and 'overcame': with shame—
The first that ever touch'd him—he was carried
From off our coast, twice beaten; and his shipping—
Poor ignorant baubles!—on our terrible seas,
Like egg-shells moved upon their surges, crack'd [whereof
As easily 'gainst our rocks: for joy
The famed Cassibelan, who was once at point— [sar's sword,
O giglot Fortune!—to master Cæ-
Made Lud's town with rejoicing fires bright
And Britons strut with courage.

Clo. Come, there 's no more tribute to be paid: our kingdom is stronger than it was at that time; and, as I said, there is no more such Cæsars: other of them may have crooked noses; but to owe such straight arms, none.

Cym. Son, let your mother end.

Clo. We have yet many among us can gripe as hard as Cassibelan: I do not say I am one; but I have a hand. Why tribute? why should we pay tribute? If Cæsar can hide the sun from us with a blanket, or put the moon in his pocket, we will pay him tribute for light; else, sir, no more tribute, pray you now.

Cym. You must know,
Till the injurious Romans did extort
This tribute from us, we were free: Cæsar's ambition,
Which swell'd so much that it did almost stretch [colour here
The sides o' the world, against all
Did put the yoke upon 's; which to shake off [reckon
Becomes a warlike people, whom we Ourselves to be. We do say then to Cæsar, [which
Our ancestor was that Mulmutius
Ordain'd our laws; whose use the sword of Cæsar
Hath too much mangled; whose repair and franchise [good deed,
Shall, by the power we hold, be our
Though Rome be therefore angry. Mulmutius made our laws,
Who was the first of Britain which did put [call'd
His brows within a golden crown, and Himself a king.

Luc. I am sorry, Cymbeline,
That I am to pronounce Augustus Cæsar— [vants than Cæsar, that hath more kings his ser-
Thyself domestic officers—thine enemy:
Receive it from me, then: war and confusion [thee: look
In Cæsar's name pronounce I 'gainst
For fury not to be resisted. Thus defied,
I thank thee for myself.

Cym. Thou art welcome, Caius.
Thy Cæsar knighted me; my youth I spent [honour;
Much under him; of him I gather'd
Which he to seek of me again, perforce,
Behoves me keep at utterance. I am perfect [for
That the Pannonians and Dalmatians
Their liberties are now in arms; a precedent [Britons cold:
Which not to read would show the
So Cæsar shall not find them.

Luc. Let proof speak.

Clo. His majesty bids you welcome. Make pastime with us a day or two, or longer: if you seek us afterwards in other terms, you shall find us in our salt-water girdle: if you beat us out of it, it is yours; if you fall in the adventure, our crows shall fare the better for you; and there 's an end.

Luc. So, sir. [and he mine:

Cym. I know your master's pleasure,
All the remain is 'Welcome!' [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—The Same. Another Room in the Palace.

Enter PISANIO, with a letter.

Pis. How! of adultery? Wherefore write you not
What monster 's her accuser? Leonatus!
O master! what a strange infection
Is fall'n into thy ear! What false Italian, [prevail'd
As poisonous-tongued as handed, hath
On thy too ready hearing? Disloyal! No: [undergoes,
She 's punish'd for her truth; and

More goddess-like than wife-like, such assaults [master!
As would take in some virtue. O my Thy mind to her is now as low as were Thy fortunes. How! that I should murder her? [which I
Upon the love and truth and vows
Have made to thy command?—I, her?—her blood?
If it be so to do good service, never Let me be counted serviceable. How look I,
That I should seem to lack humanity
So much as this fact comes to?
[Reading.
'Do't: the letter
That I have sent her, by her own command
Shall give thee opportunity.'
O damn'd paper!
Black as the ink that 's on thee! Senseless bauble, [look'st

So virgin-like without? Lo, here she comes. [manded.
I am ignorant in what I am com-

So he wishes you all happiness, that remains loyal to his vow, and your, increasing in love,

LEONATUS POSTHUMUS.'

O, for a horse with wings! Hear'st thou, Pisanio? [me
He is at Milford-Haven: read, and tell
How far 'tis thither. If one of mean affairs
May plod it in a week, why may not I
Glide thither in a day? Then, true Pisanio,— [who long'st,—
Who long'st, like me, to see thy lord;
O, let me bate,—but not like me—yet long'st, [me;
But in a fainter kind:—O, not like
For mine 's beyond beyond—say, and speak thick,—
Love's counsellor should fill the bores of hearing, [far it is To the smothering of the sense—how
To this same blessed Milford: and by the way [as Tell me how Wales was made so happy
To inherit such a haven: but first of all, [for the gap
How we may steal from hence; and
That we shall make in time, from our hence-going
And our return, to excuse: but first, how get hence. [begot?
Why should excuse be born or ere
We'll talk of that hereafter. Prithee, speak, [ride
How many score of miles may we well
'Twixt hour and hour?

Pis. One score 'twixt sun and sun, Madam, 's enough for you: [Aside] and too much too.

Imo. Why, one that rode to 's execution, man,
Could never go so slow: I have heard of riding wagers,
Where horses have been nimbler than the sands [is foolery:—
That run i' the clock's behalf.—But this Go bid my woman feign a sickness; say
She'll home to her father: and provide me presently
A riding-suit, no costlier than would fit
A franklin's housewife.

Pis. Madam, you're best consider.

Imo. I see before me, man: nor here, nor here, [them,
Nor what ensues, but have a fog in
That I cannot look through. Away, I prithee; [say;
Do as I bid thee: there 's no more to SCENE III.—Wales. A mountainous Country, with a Cave.

Enter, from the Cave, BELARIUS; GUIDERIUS and ARVIRAGUS following.

Bel. A goodly day not to keep house, with such [boys; this gate
Whose roof 's as low as ours! Stoop, Instructs you how to adore the heavens, and bows you
To a morning's holy office: the gates of monarchs [through
Are arch'd so high that giants may jet
And keep their impious turbans on, without [fair heaven!
Good-morrow to the sun. Hail, thou
We house i' the rock, yet use thee not so hardly
As prouder livers do.
Gui. Hail, heaven!
Arv. Hail, heaven!
Bel. Now for our mountain sport: up to yond hill!
Your legs are young: I'll tread these flats. Consider, [crow,
When you above perceive me like a
That it is place which lessens and sets off; [have told you.
And you may then revolve what tales I
Of courts, of princes, of the tricks in war: [done,
This service is not service, so being
But being so allow'd: to apprehend thus, [see;
Draws us a profit from all things we
And often, to our comfort, shall we find
The sharded beetle in a safer hold
Than is the full-wing'd eagle. O, this life
Is nobler than attending for a check;
Richer than doing nothing for a brabe;
Prouder than rustling in unpaid-for silk: ['em fine,
Such gain the cap of him that makes
Yet keeps his book uncross'd: no life to ours.
Gui. Out of your proof you speak: we, poor unfledged,
Have never wing'd from view o' the nest; nor know not
What air 's from home. Haply this life is best,
If quiet life be best; sweeter to you
That have a sharper known; well corresponding [it is
With your stiff age: but unto us
A cell of ignorance; travelling a-bed;
A prison for a debtor, that not dares
To stride a limit.
Arv. What should we speak of
When we are old as you? when we shall hear
The rain and wind beat dark December, how, [course
In this our pinching cave, shall we dis-
The freezing hours away? We have seen nothing: [prey;
We are beastly; subtle as the fox for
Like warlike as the wolf for what we eat: [cage
Our valour is to chase what flies; our
We make a quire, as doth the prison'd bird,
And sing our bondage freely.
Bel. How you speak!
Did you but know the city's usuries,
And felt them knowingly: the art o' the court, [to climb
As hard to leave as keep; whose top
Is certain falling, or so slippery that
The fear 's as bad as falling: the toil o' the war, [danger
A pain that only seems to seek out
I' the name of fame and honour; which dies i' the search,
And hath as oft a slanderous epitaph
As record of fair act; nay, many times,
Doth ill deserve by doing well; what 's worse, [this story
Must curtsy at the censure:—O boys,
The world may read in me: my body 's mark'd [was once
With Roman swords, and my report
First with the best of note: Cymbeline loved me; [my name
And when a soldier was the theme,
Was not far off: then was I as a tree
Whose boughs did bend with fruit: but in one night, [will,
A storm, or robbery, call it what you
Shook down my mellow hangings, nay, my leaves,
And left me bare to weather.
Gui. Uncertain favour!
Bel. My fault being nothing, as I have told you oft,
But that two villains, whose false oaths prevail'd [Cymbeline
Before my perfect honour, swore to
I was confederate with the Romans: so

Follow'd my banishment; and this twenty years
This rock and these demesnes have been my world; [paid
Where I have lived at honest freedom,
More pious debts to heaven than in all
The fore-end of my time. But up to the mountains! [strikes
This is not hunters' language: he that
The venison first shall be the lord o' the feast;
To him the other two shall minister;
And we will fear no poison, which attends [you in the valleys.
In place of greater state. I'll meet
[Exeunt GUIDERIUS and ARVIRAGUS.
How hard it is to hide the sparks of nature! [the king;
These boys know little they are sons to
Nor Cymbeline dreams that they are alive.
They think they are mine; and though train'd up thus meanly
I' the cave wherein they bow, their thoughts do hit
The roofs of palaces, and nature prompts them [much
In simple and low things to prince it
Beyond the trick of others. This Polydore, [whom
The heir of Cymbeline and Britain,
The king his father call'd Guiderius,—Jove! [tell
When on my three-foot stool I sit and
The warlike feats I have done, his spirits fly out [fell,
Into my story: say 'Thus mine enemy
And thus I set my foot on 's neck;' even then [he sweats,
The princely blood flows in his cheek,
Strains his young nerves, and puts himself in posture
That acts my words. The younger brother, Cadwal,
Once Arviragus, in as like a figure,
Strikes life into my speech and shows much more [is roused!—
His own conceiving.—Hark, the game
O Cymbeline! heaven and my conscience knows [whereon,
Thou didst unjustly banish me:
At three and two years old, I stole these babes;
Thinking to bar thee of succession, as
Thou reft'st me of my lands. Euriphile,
Thou wast their nurse; they took thee for their mother,
And every day do honour to her grave:
Myself, Belarius, that am Morgan call'd,
They take for natural father. The game is up. [Exit.

SCENE IV.—The Same. Country near Milford-Haven.

Enter PISANIO and IMOGEN.

Imo. Thou told'st me, when we came from horse, the place
Was near at hand: ne'er long'd my mother so
To see me first, as I have now. Pisanio! man! [mind,
Where is Posthumus? What is in thy
That makes thee stare thus? Wherefore breaks that sigh
From the inward of thee? One, but painted thus,
Would be interpreted a thing perplex'd
Beyond self-explication: put thyself
Into a 'haviour of less fear, ere wildness
Vanquish my staider senses. What 's the matter? [with
Why tender'st thou that paper to me,
A look untender? If 't be summer news, [need'st
Smile to 't before; if winterly, thou
But keep that countenance still.—My husband's hand!
That drug-damn'd Italy hath outcraftied him,
And he 's at some hard point.—Speak, man; thy tongue [read
May take off some extremity, which to
Would be even mortal to me.
Pis. Please you, read;
And you shall find me, wretched man, a thing
The most disdain'd of Fortune.
Imo. [Reads.]

'Thy mistress, Pisanio, hath played the strumpet in my bed; the testimonies whereof lie bleeding in me. I speak not out of weak surmises; but from proof as strong as my grief, and as certain as I expect my revenge. That part thou, Pisanio, must act for me, if thy faith be not tainted with the breach of hers. Let thine own hands take away her life: I shall give thee opportunity at Milford-Haven. She hath my letter for the purpose: where, if thou fear to strike, and to make me certain it is done, thou art the pandar to her dishonour, and equally to me disloyal.'

Pis. What shall I need to draw my sword? the paper

Hath cut her throat already. No, 'tis slander ; [whose tongue
Whose edge is sharper than the sword ; Outvenoms all the worms of Nile ; whose breath [belie
Rides on the posting winds, and doth All corners of the world : kings, queens, and states, [grave

To lie in watch there, and to think on To weep 'twixt clock and clock ? if sleep charge nature, [him,
To break it with a fearful dream of And cry myself awake ? that 's false to 's bed, is it ?

Pis. Alas, good lady !

Imo. I false ! Thy conscience witness : Iachimo,
Thou didst accuse him of incontinency ;
Thou then look'dst like a villain ; now, methinks, [of Italy
Thy favour 's good enough. Some jay Whose mother was her painting, hath betray'd him : [fashion ;

Pis. Good madam, hear me.

Imo. True honest men being heard, like false Æneas,
Were in his time thought false ; and Sinon's weeping [pity
Did scandal many a holy tear ; took From most true wretchedness : so thou, Posthumus, [men ;
Wilt lay the leaven on all proper Goodly and gallant shall be false and perjured [thou honest :
From thy great fail.—Come, fellow, be Do thou thy master's bidding. When thou see'st him,
A little witness my obedience. Look ! I draw the sword myself : take it, and hit [heart :

Thou mayst be valiant in a better But now thou seem'st a coward.

Pis. Hence, vile instrument !
Thou shalt not damn my hand.

Imo. Why, I must die ;
And if I do not by thy hand, thou art
No servant of thy master's. Against self-slaughter
There is a prohibition so divine
That cravens my weak hand. Come, here 's my heart :
Something 's afore 't. Soft, soft ! we'll no defence ; [here ?
Obedient as the scabbard. What is The scriptures of the loyal Leonatus,
All turn'd to heresy ? Away, away,
Corrupters of my faith ! you shall no more [may poor fools

Thou art too slow to do thy master's When I desire it too.

Pis. O gracious lady,
Since I received command to do this business
I have not slept one wink.

Imo. Do 't, and to bed then.

Pis. I'll wake mine eyeballs blind first.

Imo. Wherefore then
Didst undertake it ? Why hast thou abused [place ?
So many miles with a pretence ? this

Mine action and thine own? our horses' labour? [court,
The time inviting thee? the perturb'd
For my being absent? whereunto I never [so far,
Purpose return. Why hast thou gone
To be unbent when thou hast ta'en thy stand,
The elected deer before thee?
Pis. But to win time
To lose so bad employment; in the which [lady,
I have consider'd of a course. Good
Hear me with patience. [speak:
Imo. Talk thy tongue weary;
I have heard I am a strumpet; and mine ear, [ter wound,
Therein false struck, can take no grea-
Nor tent to bottom that. But speak.
Pis. Then, madam,
I thought you would not back again.
Imo. Most like;
Bringing me here to kill me.
Pis. Not so, neither:
But if I were as wise as honest, then
My purpose would prove well. It cannot be
But that my master is abused: [art,
Some villain, ay, and singular in his
Hath done you both this cursed injury.
Imo. Some Roman courtezan.
Pis. No, on my life.
I'll give but notice you are dead, and send him [manded
Some bloody sign of it; for 'tis com-
I should do so: you shall be miss'd at court,
And that will well confirm it.
Imo. Why, good fellow,
What shall I do the while? where bide?
how live? [am
Or in my life what comfort, when I
Dead to my husband?
Pis. If you'll back to the court—
Imo. No court, no father; nor no more ado [nothing,
With that harsh, ignoble, simple
That Cloten, whose love-suit hath been to me
As fearful as a siege.
Pis. If not at court,
Then not in Britain must you bide.
Imo. Where then?
Hath Britain all the sun that shines?
Day, night,
Are they not but in Britain? I' the world's volume
Our Britain seems as of it, but not in it;
In a great pool a swan's nest: prithee, think
There 's livers out of Britain.
Pis. I am most glad
You think of other place. The ambassador, [Haven
Lucius the Roman, comes to Milford-
To-morrow: now, if you could wear a mind [guise
Dark as your fortune is, and but dis-
That which, to appear itself, must not

But by self-danger, you should tread a Privy and full of view; yea, haply, near [at least
The residence of Posthumus; so nigh
That though his actions were not visible, yet [your ear
Report should render him hourly to
As truly as he moves.
Imo. O, for such means,
Though peril to my modesty, not death on 't,
I would adventure!
Pis. Well then, here 's the point:
You must forget to be a woman;
change [niceness—
Command into obedience; fear and
The handmaids of all women, or, more truly, [courage;
Woman its pretty self—into a waggish
Ready in gibes, quick-answer'd, saucy, and [must
As quarrelous as the weasel; nay, you
Forget that rarest treasure of your cheek,
Exposing it—but, O, the harder heart!
Alack, no remedy!—to the greedy touch
Of common-kissing Titan; and forget
Your laboursome and dainty trims, wherein
You made great Juno angry.
Imo. Nay, be brief:
I see into thy end, and am almost
A man already. [one.
Pis. First, make yourself but like
Fore-thinking this, I have already fit—
'Tis in my cloak-bag—doublet, hat, hose, all [their serving,

Present yourself, desire his service, tell him

Wherein you're happy,—which you'll make him know,
If that his head have ear in music,—doubtless [honourable,
With joy he will embrace you; for he's
And, doubling that, most holy. Your means abroad, [fail
You have me, rich; and I will never
Beginning nor supplyment.
Imo. Thou art all the comfort
The gods will diet me with. Prithee, away: [we'll even
There 's more to be consider'd; but
All that good time will give us: this attempt
I am soldier to, and will abide it with
A prince's courage. Away, I prithee.
Pis. Well, madam, we must take a short farewell,
Lest, being miss'd, I be suspected of
Your carriage from the court. My noble mistress, [queen:
Here is a box; I had it from the SCENE V.—Britain. A Room in CYMBELINE'S Palace.

Enter CYMBELINE, QUEEN, CLOTEN, LUCIUS, and Lords.

Cym. Thus far; and so farewell.
Luc. Thanks, royal sir.
My emperor hath wrote; I must from hence; [ye
And am right sorry that I must report
My master's enemy.
Cym. Our subjects, sir,
Will not endure his yoke; and for ourself [must needs
To show less sovereignty than they,
Appear unkinglike.
Luc. So, sir: I desire of you
A conduct over-land to Milford-Haven.—
Madam, all joy befall your grace!
Queen. And you!
Cym. My lords, you are appointed for that office;
The due of honour in no point omit.
So farewell, noble Lucius. [lord.
Luc. [To CLOTEN.] Your hand, my
Clo. Receive it friendly; but from this time forth
I wear it as your enemy.
Luc. Sir, the event
Is yet to name the winner: fare you well. [good my lords,
Cym. Leave not the worthy Lucius,
Till he have cross'd the Severn. Happiness!
[Exeunt LUCIUS and Lords.
Queen. He goes hence frowning: but it honours us
That we have given him cause.
Clo. 'Tis all the better;
Your valiant Britons have their wishes in it. [the emperor
Cym. Lucius hath wrote already to
How it goes here. It fits us therefore ripely [readiness:
Our chariots and our horsemen be in
The powers that he already hath in Gallia [whence he moves
Will soon be drawn to head, from His war for Britain.
Queen. 'Tis not sleepy business;
But must be look'd to speedily and strongly. [be thus
Cym. Our expectation that it would
Hath made us forward. But, my gentle queen, [not appear'd
Where is our daughter? She hath
Before the Roman, nor to us hath tender'd
The duty of the day: she looks us like
A thing more made of malice than of duty: [for
We have noted it.—Call her before us;
We have been too slight in sufferance.
[Exit an Attendant.
Queen. Royal sir,
Since the exile of Posthumus, most retired [my lord,
Hath her life been; the cure whereof,
'Tis time must do. Beseech your majesty, [a lady
Forbear sharp speeches to her: she 's
So tender of rebukes that words are strokes
And strokes death to her.

Re-enter Attendant.

Cym. Where is she, sir? How
Can her contempt be answer'd?
Attend. Please you, sir,

Her chambers are all lock'd; and there 's no answer
That will be given to the loud'st noise
we make. [to visit her,
Queen. My lord, when last I went
She pray'd me to excuse her keeping close;
Whereto constrain'd by her infirmity,
She should that duty leave unpaid to you, [this
Which daily she was bound to proffer:
She wish'd me to make known; but our great court
Made me to blame in memory.
Cym. Her doors lock'd?
Not seen of late? Grant, heavens, that which I fear
Prove false! [Exit.
Queen. Son, I say, follow the king.
Clo. That man of hers, Pisanio, her old servant,
I have not seen these two days.
Queen. Go, look after.
[Exit CLOTEN.
Pisanio, thou that stand'st so for believes [her,

It is a thing most precious. But for Where is she gone? Haply, despair hath seized her;
Or, wing'd with fervour of her love,
she 's flown
To her desired Posthumus: gone she is
To death or to dishonour; and my end
Can make good use of either: she being down, [crown.
I have the placing of the British

day! [Exit.
Clo. I love and hate her: for she 's fair and royal,

I will conclude to hate her, nay, indeed,
To be revenged upon her. For when

Enter PISANIO.

Who is here? What, are you packing, sirrah? [Villain,
Come hither: ah, you precious pandar!
Where is thy lady? In a word; or else
Thou art straightway with the fiends.
Pis. O, good my lord!
Clo. Where is thy lady? or, by Jupiter,—
I will not ask again. Close villain,
I'll have this secret from thy heart, or rip [humus?
Thy heart to find it. Is she with Post-
From whose so many weights of base-ness cannot
A dram of worth be drawn.
Pis. Alas, my lord,
How can she be with him? When was she miss'd?
He is in Rome.
Clo. Where is she, sir? Come nearer;
No further halting: satisfy me home
What is become of her.
Pis. O, my all-worthy lord!
Clo. All-worthy villain!
Discover where thy mistress is at once,
At the next word: no more of 'worthy lord!'
Speak, or thy silence on the instant is Thy condemnation and thy death.
Pis. Then, sir,
This paper is the history of my knowledge
Touching her flight.
[Presenting a letter.
Clo. Let 's see 't. I will pursue her
Even to Augustus' throne.
Pis. [Aside.] Or this, or perish.
She 's far enough; and what he learns by this
May prove his travel, not her danger.
Clo. Hum!
Pis. [Aside.] I'll write to my lord
she 's dead. O Imogen,
Safe mayst thou wander, safe return
again!

Clo. Sirrah, is this letter true?

Pis. Sir, as I think.

Clo. It is Posthumus' hand; I know 't. Sirrah, if thou wouldst not be a villain, but do me true service, undergo those employments wherein I should have cause to use thee with a serious industry, that is, what villany soe'er I bid thee do, to perform it directly and truly, I would think thee an honest man: thou shouldst neither want my means for thy relief, nor my voice for thy preferment.

Pis. Well, my good lord.

Clo. Wilt thou serve me? For since patiently and constantly thou hast stuck to the bare fortune of that beggar Posthumus, thou canst not, in the course of gratitude, but be a diligent follower of mine. Wilt thou serve me?

Pis. Sir, I will.

Clo. Give me thy hand; here 's my purse. Hast any of thy late master's garments in thy possession?

Pis. I have, my lord, at my lodging, the same suit he wore when he took leave of my lady and mistress.

Clo. The first service thou dost me, fetch that suit hither: let it be thy first service; go.

Pis. I shall, my lord. [Exit.

Clo. Meet thee at Milford-Haven!—I forgot to ask him one thing; I'll remember 't anon:—even there, thou villain Posthumus, will I kill thee. I would these garments were come. She said upon a time—the bitterness of it I now belch from my heart—that she held the very garment of Posthumus in more respect than my noble and natural person, together with the adornment of my qualities. With that suit upon my back, will I ravish her: first kill him, and in her eyes; there shall she see my valour, which will then be a torment to her contempt. He on the ground, my speech of insultment ended on his dead body, and when my lust hath dined,—which, as I say, to vex her, I will execute in the clothes that she so praised,—to the court I'll knock her back, foot her home again. She hath despised me rejoicingly, and I'll be merry in my revenge.

Re-enter PISANIO, with the clothes.

Be those the garments?

Pis. Ay, my noble lord.

Clo. How long is't since she went to Milford-Haven?

Pis. She can scarce be there yet.

Clo. Bring this apparel to my chamber; that is the second thing that I have commanded thee: the third is, that thou wilt be a voluntary mute to my design. Be but duteous, and true preferment shall tender itself to thee. My revenge is now at Milford: would I had wings to follow it! Come, and be true. [Exit.

Pis. Thou bidd'st me to my loss:
for true to thee [be,
Were to prove false, which I will never
To him that is most true. To Milford go, [Flow, flow,
And find not her whom thou pursuest.
You heavenly blessings, on her! This fool's speed
Be cross'd with slowness; labour be his meed! [Exit.

SCENE VI.—Wales. Before the Cave of BELARIUS.

Enter IMOGEN, in Boy's clothes.

Imo. I see a man's life is a tedious one: [nights together
I have tired myself; and for two
Have made the ground my bed. I should be sick, [Milford,
But that my resolution helps me.
When from the mountain-top Pisanio show'd thee, [think Thou wast within a ken: O Jove! I
Foundations fly the wretched; such, I mean, [beggars told me
Where they should be relieved. Two
I could not miss my way: will poor folks lie, ['tis
That have afflictions on them, knowing
A punishment or trial? Yes; no wonder, [lapse in fulness
When rich ones scarce tell true: to
Is sorer than to lie for need; and falsehood [dear lord!
Is worse in kings than beggars. My Thou art one o' the false ones: now I think on thee, [was My hunger 's gone; but even before, I

Of hardiness is mother. Ho! who 's If any thing that 's civil, speak; if savage, [then I'll enter.
Take or lend.—Ho!—No answer? Best draw my sword; and if mine enemy
But fear the sword like me, he'll scarcely look on 't.
Such a foe, good heavens! [Enters the Cave.

Enter Belarius, Guiderius, and Arviragus.

Bel. You, Polydore, have proved best woodman, and [I
Are master of the feast: Cadwal and Will play the cook and servant; 'tis our match: [die,
The sweat of industry would dry and But for the end it works to. Come; our stomachs [weariness
Will make what's homely savoury: Can snore upon the flint, when resty sloth [peace be here, Finds the down pillow hard. Now Poor house, that keep'st thyself!
Gui. I am throughly weary.
Arv. I am weak with toil, yet strong in appetite.
Gui. There is cold meat i' the cave; we'll browse on that,
Whilst what we have kill'd be cook'd.
Bel. [Looking into the Cave.] Stay; come not in. [think
But that it eats our victuals, I should Here were a fairy.
Gui. What's the matter, sir?
Bel. By Jupiter, an angel! or, if not, An earthly paragon! Behold divineness No elder than a boy!

Re-enter, from the Cave, Imogen.

Imo. Good masters, harm me not: Before I enter'd here, I call'd; and thought
To have begg'd or bought what I have took: good troth,
I have stol'n nought; nor would not, though I had found
Gold strew'd o' the floor. Here 's money for my meat:
I would have left it on the board so soon As I had made my meal, and parted With prayers for the provider.
Gui. Money, youth?
Arv. All gold and silver rather turn to dirt!
As 'tis no better reckon'd, but of those Who worship dirty gods.
Imo. I see you're angry: Know, if you kill me for my fault, I should Have died had I not made it.
Bel. Whither bound?
Imo. To Milford-Haven.
Bel. What 's your name? [who
Imo. Fidele, sir. I have a kinsman Is bound for Italy; he embark'd at Milford; [with hunger,
To whom being going, almost spent I am fall'n in this offence.
Bel. Prithee, fair youth, Think us no churls, nor measure our good minds [encounter'd!
By this rude place we live in. Well 'Tis almost night: you shall have better cheer [and eat it.
Ere you depart; and thanks to stay Boys, bid him welcome.
Gui. Were you a woman, youth, I should woo hard but be your groom. In honesty,
I bid for you as I'd buy.
Arv. I'll make 't my comfort He is a man; I'll love him as my brother: [him
And such a welcome as I'd give to After long absence, such as yours: most welcome! [friends.
Be sprightly, for you fall 'mongst Imo. 'Mongst friends,

Gui. Pray, draw near.

Arv. The night to the owl and morn to the lark less welcome.

Imo. Thanks, sir.

Arv. I pray, draw near.
[Exeunt.

SCENE VII.—Rome. A Public Place.

Enter two Senators and Tribunes.

First Sen. This is the tenour of the emperor's writ: [action

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—Wales. The Forest, near the Cave of BELARIUS.

Enter CLOTEN.

Clo. I am near to the place where they should meet, if Pisanio have mapped it truly. How fit his garments serve me! Why should his mistress, who was made by him that made the tailor, not be fit too? the rather—saving reverence of the word—for 'tis said a woman's fitness comes by fits. Therein I must play the workman. I dare speak it to myself—for it is not vain-glory for a man and his glass to confer in his own chamber—I mean, the lines of my body are as well drawn as his; no less young, more strong, not beneath him in fortunes, beyond him in the advantage of the time, above him in birth, alike conversant in general services, and more remarkable in single oppositions: yet this imperceiverant thing loves him in my despite. What mortality is! Posthumus, thy head, which now is growing upon thy shoulders, shall within this hour be off; thy mistress enforced; thy garments cut to pieces before thy face: and all this done, spurn her home to her father; who may haply be a little angry for my so rough usage; but my mother, having power of his testiness, shall turn all into my commendations. My horse is tied up safe: out, sword, and to a sore purpose! Fortune, put them into my hand! This is the very description of their meeting-place; and the fellow dares not deceive me. [Exit.

SCENE II.—The Same. Before the Cave of BELARIUS.

Enter, from the Cave, BELARIUS, GUIDERIUS, ARVIRAGUS, and IMOGEN.

Bel. [To IMOGEN.] You are not well: remain here in the cave;
We'll come to you after hunting.

Arv. [To IMOGEN.] Brother, stay here:
Are we not brothers? [be;

Imo. So man and man should

As I do love my father.
Bel. What! how! how!
Arv. If it be sin to say so, sir, I yoke me [why
In my good brother's fault: I know not
I love this youth; and I have heard you say, [bier at door,
Love's reason 's without reason: the
And a demand who is 't shall die, I'd say
'My father, not this youth.'
Bel. [Aside.] O noble strain!
O worthiness of nature! breed of greatness! [things sire base:
Cowards father cowards and base
Nature hath meal and bran, contempt and grace. [should be,
I'm not their father; yet who this
Doth miracle itself, loved before me.—
'Tis the ninth hour o' the morn.
Arv. Brother, farewell.
Imo. I wish ye sport.
Arv. You health. [To BELARIUS] So please you, sir.
Imo. [Aside.] These are kind creatures. Gods, what lies I have heard! [court:
Our courtiers say all 's savage but at
Experience, O, thou disprovest report!
The imperious seas breed monsters; for the dish
Poor tributary rivers as sweet fish.
I am sick still, heart-sick. Pisanio,
I'll now taste of thy drug.
[Swallows some.
Gui. I could not stir him:
He said he was gentle, but unfortunate;
Dishonestly afflicted, but yet honest.
Arv. Thus did he answer me: yet said, hereafter
I might know more.
Bel. To the field, to the field!
[To IMOGEN] We'll leave you for this time: go in and rest.
Arv. We'll not be long away.
Bel. Pray, be not sick,
For you must be our housewife.
Imo. Well or ill,
I am bound to you.
Bel. And shalt be ever.
[Exit IMOGEN, to the Cave.
This youth, howe'er distress'd, appears he hath had Good ancestors.
Arv. How angel-like he sings!
Gui. But his neat cookery! he cut our roots in characters,
And sauced our broths, as Juno had been sick,
And he her dieter.
Arv. Nobly he yokes
A smiling with a sigh, as if the sigh
Was that it was, for not being such a smile; [would fly
The smile mocking the sigh, that it
From so divine a temple, to commix
With winds that sailors rail at.
Gui. I do note
That grief and patience, rooted in him both,
Mingle their spurs together.
Arv. Grow, patience!
And let the stinking elder, grief, untwine [vine!
His perishing root with the increasing
Bel. It is great morning. Come, away!—Who 's there?

Enter CLOTEN.

Clo. I cannot find those runagates; that villain
Hath mock'd me. I am faint.
Bel. 'Those runagates'!
Means he not us? I partly know him; 'tis [some ambush.
Cloten, the son o' the queen. I fear
I saw him not these many years, and yet [laws: hence!
I know 'tis he. We are held as out-
Gui. He is but one: you and my brother search [away;
What companies are near: pray you,
Let me alone with him.
[Exeunt BELARIUS and ARVIRAGUS.
Clo. Soft! What are you
That fly me thus? some villain mountaineers? [art thou?
I have heard of such. What slave
Gui. A thing

More slavish did I ne'er than answering
A slave without a knock.
Clo. Thou art a robber,
A law-breaker, a villain: yield thee, thief.
Gui. To who? to thee? What art thou? Have not I [big?
An arm as big as thine? a heart as
Thy words, I grant, are bigger; for I wear not [thou art,
My dagger in my mouth. Say what
Why I should yield to thee?
Clo. Thou villain base,
Know'st me not by my clothes?
Gui. No, nor thy tailor, rascal,
Who is thy grandfather: he made those clothes,
Which, as it seems, make thee.
Clo. Thou precious varlet,
My tailor made them not.
Gui. Hence, then, and thank
The man that gave them thee. Thou art some fool;
I am loth to beat thee.
Clo. Thou injurious thief,
Hear but my name, and tremble.
Gui. What 's thy name?
Clo. Cloten, thou villain.
Gui. Cloten, thou double villain, be thy name,
I cannot tremble at it: were it Toad, or Adder, Spider,
'Twould move me sooner.
Clo. To thy further fear,
Nay, to thy mere confusion, thou shalt know
I'm son to the queen.
Gui. I'm sorry for 't; not seeming
So worthy as thy birth.
Clo. Art not afeard?
Gui. Those that I reverence those I fear, the wise:
At fools I laugh, not fear them.
Clo. Die the death:
When I have slain thee with my proper hand, [hence,
I'll follow those that even now fled
And on the gates of Lud's town set your heads:
Yield, rustic mountaineer.
[Exeunt, fighting.

Re-enter BELARIUS and ARVIRAGUS.

Bel. No companies abroad?
Arv. None in the world: you did mistake him, sure.
Bel. I cannot tell: long is it since I saw him, [lines of favour
But time hath nothing blurr'd those
Which then he wore; the snatches in his voice, [am absolute
And burst of speaking, were as his: I 'Twas very Cloten.
Arv. In this place we left them:
I wish my brother make good time with him,
You say he is so fell.
Bel. Being scarce made up,
I mean, to man, he had not apprehension [ment
Of roaring terrors; for defect of judg-
Is oft the cease of fear. But see, thy brother.

Re-enter GUIDERIUS, with CLOTEN'S head.

Gui. This Cloten was a fool, an empty purse; [cules
There was no money in 't: not Her-
Could have knock'd out his brains, for he had none: [borne
Yet I not doing this, the fool had
My head as I do his.
Bel. What hast thou done?
Gui. I am perfect what: cut off one Cloten's head,
Son to the queen, after his own report;
Who call'd me traitor, mountaineer; and swore [us in,
With his own single hand he'd take
Displace our heads where—thank the gods!—they grow,
And set them on Lud's town.
Bel. We are all undone.
Gui. Why, worthy father, what have we to lose,
But that he swore to take, our lives? The law [be tender
Protects not us: then why should we
To let an arrogant piece of flesh threat us,
Play judge and executioner all himself,
For we do fear the law? What company
Discover you abroad?
Bel. No single soul
Can we set eye on; but in all safe reason [Though his humour
He must have some attendants.
Was nothing but mutation, ay, and that [frenzy, not
From one bad thing to worse; not

Absolute madness could so far have raved [perhaps
To bring him here alone; although it may be heard at court that such as we [in time
Cave here, hunt here, are outlaws, and may make some stronger head: the which he hearing—
As it is like him—might break out, and swear
He'd fetch us in; yet is't not probable
To come alone, either he so undertaking, [ground we fear,
Or they so suffering: then on good If we do fear this body hath a tail
More perilous than the head.
Arv. Let ordinance
Come as the gods foresay it: howsoe'er,
My brother hath done well.
Bel. I had no mind
To hunt this day: the boy Fidele's sickness
Did make my way long forth.
Gui. With his own sword,
Which he did wave against my throat, I have ta'en [the creek
His head from him: I'll throw't into Behind our rock; and let it to the sea,
And tell the fishes he's the queen's son, Cloten:
That's all I reck. [Exit.
Bel. I fear 'twill be revenged:
Would, Polydore, thou hadst not done 't! though valour
Becomes thee well enough.
Arv. Would I had done 't,
So the revenge alone pursued me! Polydore,
I love thee brotherly, but envy much
Thou hast robb'd me of this deed: I would revenges,
That possible strength might meet, would seek us through,
And put us to our answer.
Bel. Well, 'tis done:
We'll hunt no more to-day, nor seek for danger [our rock;
Where there's no profit. I prithee, to You and Fidele play the cooks: I'll stay [him
Till hasty Polydore return, and bring To dinner presently.
Arv. Poor sick Fidele!
I'll willingly to him: to gain his colour
I'd let a parish of such Clotens blood,
And praise myself for charity. [Exit.

Bel. O thou goddess,
Thou divine Nature, how thyself thou blazon'st [as gentle
In these two princely boys! They are
As zephyrs blowing below the violet,
Not wagging his sweet head; and yet as rough, [rudest wind,
Their royal blood enchafed, as the
That by the top doth take the mountain pine, ['Tis wonder
And make him stoop to the vale.
That an invisible instinct should frame them
To royalty unlearn'd, honour untaught,
Civility not seen from other, valour
That wildly grows in them, but yields a crop [strange
As if it had been sow'd! Yet still it's What Cloten's being here to us portends,
Or what his death will bring us.

Re-enter GUIDERIUS.

Gui. Where's my brother?
I have sent Cloten's clotpoll down the stream, [hostage
In embassy to his mother; his body's
For his return. [Solemn Music.
Bel. My ingenious instrument!
Hark, Polydore, it sounds! But what occasion [Hark!
Hath Cadwal now to give it motion?
Gui. Is he at home?
Bel. He went hence even now.
Gui. What does he mean? Since death of my dear'st mother
It did not speak before. All solemn things [matter?
Should answer solemn accidents. The Triumphs for nothing and lamenting toys
Is jollity for apes and griefs for boys.
Is Cadwal mad?

Re-enter ARVIRAGUS, bearing IMOGEN as dead, in his arms.

Bel. Look, here he comes,
And brings the dire occasion in his arms
Of what we blame him for!
Arv. The bird is dead
That we have made so much on. I had rather [age to sixty,
Have skipp'd from sixteen years of
To have turn'd my leaping-time into a crutch,
Than have seen this.

Gui. O sweetest, fairest lily!
My brother wears thee not the one half so well
As when thou grew'st thyself.
Bel. O melancholy!
Who ever yet could sound thy bottom? find [sluggish crare
The ooze, to show what coast thy Might easiliest harbour in?—Thou blessed thing!
Jove knows what man thou mightst have made; but I,
Thou diedst, a most rare boy, of melancholy.
How found you him?
Arv. Stark, as you see:
Thus smiling, as some fly had tickled slumber, [his right cheek
Not as Death's dart, being laugh'd at;
Reposing on a cushion.
Gui. Where?
Arv. O' the floor;
His arms thus leagued: I thought he slept, and put My clouted brogues from off my feet, whose rudeness
Answer'd my steps too loud.
Gui. Why, he but sleeps:
If he be gone, he'll make his grave a bed; [haunted,
With female fairies will his tomb be
And worms will not come to thee.
Arv. With fairest flowers
Whilst summer lasts and I live here, Fidele, [not lack I'll sweeten thy sad grave: thou shalt
The flower that 's like thy face, pale primrose, nor [no, nor
The azured harebell, like thy veins;
The leaf of eglantine, whom not to slander, [dock would,
Out-sweeten'd not thy breath: the rud-
With charitable bill—O bill, sore-shaming [fathers lie
Those rich-left heirs that let their
Without a monument!—bring thee all this; [flowers are none,
Yea, and furr'd moss besides, when
To winter-ground thy corse.
Gui. Prithee, have done;
And do not play in wench-like words with that
Which is so serious. Let us bury him,
And not protract with admiration what
Is now due debt. To the grave!
Arv. Say, where shall 's lay him?
Gui. By good Euriphile, our mother.
Arv. Be 't so:
And let us, Polydore, though now our voices [to the ground,
Have got the mannish crack, sing him
As once our mother; use like note and words,
Save that 'Euriphile' must be 'Fidele.'
Gui. Cadwal, [with thee;
I cannot sing: I'll weep, and word it
For notes of sorrow out of tune are worse
Than priests and fanes that lie.
Arv. We'll speak it, then.
Bel. Great griefs, I see, medicine the less; for Cloten [boys;
Is quite forgot. He was a queen's son,
And though he came our enemy, remember
He was paid for that: though mean and mighty, rotting [ence,
Together, have one dust, yet rever-
That angel of the world, doth make distinction
Of place 'tween high and low. Our foe was princely; [our foe,
And though you took his life, as being
Yet bury him as a prince.
Gui. Pray you, fetch him hither.
Thersites' body is as good as Ajax',
When neither are alive.
Arv. If you'll go fetch him,
We'll say our song the whilst. Brother, begin. [Exit BELARIUS.
Gui. Nay, Cadwal, we must lay his head to the east;
My father hath a reason for 't.
Arv. 'Tis true.
Gui. Come on then, and remove him.
Arv. So. Begin.

SONG.

Gui. 'Fear no more the heat o' the sun,
Nor the furious winter's rages;
Thou thy worldly task hast done,
Home art gone, and ta'en thy wages:
Golden lads and girls all must,
As chimney-sweepers, come to dust.'
Arv. 'Fear no more the frown o' the great;
Thou art past the tyrant's stroke;
Care no more to clothe and eat;
To thee the reed is as the oak:
The sceptre, learning, physic, must
All follow this, and come to dust.'
Gui. 'Fear no more the lightning-flash,'
Arv. 'Nor the all dreaded thunder-stone;'
Gui. 'Fear not slander, censure rash;'
Arv. 'Thou hast finish'd joy and moan:'

Both. All lovers young, all lovers must
Consign to thee, and come to dust.

Gui. 'No exorciser harm thee!'
Arv. 'Nor no witchcraft charm thee!'
Gui. 'Ghost unlaid forbear thee!'
Arv. 'Nothing ill come near thee!'
Both. 'Quiet consummation have;
And renowned be thy grave!'

Re-enter BELARIUS, with the body of CLOTEN.

Gui. We have done our obsequies: come, lay him down.
Bel. Here 's a few flowers; but about midnight, more:
The herbs that have on them cold dew o' the night
Are strewings fitt'st for graves. Upon their faces.
You were as flowers, now wither'd: even so [you strow.
These herblets shall, which we upon

The ground that gave them first has
Their pleasures here are past, so is their pain.

[Exeunt BELARIUS, GUIDERIUS, and ARVIRAGUS.

Imo. [Awaking.] Yes, sir, to Milford-Haven; which is the way?—
I thank you.—By yond bush?—Pray, how far thither? [yet?—
'Ods pittikins! can it be six mile
I have gone all night:—faith, I'll lie down and sleep.
But, soft! no bedfellow!—O gods and goddesses!

[Seeing the body of CLOTEN.

These flowers are like the pleasures of the world;
This bloody man, the care on't. I hope I dream;
For so I thought I was a cave-keeper,
And cook to honest creatures: but 'tis not so; [nothing,
'Twas but a bolt of nothing, shot at
Which the brain makes of fumes: our very eyes
Are sometimes like our judgments, blind. Good faith, [be
I tremble still with fear: but if there
Yet left in heaven as small a drop of pity [it!
As a wren's eye, fear'd gods, a part of
The dream 's here still: even when I wake, it is [agined, felt.
Without me, as within me; not im-
A headless man! The garments of Posthumus! [his hand;
I know the shape of 's leg; this is
His foot Mercurial; his Martial thigh;
The brawns of Hercules: but his Jovial face— [Pisanio,
Murder in heaven?—How!—'Tis gone.
All curses madded Hecuba gave the Greeks, [Thou,
And mine to boot, be darted on thee!
Conspired with that irregulous devil, Cloten, [and read
Hast here cut off my lord. To write
Be henceforth treacherous! Damn'd Pisanio [Pisanio—
Hath with his forged letters,—damn'd
From this most bravest vessel of the world [alas,
Struck the main-top! O Posthumus!
Where is thy head? where 's that? Ay me! where's that? [heart,
Pisanio might have kill'd thee at the
And left this head on. How should this be? Pisanio?
'Tis he and Cloten: malice and lucre in them [nant, pregnant!
Have laid this woe here. O, 'tis preg-
The drug he gave me, which he said was precious
And cordial to me, have I not found it
Murderous to the senses? That confirms it home: [O!
This is Pisanio's deed, and Cloten's:
Give colour to my pale cheek with thy blood, [those
That we the horrider may seem to
Which chance to find us: O, my lord, my lord! [Falls on the body.

Enter LUCIUS, a Captain and other Officers, and a Soothsayer.

Cap. To them the legions garrison'd in Gallia, [attending
After your will, have cross'd the sea;
You here at Milford-Haven with your ships:
They are in readiness.
Luc. But what from Rome?
Cap. The senate hath stirr'd up the confiners [spirits,
And gentlemen of Italy; most willing
That promise noble service; and they come
Under the conduct of bold Iachimo,

Sienna's brother.
Luc. When expect you them ?
Cap. With the next benefit o' the wind.
Luc. This forwardness
Makes our hopes fair. Command our present numbers
Be muster'd ; bid the captains look to 't.—Now, sir,
What have you dream'd of late of this war's purpose ?
Sooth. Last night the very gods show'd me a vision—
I fast and pray'd for their intelligence —thus : [wing'd
I saw Jove's bird, the Roman eagle, From the spongy south to this part of the west, [portends—
There vanish'd in the sunbeams : which Unless my sins abuse my divination—
Success to the Roman host.
Luc. Dream often so,
And never false.—Soft, ho ! what trunk is here [sometime
Without his top ? The ruin speaks that It was a worthy building. How ! a page ! [dead rather ;
Or dead, or sleeping on him ? But For nature doth abhor to make his bed
With the defunct, or sleep upon the dead.
Let 's see the boy's face.
Cap. He 's alive, my lord.
Luc. He'll then instruct us of this body. [To IMOGEN] Young one,
Inform us of thy fortunes, for it seems They crave to be demanded. Who is this [who was he Thou makest thy bloody pillow ? Or That, otherwise than noble Nature did,
Hath alter'd that good picture ? What 's thy interest [Who is it ?
In this sad wreck ? How came it ?
What art thou ?
Imo. I am nothing : or if not,
Nothing to be were better. This was my master,
A very valiant Briton and a good,
That here by mountaineers lies slain. Alas ! [wander
There is no more such masters : I may From east to occident, cry out for service,
Try many, all good, serve truly, never Find such another master.
Luc. 'Lack, good youth !
Thou movest no less with thy complaining than
Thy master in bleeding : say his name, good friend.
Imo. Richard du Champ. [Aside] If I do lie, and do [I hope
No harm by it, though the gods hear, They'll pardon it.—Say you, sir ?
Luc. Thy name ?
Imo. Fidele, sir.
Luc. Thou dost approve thyself the very same : [thy name.
Thy name well fits thy faith, thy faith Wilt take thy chance with me ? I will not say [be sure,
Thou shalt be so well master'd, but, No less beloved. The Roman emperor's letters, [sooner
Sent by a consul to me, should not Than thine own worth prefer thee : go with me.
Imo. I'll follow, sir. But first, an 't please the gods, [deep
I'll hide my master from the flies, as As these poor pickaxes can dig ; and when
With wild wood-leaves and weeds I ha' strew'd his grave,
And on it said a century of prayers,
Such as I can, twice o'er, I'll weep and sigh ;
And leaving so his service, follow you, So please you entertain me.
Luc. Ay, good youth ;
And rather father thee than master thee.
My friends, [let us
The boy hath taught us manly duties : Find out the prettiest daisied plot we can, [tisans
And make him with our pikes and par-
A grave : come, arm him.—Boy, he is preferr'd
By thee to us ; and he shall be interr'd As soldiers can. Be cheerful ; wipe thine eyes :
Some falls are means the happier to arise. [Exeunt.

SCENE III.—Britain. A Room in CYMBELINE'S Palace.

Enter CYMBELINE, Lords, PISANIO, and Attendants.

Cym. Again ; and bring me word how 'tis with her.
[Exit an Attendant.

A fever with the absence of her son ;
A madness, of which her life 's in danger. Heavens,
How deeply you at once do touch me ! Imogen, [my queen
The great part of my comfort, gone ;
Upon a desperate bed, and in a time
When fearful wars point at me ; her son gone, [me, past
So needful for this present : it strikes
The hope of comfort. [To PISANIO] But for thee, fellow,
Who needs must know of her departure, and [from thee
Dost seem so ignorant, we'll enforce it
By a sharp torture.

Pis. Sir, my life is yours ;
I humbly set it at your will ; but, for my mistress, [why gone,
I nothing know where she remains,
Nor when she purposes return. Beseech your highness,
Hold me your loyal servant.

First Lord. Good my liege,
The day that she was missing he was here : [perform
I dare be bound he 's true and shall
All parts of his subjection loyally. For Cloten, [him,
There wants no diligence in seeking
And will, no doubt, be found.

Cym. [To PISANIO.] The time is troublesome. [jealousy
We'll slip you for a season ; but our
Does yet depend.

First Lord. So please your majesty,
The Roman legions, all from Gallia drawn, [supply
Are landed on your coast, with a
Of Roman gentlemen, by the senate sent. [son and queen !

Cym. Now for the counsel of my
I am amazed with matter.

First Lord. Good my liege,
Your preparation can affront no less
Than what you hear of : come more, for more you're ready :
The want is but to put those powers in motion
That long to move. [draw ;

Cym. I thank you. Let 's with-
And meet the time as it seeks us. We fear not What can from Italy annoy us, but We grieve at chances here. Away !

[Exeunt all but PISANIO.

Pis. I heard no letter from my master since [strange :
I wrote him Imogen was slain : 'tis
Nor hear I from my mistress, who did promise [know I
To yield me often tidings ; neither
What is betid to Cloten ; but remain
Perplex'd in all. The heavens still must work.
Wherein I am false I am honest ; not true, to be true.
These present wars shall find I love my country, [in them.
Even to the note o' the king, or I'll fall
All other doubts, by time let them be clear'd :
Fortune brings in some boats that are not steer'd. [Exit.

SCENE IV.—Wales. Before the Cave of BELARIUS.

Enter BELARIUS, GUIDERIUS, and ARVIRAGUS.

Gui. The noise is round about us.

Bel. Let us from it.

Arv. What pleasure, sir, find we in life, to lock it
From action and adventure ?

Gui. Nay, what hope
Have we in hiding us ? This way, the Romans [us
Must or for Britons slay us, or receive
For barbarous and unnatural revolts
During their use, and slay us after.

Bel. Sons,
We'll higher to the mountains ; there secure us. [newness
To the king's party there 's no going :
Of Cloten's death—we being not known, not muster'd
Among the bands—may drive us to a render [from 's that
Where we have lived ; and so extort
Which we have done, whose answer would be death
Drawn on with torture.

Gui. This is, sir, a doubt
In such a time nothing becoming you,
Nor satisfying us.

Arv. It is not likely
That when they hear the Roman horses neigh, [their eyes
Behold their quarter'd fires, have both
And ears so cloy'd importantly as now,

That they will waste their time upon our note,
To know from whence we are.
Bel. O, I am known
Of many in the army: many years,
Though Cloten then but young, you see, not wore him
From my remembrance. And, besides, the king [loves;
Hath not deserved my service nor your
Who find in my exile the want of breeding, [hopeless
The certainty of this hard life; aye
To have the courtesy your cradle promised, [and
But to be still hot summer's tanlings,
The shrinking slaves of winter.
Gui. Than be so
Better to cease to be. Pray, sir, to the army: [yourself
I and my brother are not known;
So out of thought, and thereto so o'ergrown,
Cannot be question'd.
Arv. By this sun that shines,
I'll thither: what thing is it that I never [on blood,
Did see man die! scarce ever look'd
But that of coward hares, hot goats, and venison! [had Never bestrid a horse, save one that
A rider like myself, who ne'er wore rowel
Nor iron on his heel! I am ashamed
To look upon the holy sun, to have
The benefit of his blest beams, remaining
So long a poor unknown.
Gui. By heavens, I'll go:
If you will bless me, sir, and give me leave, [will not,
I'll take the better care; but if you
The hazard therefore due fall on me by
The hands of Romans!
Arv. So say I: amen.
Bel. No reason I, since on your lives you set
So slight a valuation, should reserve
My crack'd one to more care. Have with you, boys! [die,
If in your country wars you chance to
That is my bed too, lads, and there I'll lie:
Lead, lead. [Aside] The time seems long; their blood thinks scorn,
Till it fly out and show them princes born. [Exeunt.

ACT V.

SCENE I.—Britain. The Roman Camp.

Enter POSTHUMUS, with a bloody handkerchief.

Post. Yea, bloody cloth, I'll keep thee; for I wish'd Thou shouldst be colour'd thus. You married ones, [how many
If each of you should take this course,
Must murder wives much better than themselves
For wrying but a little! O Pisanio!
Every good servant does not all commands: [if you
No bond but to do just ones. Gods!
Should have ta'en vengeance on my faults, I never [saved
Had lived to put on this: so had you
The noble Imogen to repent, and struck
Me, wretch more worth your vengeance. But, alack, [that 's love,
You snatch some hence for little faults;
To have them fall no more: you some permit [worse,
To second ills with ills, each elder
And make them dread it, to the doers' thrift. [wills,
But Imogen is your own: do your best
And make me blest to obey! I am brought hither [fight
Among the Italian gentry, and to
Against my lady's kingdom: 'tis enough [tress; peace!
That, Britain, I have kill'd thy mis-
I'll give no wound to thee. Therefore, good heavens,
Hear patiently my purpose: I'll disrobe me
Of these Italian weeds, and suit myself
As does a Briton peasant: so I'll fight
Against the part I come with; so I'll die [my life
For thee, O Imogen, even for whom
Is, every breath, a death; and thus, unknown,
Pitied nor hated, to the face of peril
Myself I'll dedicate. Let me make men know [show,
More valour in me than my habits
Gods, put the strength o' the Leonati in me! [begin
To shame the guise o' the world, I will
The fashion, less without and more within. [Exit.

SCENE II.—The Same. Field of Battle between the British and Roman Camps.

Enter, at one side, LUCIUS, IACHIMO, and the Roman Army; at the other side, the British Army; LEONATUS POSTHUMUS following, like a poor Soldier. They march over and go out. Alarums. Then enter again, in skirmish, IACHIMO and POSTHUMUS: he vanquisheth and disarmeth IACHIMO, and then leaves him.

Iach. The heaviness and guilt within my bosom [a lady,
Takes off my manhood: I have belied
The princess of this country, and the air on 't [this carl,
Revengingly enfeebles me; or could
A very drudge of Nature's, have subdued me [honours, borne
In my profession? Knighthoods and
As I wear mine, are titles but of scorn.
If that thy gentry, Britain, go before
This lout as he exceeds our lords, the odds
Is that we scarce are men and you are gods. [Exit.

The Battle continues; the Britons fly; CYMBELINE is taken: then enter, to his rescue, BELARIUS, GUIDERIUS, and ARVIRAGUS.

Bel. Stand, stand! We have the advantage of the ground;
The lane is guarded: nothing routs us but
The villany of our fears.

Gui. } Stand, stand, and fight!
Arv. }

Re-enter POSTHUMUS, and seconds the Britons: they rescue CYMBELINE, and exeunt. Then, re-enter LUCIUS, IACHIMO, and IMOGEN.

Luc. Away, boy, from the troops, and save thyself;
For friends kill friends, and the disorder 's such
As war were hoodwink'd.
Iach. 'Tis their fresh supplies.
Luc. It is a day turn'd strangely: or betimes
Let 's re-inforce, or fly. [Exeunt.

SCENE III.—The Same. Another Part of the Field.

Enter POSTHUMUS and a British Lord.

Lord. Camest thou from where they made the stand?
Post. I did:
Though you, it seems, come from the fliers.
Lord. I did.
Post. No blame be to you, sir; for all was lost,
But that the heavens fought: the king himself [ken,
Of his wings destitute, the army bro-
And but the backs of Britons seen, all flying [hearted,
Through a strait lane; the enemy full-
Lolling the tongue with slaughtering, having work [down
More plentiful than tools to do 't, struck
Some mortally, some slightly touch'd, some falling
Merely through fear; that the strait pass was damm'd
With dead men hurt behind, and cowards living
To die with lengthen'd shame.
Lord. Where was this lane?
Post. Close by the battle, ditch'd, and wall'd with turf;
Which gave advantage to an ancient soldier, [served
An honest one, I warrant; who de-
So long a breeding as his white beard came to, [the lane,
In doing this for 's country: athwart
He, with two striplings—lads more like to run
The country base than to commit such slaughter; [fairer
With faces fit for masks, or rather Than those for preservation cased, or shame,— [that fled,
Made good the passage; cried to those
'Our Britain 's harts die flying, not our men: [wards. Stand;
To darkness fleet souls that fly back-
Or we are Romans, and will give you that [and may save,
Like beasts which you shun beastly,
But to look back in frown: stand, stand!' These three,
Three thousand confident, in act as many— [fall
For three performers are the file when
The rest do nothing—with this word, 'Stand, stand,' [charming Accommodated by the place, more
With their own nobleness, which could have turn'd

A distaff to a lance, gilded pale looks,
Part shame, part spirit renew'd; that some, turn'd coward
But by example—O, a sin in war,
Damn'd in the first beginners!—'gan to look [lions
The way that they did, and to grin like
Upon the pikes o' the hunters. Then began
A stop i' the chaser, a retire; anon
A rout, confusion thick: forthwith they fly
Chickens, the way which they stoop'd eagles; slaves,
The strides they victors made: and now our cowards, [came Like fragments in hard voyages, be-
The life o' the need: having found the back-door open
Of the unguarded hearts, heavens, how they wound! [their friends
Some slain before; some dying; some
O'erborne i' the former wave: ten, chased by one,
Are now each one the slaughter-man of twenty: [grown
Those that would die or ere resist are
The mortal bugs o' the field.

Lord. This was strange chance:
A narrow lane, an old man, and two boys! [you are made

Post. Nay, do not wonder at it:
Rather to wonder at the things you hear
Than to work any. Will you rhyme upon 't, [one:
And vent it for a mockery? Here is
'Two boys, an old man twice a boy, a lane, [Romans' bane.'
Preserved the Britons, was the Lord. Nay, be not angry, sir.

Post. 'Lack, to what end?
Who dares not stand his foe, I'll be his friend;
For if he'll do as he is made to do,
I know he'll quickly fly my friendship too.
You have put me into rhyme.

Lord. Farewell; you're angry. [Exit.

Post. Still going? This is a lord! O noble misery!
To be i' the field, and ask 'what news?' of me! [their honours
To-day how many would have given
To have saved their carcasses! took heel to do 't, [charm'd,
And yet died too! I, in mine own woe
Could not find Death where I did hear him groan,
Nor feel him where he struck: being an ugly monster,
'Tis strange he hides him in fresh cups, soft beds, [than we
Sweet words; or hath more ministers
That draw his knives i' the war. Well, I will find him:
For being now a favourer to the Briton,
No more a Briton, I have resumed again [more,
The part I came in: fight I will no
But yield me to the veriest hind that shall [slaughter is Once touch my shoulder. Great the
Here made by the Roman; great the answer be [som 's death;
Britons must take. For me, my ran-
On either side I come to spend my breath; [again,
Which neither here I'll keep nor bear
But end it by some means for Imogen.

Enter two British Captains, and Soldiers.

First Cap. Great Jupiter be praised! Lucius is taken.
'Tis thought the old man and his sons were angels. [a silly habit,

Sec. Cap. There was a fourth man, in
That gave the affront with them.

First Cap. So, 'tis reported:
But none of 'em can be found.—Stand! who 's there?

Post. A Roman; [if seconds
Who had not now been drooping here
Had answer'd him. [dog!

Sec. Cap. Lay hands on him; a
A leg of Rome shall not return to tell
What crows have peck'd them here. He brags his service
As if he were of note: bring him to the king.

Enter CYMBELINE, attended; BELARIUS, GUIDERIUS, ARVIRAGUS, PISANIO, and Roman Captives. The Captains present POSTHUMUS to CYMBELINE, who delivers him over to a Gaoler; then exeunt omnes.

SCENE IV.—The Same. A Prison.

Enter POSTHUMUS, and two Gaolers.

First Gaol. You shall not now be stol'n, you have locks upon you;

So graze as you find pasture.

Sec. Gaol. Ay, or a stomach.

[Exeunt Gaolers.

Post. Most welcome, bondage! for thou art a way,
I think, to liberty: yet am I better
Than one that 's sick o' the gout; since he had rather Groan so in perpetuity than be cured
By the sure physician, Death; who is the key
To unbar these locks. My conscience, thou art fetter'd
More than my shanks and wrists: you good gods, give me
The penitent instrument to pick that bolt;
Then, free for ever! Is 't enough I am sorry? [pease;
So children temporal fathers do appease;
Gods are more full of mercy. Must I repent?
I cannot do it better than in gyves,
Desired more than constrain'd: to satisfy, [take
If of my freedom 'tis the main part,
No stricter render of me than my all.
I know you are more clement than vile men, [third,
Who of their broken debtors take a
A sixth, a tenth, letting them thrive again [desire:
On their abatement: that 's not my
For Imogen's dear life take mine; and though [coin'd it:
'Tis not so dear, yet 'tis a life; you
'Tween man and man they weigh not every stamp;
Though light, take pieces for the figure's sake:
You rather mine, being yours: and so, great powers, [life,
If you will take this audit, take this
And cancel these cold bonds. O Imogen!
I'll speak to thee in silence. [He sleeps.

Solemn Music. Enter, as in an Apparition, SICILIUS LEONATUS, Father to POSTHUMUS, an Old Man, attired like a Warrior; leading in his hand an ancient Matron, his Wife, and Mother to POSTHUMUS, with Music before them. Then, after other Music, follow the two young LEONATI, Brothers to POSTHUMUS, with wounds as they died in the wars. They circle POSTHUMUS round, as he lies sleeping.

Sici. No more, thou thunder-master, show
Thy spite on mortal flies:
With Mars fall out, with Juno chide,
That thy adulteries
Rates and revenges.
Hath my poor boy done aught but well,
Whose face I never saw?
I died whilst in the womb he stay'd
Attending Nature's law:
Whose father then, as men report
Thou orphans' father art,
Thou shouldst have been, and shielded him
From this earth-vexing smart.

Moth. Lucina lent not me her aid,
But took me in my throes;
That from me was Posthumus ript, [foes,
Came crying 'mongst his
A thing of pity!

Sici. Great Nature, like his ancestry,
Moulded the stuff so fair,
That he deserved the praise o' the world,
As great Sicilius' heir.

First Bro. When once he was mature for man, [he
In Britain where was
That could stand up his parallel;
Or fruitful object be
In eye of Imogen, that best
Could deem his dignity?

Moth. With marriage wherefore was he mock'd,
To be exiled, and thrown
From Leonati seat, and cast
From her his dearest one,
Sweet Imogen?

Sici. Why did you suffer Iachimo,
Slight thing of Italy,
To taint his nobler heart and brain
With needless jealousy;
And to become the geck and scorn
O' the other's villany?

Sec. Bro. For this, from stiller seats we came, [twain,
Our parents and us
That striking in our country's cause [slain,
Fell bravely and were
Our fealty and Tenantius' right [tain.
With honour to main-

First Bro. Like hardiment Posthumus hath [form'd:
To Cymbeline per-
Then, Jupiter, thou king of gods, [journ'd
Why hast thou thus ad-
The graces for his merits due, [turn'd?
Being all to dolours

Sici. Thy crystal window ope; look out;
No longer exercise
Upon a valiant race thy harsh
And potent injuries.

Moth. Since, Jupiter, our son is good,
Take off his miseries.

Sici. Peep through thy marble mansion; help!
Or we poor ghosts will cry
To the shining synod of the rest
Against thy deity.

Both Bro. Help, Jupiter; or we appeal, [fly.
And from thy justice.

JUPITER descends in thunder and lightning, sitting upon an Eagle: he throws a thunderbolt. The Ghosts fall on their knees.

Jup. No more, you petty spirits of region low,
Offend our hearing; hush!
How dare you ghosts
Accuse the thunderer, whose bolt, you know,
Sky-planted, batters all rebelling coasts?
Poor shadows of Elysium, hence; and rest
Upon your never-withering banks of flowers: [oppress;
Be not with mortal accidents
No care of yours it is; you know 'tis ours.
Whom best I love I cross; to make my gift,
The more delay'd, delighted.
Be content; [will uplift:
Your low-laid son our godhead
His comforts thrive, his trials well are spent.
Our Jovial star reign'd at his birth, and in
Our temple was he married.
Rise, and fade! [gen,
He shall be lord of Lady Imo-
And happier much by his affliction made. [wherein
This tablet lay upon his breast,
Our pleasure his full fortune doth confine: [your din
And so, away: no further with Express impatience, lest you stir up mine.
Mount, eagle, to my palace crystalline. [Ascends.

Sici. He came in thunder; his celestial breath [holy eagle
Was sulphurous to smell: the Stoop'd, as to foot us: his ascension is [his royal bird
More sweet than our blest fields:
Prunes the immortal wing and cloys his beak,
As when his god is pleased.

All. Thanks, Jupiter!

Sici. The marble pavement closes, he is enter'd
His radiant roof. Away! and, to be blest,
Let us with care perform his great behest.

[The Ghosts vanish.

Post. [Awaking.] Sleep, thou hast been a grandsire, and begot
A father to me; and thou hast created
A mother and two brothers: but, O scorn! [they were born:
Gone! they went hence so soon as
And so I am awake. Poor wretches that depend [done;
On greatness' favour dream as I have Wake, and find nothing. But, alas, I swerve: [serve,
Many dream not to find, neither de-
And yet are steep'd in favours; so am I, [know not why.
That have this golden chance and
What fairies haunt this ground? A book? O rare one!

Be not, as is our fangled world, a garment [effects
Nobler than that it covers: let thy
So follow, to be most unlike our courtiers,
As good as promise. [Reads.

'When as a lion's whelp shall, to himself unknown, without seeking find, and be embraced by a piece of tender air; and when from a stately cedar shall be lopped branches, which, being dead many years, shall after revive, be jointed to the old stock, and freshly grow; then shall Posthumus end his miseries, Britain be fortunate, and flourish in peace and plenty.'

'Tis still a dream; or else such stuff as madmen [nothing;
Tongue and brain not; either both, or
Or senseless speaking, or a speaking such [is,
As sense cannot untie. Be what it
The action of my life is like it, which
I'll keep, if but for sympathy.

Re-enter Gaolers.

First Gaol. Come, sir, are you ready for death? [long ago.

Post. Over-roasted rather; ready

First Gaol. Hanging is the word, sir: if you be ready for that, you are well cooked.

Post. So, if I prove a good repast to the spectators, the dish pays the shot.

First Gaol. A heavy reckoning for you, sir. But the comfort is, you shall be called to no more payments, fear no more tavern-bills; which are often the sadness of parting, as the procuring of mirth: you come in faint for want of meat, depart reeling with too much drink; sorry that you have paid too much, and sorry that you are paid too much; purse and brain doth empty; the brain the heavier for being too light, the purse too light, being drawn of heaviness: of this contradiction you shall now be quit. O, the charity of a penny cord! it sums up thousands in a trice: you have no true debitor and creditor but it; of what 's past, is, and to come, the discharge: your neck, sir, is pen, book, and counters; so the acquittance follows. [thou art to live.

Post. I am merrier to die than

First Gaol. Indeed, sir, he that sleeps feels not the toothache; but a man that were to sleep your sleep, and a hangman to help him to bed, I think he would change places with his officer; for, look you, sir, you know not which way you shall go.

Post. Yes, indeed do I, fellow.

First Gaol. Your death has eyes in 's head then; I have not seen him so pictured: you must either be directed by some that take upon them to know, or take upon yourself that which I am sure you do not know, or jump the after-inquiry on your own peril: and how you shall speed in your journey's end, I think you'll never return to tell one.

Post. I tell thee, fellow, there are none want eyes to direct them the way I am going, but such as wink and will not use them.

First Gaol. What an infinite mock is this, that a man should have the best use of eyes to see the way of blindness! I am sure hanging 's the way of winking.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Knock off his manacles; bring your prisoner to the king.

Post. Thou bringest good news; I am called to be made free.

First Gaol. I'll be hanged then.

Post. Thou shalt be then freer than a gaoler; no bolts for the dead.

[Exeunt POSTHUMUS and Messenger.

First Gaol. Unless a man would marry a gallows and beget young gibbets, I never saw one so prone. Yet, on my conscience, there are verier knaves desire to live, for all he be a Roman: and there be some of them too, that die against their wills; so should I, if I were one. I would we were all of one mind, and one mind good; O, there were desolation of gaolers and gallowses! I speak against my present profit, but my wish hath a preferment in 't. [Exeunt.

SCENE V.—The Same. CYMBELINE'S Tent.

Enter CYMBELINE, BELARIUS, GUIDERIUS, ARVIRAGUS, PISANIO, Lords, Officers, and Attendants.

Cym. Stand by my side, you whom the gods have made Preservers of my throne. Woe is my heart [fought,
That the poor soldier that so richly

Whose rags shamed gilded arms, whose naked breast [found :
Stepp'd before targe of proof, cannot be
He shall be happy that can find him, if
Our grace can make him so.
Bel. I never saw
Such noble fury in so poor a thing ;
Such precious deeds in one that promised nought
But beggary and poor looks.
Cym. No tidings of him ?
Pis. He hath been search'd among the dead and living,
But no trace of him.
Cym. To my grief, I am
The heir of his reward ; [To BELARIUS, GUIDERIUS, and ARVIRAGUS] which I will add [Britain,
To you, the liver, heart, and brain of
By whom I grant she lives. 'Tis now the time
To ask of whence you are. Report it.
Bel. Sir,
In Cambria are we born, and gentlemen : [modest,
Further to boast were neither true nor Unless I add, we are honest.
Cym. Bow your knees.
Arise my knights o' the battle : I create you [you
Companions to our person, and will fit
With dignities becoming your estates.

Enter CORNELIUS and Ladies.

There 's business in these faces. Why so sadly [Romans,
Greet you our victory ? you look like
And not o' the court of Britain.
Cor. Hail, great king !
To sour your happiness, I must report
The queen is dead. [cian
Cym. Whom worse than a physi-
Would this report become ? But I consider, [yet death
By medicine life may be prolong'd,
Will seize the doctor too. How ended she ? [like her life ;
Cor. With horror, madly dying,
Which, being cruel to the world, concluded [confess'd
Most cruel to herself. What she
I will report, so please you : these her women [cheeks
Can trip me if I err ; who with wet
Were present when she finish'd.
Cym. Prithee, say.
Cor. First, she confess'd she never loved you, only [you :
Affected greatness got by you, not
Married your royalty, was wife to your place ;
Abhorr'd your person.
Cym. She alone knew this ;
And, but she spoke it dying, I would not Believe her lips in opening it. Proceed.
Cor. Your daughter, whom she bore in hand to love
With such integrity, she did confess
Was as a scorpion to her sight ; whose life, [had
But that her flight prevented it, she
Ta'en off by poison.
Cym. O most delicate fiend !
Who is 't can read a woman ? Is there more ?
Cor. More, sir, and worse. She did confess she had
For you a mortal mineral ; which, being took, [lingering
Should by the minute feed on life, and
By inches waste you : in which time she purposed, [ing, to
By watching, weeping, tendance, kiss-
O'ercome you with her show ; yes, and in time, [craft, to work
When she had fitted you with her
Her son into the adoption of the crown :
But, failing of her end by his strange absence, [in despite Grew shameless-desperate ; open'd,
Of heaven and men, her purposes ; repented [fected ; so
The evils she hatch'd were not ef-
Despairing died. [women ?
Cym. Heard you all this, her
Ladies. We did, so please your highness.
Cym. Mine eyes
Were not in fault, for she was beautiful ; [nor my heart,
Mine ears, that heard her flattery ;
That thought her like her seeming ; it had been vicious
To have mistrusted her : yet, O my daughter ! [say,
That it was folly in me, thou mayst
And prove it in thy feeling. Heaven mend all !

Enter LUCIUS, IACHIMO, the Soothsayer, and other Roman Prisoners, guarded ; POSTHUMUS behind, and IMOGEN.

Thou comest not, Caius, now for tribute; that [with the loss
The Britons have razed out, though
Of many a bold one; whose kinsmen have made suit
That their good souls may be appeased with slaughter
Of you their captives, which ourself have granted:
So think of your estate.

Luc. Consider, sir, the chance of war: the day [with us,
Was yours by accident; had it gone
We should not, when the blood was cool, have threaten'd
Our prisoners with the sword. But since the gods [our lives
Will have it thus, that nothing but
May be call'd ransom, let it come: sufficeth [suffer:
A Roman with a Roman's heart can
Augustus lives to think on 't: and so much [only
For my peculiar care. This one thing
I will entreat; my boy, a Briton born,
Let him be ransom'd: never master had
A page so kind, so duteous, diligent,
So tender over his occasions, true,
So feat, so nurse-like: let his virtue join [your highness
With my request, which I'll make bold
Cannot deny; he hath done no Briton harm, [save him, sir,
Though he have served a Roman:
And spare no blood beside.

Cym. I have surely seen him:
His favour is familiar to me. Boy,
Thou hast look'd thyself into my grace,
And art mine own. I know not why, nor wherefore,
To say 'live, boy': ne'er thank thy master; live: [thou wilt,
And ask of Cymbeline what boon
Fitting my bounty and thy state, I'll give it; [oner,
Yea, though thou do demand a pris-
The noblest ta'en. [ness.

Imo. I humbly thank your high-

Luc. I do not bid thee beg my life, good lad;
And yet I know thou wilt.

Imo. No, no: alack,
There 's other work in hand: I see a thing [master,
Bitter to me as death: your life, good
Must shuffle for itself.

Luc. The boy disdains me,
He leaves me, scorns me: briefly die their joys [and boys.
That place them on the truth of girls
Why stands he so perplex'd?

Cym. What wouldst thou, boy?
I love thee more and more: think more and more
What 's best to ask. Know'st him thou look'st on? speak,
Wilt have him live? Is he thy kin? thy friend? [to me

Imo. He is a Roman; no more kin
Than I to your highness; who, being born your vassal,
Am something nearer.

Cym. Wherefore eyest him so?

Imo. I'll tell you, sir, in private, if you please
To give me hearing.

Cym. Ay, with all my heart,
And lend my best attention. What 's thy name?

Imo. Fidele, sir. [my page;

Cym. Thou 'rt my good youth,
I'll be thy master: walk with me; speak freely.

[CYMBELINE and IMOGEN converse apart.

Bel. Is not this boy revived from death?

Arv. One sand another
Not more resembles that sweet rosy lad
Who died, and was Fidele. What think you?

Gui. The same dead thing alive.

Bel. Peace, peace! see further; he eyes us not; forbear;
Creatures may be alike: were 't he, I am sure
He would have spoke to us.

Gui. But we saw him dead.

Bel. Be silent; let 's see further.

Pis. [Aside.] It is my mistress:
Since she is living, let the time run on
To good or bad.

[CYMBELINE and IMOGEN come forward.

Cym. Come, stand thou by our side;
Make thy demand aloud. [To IACHIMO] Sir, step you forth;
Give answer to this boy, and do it freely; [it,
Or, by our greatness and the grace of
Which is our honour, bitter torture shall [On, speak to him.
Winnow the truth from falsehood.—

Imo. My boon is, that this gentleman may render
Of whom he had this ring. [him ?
Post. [Aside.] What 's that to
Cym. That diamond upon your finger, say
How came it yours ?
Iach. Thou'lt torture me to leave unspoken that [thee.
Which, to be spoke, would torture
Cym. How ! me ?
Iach. I am glad to be constrain'd to utter that [villany
Which torments me to conceal. By
I got this ring ; 'twas Leonatus' jewel ;
Whom thou didst banish ; and—which more may grieve thee,
As it doth me,—a nobler sir ne'er lived
'Twixt sky and ground. Wilt thou hear more, my lord ?
Cym. All that belongs to this.
Iach. That paragon, thy daughter,
For whom my heart drops blood, and my false spirits [faint.
Quail to remember—Give me leave ; I
Cym. My daughter ! what of her ? Renew thy strength :
I had rather thou shouldst live while nature will, [and speak.
Than die ere I hear more : strive, man,
Iach. Upon a time,—unhappy was the clock [—accursed
That struck the hour !—it was in Rome,
The mansion where !—'twas at a feast,—O, would [least
Our viands had been poison'd, or at Those which I heaved to head !—the good Posthumus— [to be
What should I say ? he was too good
Where ill men were ; and was the best of all [ting sadly,
Amongst the rarest of good ones,—sit-
Hearing us praise our loves of Italy
For beauty that made barren the swell'd boast
Of him that best could speak ; for feature, laming
The shrine of Venus, or straight-pight Minerva, [dition,
Postures beyond brief nature ; for con-
A shop of all the qualities that man
Loves woman for ; besides that hook of wiving,
Fairness which strikes the eye—
Cym. I stand on fire :
Come to the matter.
Iach. All too soon I shall,
Unless thou wouldst grieve quickly. This Posthumus, [one
Most like a noble lord in love, and
That had a royal lover, took his hint ;
And, not dispraising whom we praised, —therein
He was as calm as virtue—he began
His mistress' picture ; which by his tongue being made, [brags
And then a mind put in 't, either our
Were crack'd of kitchen-trulls, or his description
Proved us unspeaking sots.
Cym. Nay, nay, to the purpose.
Iach. Your daughter's chastity—there it begins. [dreams,
He spake of her, as Dian had hot
And she alone were cold : whereat I, wretch, [with him
Made scruple of his praise ; and wager'd
Pieces of gold 'gainst this, which then he wore
Upon his honour'd finger, to attain
In suit the place of 's bed, and win this ring [knight,
By hers and mine adultery. He, true
No lesser of her honour confident
Than I did truly find her, stakes this ring ;
And would so, had it been a carbuncle
Of Phœbus' wheel ; and might so safely, had it [to Britain
Been all the worth of 's car. Away
Post I in this design : well may you, sir,
Remember me at court ; where I was taught [difference
Of your chaste daughter the wide
'Twixt amorous and villanous. Being thus quench'd [brain
Of hope, not longing, mine Italian
'Gan in your duller Britain operate
Most vilely ; for my vantage, excellent ; [vail'd,
And, to be brief, my practice so pre-
That I return'd with simular proof enough
To make the noble Leonatus mad,
By wounding his belief in her renown
With tokens thus, and thus ; averring notes [bracelet,—
Of chamber-hanging, pictures, this her
O cunning, how I got it !—nay, some marks [not
Of secret on her person, that he could
But think her bond of chastity quite crack'd, [upon—
I having ta'en the forfeit. Where-

Methinks I see him now— [dost,
Post. [Advancing.] Ay, so thou
Italian fiend! Ay me, most credulous fool,
Egregious murderer, thief, any thing
That 's due to all the villains past, in being, [or poison,
To come! O, give me cord, or knife,
Some upright justicer! Thou, king, send out
For torturers ingenious: it is I
That all the abhorred things o' the earth amend [Posthumus,
By being worse than they. I am
That kill'd thy daughter:—villain-like, I lie— [self,
That caused a lesser villain than my-
A sacrilegious thief, to do 't. The temple [self.
Of Virtue was she; yea, and she her-
Spit, and throw stones, cast mire upon me, set [villain
The dogs o' the street to bay me: every
Be call'd Posthumus Leonatus; and
Be villany less than 'twas! O Imogen! [Imogen,
My queen, my life, my wife! O Imogen, Imogen! [hear—
Imo. Peace, my lord; hear,
Post. Shall 's have a play of this? Thou scornful page,
There lie thy part.
[Striking her: she falls.
Pis. O, gentlemen, help!
Mine and your mistress!—O, my Lord Posthumus! [Help, help!
You ne'er kill'd Imogen till now.—
Mine honour'd lady!
Cym. Does the world go round?
Post. How come these staggers on me?
Pis. Wake, my mistress!
Cym. If this be so, the gods do mean to strike me
To death with mortal joy.
Pis. How fares my mistress?
Imo. O, get thee from my sight;
Thou gavest me poison: dangerous fellow, hence!
Breathe not where princes are.
Cym. The tune of Imogen!
Pis. Lady, [me, if
The gods throw stones of sulphur on
That box I gave you was not thought by me [queen.
A precious thing: I had it from the Cym. New matter still?
Imo. It poison'd me.
Cor. O gods!
I left out one thing which the queen confess'd, ['If Pisanio
Which must approve thee honest:

There was our error.
Gui. This is, sure, Fidele.
Imo. [To POSTHUMUS.] Why did you throw your wedded lady from you? [now

You had a motive for 't.
Cym. My tears that fall

Thy mother 's dead.
Imo. I am sorry for 't, my lord.
Cym. O, she was nought; and long of her it was [her son
That we meet here so strangely: but
Is gone, we know not how nor where.
Pis. My lord,
Now fear is from me, I'll speak troth. Lord Cloten,
Upon my lady's missing, came to me

With his sword drawn; foam'd at the mouth, and swore, [gone,
If I discover'd not which way she was
It was my instant death. By accident,
I had a feigned letter of my master's

I slew him there.

Gui. A most incivil one: the wrongs he did me [provoke me
Were nothing prince-like; for he did
With language that would make me spurn the sea, [head;
If it could so roar to me: I cut off 's
And am right glad he is not standing here
To tell this tale of mine.

Cym. I am sorry for thee:
By thine own tongue thou art condemn'd, and must Endure our law: thou'rt dead.

Imo. That headless man
I thought had been my lord.

Cym. Bind the offender,
And take him from our presence.

Bel. Stay, sir king:
This man is better than the man he slew, [hath
As well descended as thyself; and
More of thee merited than a band of Clotens
Had ever scar for. [To the Guard] Let his arms alone;
They were not born for bondage.

Bel. We will die all three:
But I will prove that two on 's are as good [I must
As I have given out him. My sons,
For mine own part unfold a dangerous speech,
Though, haply, well for you.

Arv. Your danger 's ours.

Gui. And our good his.

Bel. Have at it then. By leave;
Thou hadst, great king, a subject who was call'd
Belarius.

Cym. What of him? he is
A banish'd traitor.

Bel. He it is that hath Assumed this age; indeed a banish'd man;
I know not how a traitor.

Cym. Take him hence;
The whole world shall not save him.

Bel. Not too hot:
First pay me for the nursing of thy sons;
And let it be confiscate all, so soon
As I have received it.

Cym. Nursing of my sons!

Bel. I am too blunt and saucy: here 's my knee:
Ere I arise I will prefer my sons;
Then spare not the old father. Mighty sir, [me father
These two young gentlemen, that call
And think they are my sons, are none of mine; [liege,
They are the issue of your loins, my

Cor. By the queen's dram she swallow'd.

Cym. O rare instinct! When shall I hear all through? This fierce abridgement [which

To see this gracious season.

Cym. All o'erjoy'd, Save these in bonds: let them be joyful too,
For they shall taste our comfort.

Imo. My good master, I will yet do you service.

Luc. Happy be you!

Cym. The forlorn soldier that so nobly fought,
He would have well becomed this place, and graced
The thankings of a king.

Cym. Nobly doom'd!
We'll learn our freeness of a son-in-law;
Pardon 's the word to all.
Arv. You help us, sir,
As you did mean indeed to be our brother;
Joy'd are we that you are.
Post. Your servant, princes.—Good my lord of Rome,
Call forth your soothsayer: as I slept, methought

Make no collection of it: let him show

Thou Leonatus, art the lion's whelp;
The fit and apt construction of thy name,
Being Leo-natus, doth import so much.

Which we call 'mollis aer;' and 'mollis aer' [I divine
We term it 'mulier:' which 'mulier' Is this most constant wife; who even now,
Answering the letter of the oracle,
Unknown to you, unsought, were clipp'd about
With this most tender air.

Although the victor, we submit to
And to the Roman empire; promising
To pay our wonted tribute, from the which [queen;
We were dissuaded by our wicked

Have laid most heavy hand.
Sooth. The fingers of the powers above do tune
The harmony of this peace. The vision
Which I made known to Lucius ere the stroke [instant
Of this yet scarce-cold battle, at this
Is full accomplish'd; for the Roman eagle, [aloft,
From south to west on wing soaring
Lessen'd herself, and in the beams o' the sun [princely eagle,

From our blest altars. Publish we
To all our subjects. Set we forward: let
A Roman and a British ensign wave
Friendly together: so through Lud's town march:
And in the temple of great Jupiter
Our peace we'll ratify; seal it with feasts. [cease,
Set on there! Never was a war did
Ere bloody hands were wash'd, with such a peace. [Exeunt.

ACT I.

Enter GOWER.

Before the Palace of Antioch.

To sing a song that old was sung,
From ashes ancient Gower is come;
Assuming man's infirmities,
To glad your ear and please your eyes.
It hath been sung at festivals,
On ember-eves and holy-ales;
And lords and ladies in their lives
Have read it for restoratives:
The purchase is to make men glorious;
Et bonum quo antiquius, eo melius.
If you, born in these latter times,
When wit 's more ripe, accept my rhymes,
And that to hear an old man sing
May to your wishes pleasure bring,
I life would wish, and that I might
Waste it for you like taper-light.
This Antioch, then, Antiochus the Great,
Built up, this city, for his chiefest seat,
The fairest in all Syria;
I tell you what mine authors say:
This king unto him took a fere,
Who died and left a female heir,
So buxom, blithe, and full of face,
As heaven had lent her all his grace;
With whom the father liking took,
And her to incest did provoke:
Bad child; worse father! to entice his own
To evil should be done by none.
By custom, what they did begin,
Was, with long use, account no sin.
The beauty of this sinful dame
Made many princes thither frame,
To seek her as a bedfellow,
In marriage-pleasures playfellow:
Which to prevent he made a law,
To keep her still, and men in awe,
That whoso ask'd her for his wife,
His riddle told not, lost his life:
So for her many a wight did die,
As yon grim looks do testify.
What now ensues, to the judgment of your eye
I give, my cause who best can justify.

SCENE I.—Antioch. A Room in the Palace.

Enter ANTIOCHUS, PERICLES, and Attendants.

Ant. Young Prince of Tyre, you have at large received
The danger of the task you undertake.
Per. I have, Antiochus, and, with a soul [praise,
Embolden'd with the glory of her

The senate-house of planets all did sit,
To knit in her their best perfections.

Per. See where she comes, apparell'd like the spring,
Graces her subjects, and her thoughts the king
Of every virtue gives renown to men!
Her face the book of praises, where is read [thence Nothing but curious pleasures, as from Sorrow were ever razed, and testy wrath
Could never be her mild companion.
Ye gods that made me man, and sway in love
That have inflamed desire in my breast
To taste the fruit of yon celestial tree,
Or die in the adventure, be my helps,
As I am son and servant to your will,
To compass such a boundless happiness!

Ant. Prince Pericles,—

Per. That would be son to great Antiochus. [Hesperides,

But in our orbs we'll live so round
That time of both this truth shall ne'er convince,
Thou show'dst a subject's shine, I a true prince. [Exeunt.

SCENE III.—The Same. An Antechamber in the Palace.

Enter THALIARD.

Thal. So, this is Tyre, and this the court. Here must I kill King Pericles; and if I do it not, I am sure to be hanged at home: 'tis dangerous. Well, I perceive he was a wise fellow and had good discretion, that, being bid to ask what he would of the king, desired he might know none of his secrets: now do I see he had some reason for 't; for if a king bid a man be a villain, he 's bound by the indenture of his oath to be one. Hush! here come the lords of Tyre.

Enter HELICANUS, ESCANES, and other Lords.

Hel. You shall not need, my fellow peers of Tyre, [parture:
Further to question of your king's de-
His seal'd commission, left in trust with me, [travel.
Doth speak sufficiently he 's gone to Thal. [Aside.] How! the king gone!
Hel. If further yet you will be satisfied, [loves,
Why, as it were unlicensed of your
He would depart, I'll give some light unto you.
Being at Antioch—
Thal. [Aside.] What from Antioch?
Hel. Royal Antiochus—on what cause I know not—
Took some displeasure at him; at least he judged so:
And doubting lest that he had err'd or sinn'd, [himself;
To show his sorrow, would correct
So puts himself unto the shipman's toil,
With whom each minute threatens life or death.
Thal. [Aside.] Well, I perceive
I shall not be hang'd now, although I would; [must please,
But since he 's gone, the king it sure
He 'scaped the land, to perish at the seas. [lords of Tyre!
But I'll present me.—Peace to the
Hel. Lord Thaliard from Antiochus is welcome.
Thal. From him I come
With message unto princely Pericles;
But since my landing as I have understood [travels,
Your lord has took himself to unknown
My message must return from whence it came. [since
Hel. We have no reason to desire it,
Commended to our master, not to us:
Yet, ere you shall depart, this we desire,
As friends to Antioch, we may feast in Tyre. [Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—Tarsus. A Room in CLEON'S House.

Enter CLEON, DIONYZA, and Attendants.

Cle. My Dionyza, shall we rest us here,
And by relating tales of others' griefs,
See if 'twill teach us to forget our own?
Dio. That were to blow at fire in hope to quench it; [aspire
For who digs hills because they do
Throws down one mountain to cast up a higher. [griefs are;
O my distressed lord, even such our

And wanting breath to speak help me
Dio. I'll do my best, sir.
Cle. This Tarsus, o'er which I have the government,
A city on whom plenty held full hand,
For riches strew'd herself even in the streets;
Whose towers bore heads so high they kiss'd the clouds, [der'd at;
And strangers ne'er beheld but won-
Whose men and dames so jetted and adorn'd, [by:

Their tables were stored full, to glad the sight,
And not so much to feed on as delight;
All poverty was scorn'd, and pride so great, [peat.
The name of help grew odious to re-

Cle. But see what heaven can do! By this our change,

These mouths, whom but of late earth, sea, and air, [please,
Were all too little to content and
Although they gave their creatures in abundance,
As houses are defiled for want of use,
They are now starved for want of exercise: [mers younger,

Is not this true? [witness it.

Dio. Our cheeks and hollow eyes do

Cle. O, let those cities that of Plenty's cup
And her prosperities so largely taste,
With their superfluous riots, hear these tears!
The misery of Tarsus may be theirs.

Enter a Lord.

Lord. Where 's the lord governor?

Cle. Here.
Speak out thy sorrows which thou bring'st in haste,
For comfort is too far for us to expect.

Lord. We have descried, upon our neighbouring shore,
A portly sail of ships make hitherward.

Cle. I thought as much. [heir,
One sorrow never comes but brings an
That may succeed as his inheritor;
And so in ours: some neighbouring nation,
Taking advantage of our misery,
Hath stuff'd these hollow vessels with their power,
To beat us down, the which are down already;
And make a conquest of unhappy me,
Whereas no glory 's got to overcome.

Lord. That 's the least fear; for, by the semblance
Of their white flags display'd, they bring us peace, [foes.
And come to us as favourers, not as

Cle. Thou speak'st like him 's untutor'd to repeat:
Who makes the fairest show means most deceit.
But bring they what they will and what they can,
What need we fear?
The ground 's the lowest, and we are half way there. [here,
Go tell their general we attend him
To know for what he comes, and whence he comes,
And what he craves.

Lord. I go, my lord. [Exit.

Cle. Welcome is peace, if he on peace consist;
If wars, we are unable to resist.

Enter PERICLES, with Attendants.

Per. Lord governor, for so we hear you are, [men

Until our stars that frown lend us a smile. [Exeunt.

ACT II.

Enter GOWER.

Gow. Here have you seen a mighty king
His child, I wis, to incest bring;
A better prince and benign lord,
That will prove awful both in deed and word.
Be quiet then as men should be,
Till he hath pass'd necessity.
I'll show you those in troubles reign,
Losing a mite, a mountain gain.
The good in conversation,
To whom I give my benison,
Is still at Tarsus, where each man
Thinks all is writ he speken can;
And, to remember what he does,
Build his statue to make him glorious:
But tidings to the contrary
Are brought your eyes; what need speak I?

DUMB SHOW.

Enter, at one door, PERICLES, talking with CLEON; all the Train with them. Enter, at another door, a Gentleman, with a letter to PERICLES; PERICLES shows the letter to CLEON; then gives the Messenger a reward, and knights him. Exeunt PERICLES, CLEON, etc., severally.

Good Helicane that stay'd at home,—
Not to eat honey like a drone,
From others' labours; forth he strive
To killen bad, keep good alive,
And to fulfil his prince' desire,—
Sends word of all that haps in Tyre: [with sin
How Thaliard came full bent
And had intent to murder him;
And that in Tarsus was not best
Longer for him to make his rest.
He, knowing so, put forth to seas,
Where when men been, there's seldom ease; [blow;
For now the wind begins to Thunder above and deeps below
Make such unquiet, that the ship
Should house him safe is wreck'd and split; [lost,
And he, good prince, having all
By waves from coast to coast is tost:
All perishen of man, of pelf,
Ne aught escapen but himself;
Till Fortune, tired with doing bad, [glad:
Threw him ashore, to give him
And here he comes. What shall be next,
Pardon old Gower,—this 'longs the text. [Exit.

SCENE I.—Pentapolis. An open Place by the Sea-side.

Enter PERICLES, wet.

Per. Yet cease your ire, ye angry stars of heaven!
Wind, rain, and thunder, remember, earthly man [to you;
Is but a substance that must yield
And I, as fits my nature, do obey you.
Alas, the sea hath cast me on the rocks,
Wash'd me from shore to shore, and left me breath [death:
Nothing to think on but ensuing
Let it suffice the greatness of your powers [tunes;
To have bereft a prince of all his for-
And having thrown him from your watery grave, [crave.
Here to have death in peace is all he'll Enter three Fishermen.

First Fish. What, ho, Pilch!

Sec. Fish. Ho, come and bring away the nets! [say!

First Fish. What, Patchbreech, I

Third Fish. What say you, master?

First Fish. Look how thou stirrest now! come away, or I'll fetch thee with a wannion.

Third Fish. Faith, master, I am thinking of the poor men that were cast away before us even now.

First Fish. Alas, poor souls, it grieved my heart to hear what pitiful cries they made to us to help them, when, well-a-day, we could scarce help ourselves.

Third Fish. Nay, master, said not I as much when I saw the porpus how he bounced and tumbled? they say they're half fish, half flesh: a plague on them, they ne'er come but I look to be washed. Master, I marvel how the fishes live in the sea.

First Fish. Why, as men do a-land; the great ones eat up the little ones: I can compare our rich misers to nothing so fitly as to a whale; 'a plays and tumbles, driving the poor fry before him, and at last devours them all at a mouthful. Such whales have I heard on o' the land, who never leave gaping till they've swallowed the whole parish, church, steeple, bells, and all.

Per. [Aside.] A pretty moral.

Third Fish. But, master, if I had been the sexton, I would have been that day in the belfry.

Sec. Fish. Why, man?

Third Fish. Because he should have swallowed me too: and when I had been in his belly, I would have kept such a jangling of the bells, that he should never have left till he cast bells, steeple, church, and parish, up again. But if the good King Simonides were of my mind,—

Per. [Aside.] Simonides!

Third Fish. We would purge the land of these drones, that rob the bee of her honey. [subject of the sea

Per. [Aside.] How from the finny
These fishers tell the infirmities of men;
And from their watery empire recollect
All that may men approve or men detect!— [fishermen.
Peace be at your labour, honest

Sec. Fish. Honest! good fellow, what 's that? If it be a day fits you, scratch it out of the calendar, and nobody will look after it.

Per. Nay, see, the sea hath cast upon your coast—

Sec. Fish. What a drunken knave was the sea to cast thee in our way!

Per. A man whom both the waters and the wind, [the ball
In that vast tennis-court, have made
For them to play upon, entreats you pity him; [beg.
He asks of you, that never used to

First Fish. No, friend, cannot you beg? Here 's them in our country of Greece gets more with begging than we can do with working.

Sec. Fish. Canst thou catch any fishes, then?

Per. I never practised it.

Sec. Fish. Nay, then thou wilt starve, sure; for here 's nothing to be got now-a-days, unless thou canst fish for 't. [got to know;

Per. What I have been I have forBut what I am, want teaches me to think on; [veins are chill,
A man throng'd up with cold: my
And have no more of life than may suffice [your help;
To give my tongue that heat to ask
Which if you shall refuse, when I am dead, [buried.
For that I am a man, pray see me

First Fish. Die quoth-a? Now gods forbid! I have a gown here; come, put it on; keep thee warm. Now, afore me, a handsome fellow! Come, thou shalt go home, and we'll have flesh for holidays, fish for fasting-days, and moreo'er puddings and flap-jacks; and thou shalt be welcome.

Per. I thank you, sir.

Sec. Fish. Hark you, my friend; you said you could not beg.

Per. I did but crave.

Sec. Fish. But crave! Then I'll turn craver too, and so I shall 'scape whipping. [whipped, then?

Per. Why, are all your beggars

Sec. Fish. O, not all, my friend, not all; for if all your beggars were whipped, I would wish no better office than to be beadle. But, master, I'll go draw up the net.

[Exit with Third Fisherman.

Per. [Aside.] How well this honest mirth becomes their labour!

First Fish. Hark you, sir; do you know where you are?

Per. Not well.

First Fish. Why, I'll tell you: this is called Pentapolis, and our king the good Simonides.

Per. The good King Simonides, do you call him?

First Fish. Ay, sir; and he deserves so to be called for his peaceable reign and good government.

Per. He is a happy king, since he gains from his subjects the name of good by his government. How far is his court distant from this shore?

First Fish. Marry, sir, half a day's journey; and I'll tell you, he hath a fair daughter, and to-morrow is her birthday; and there are princes and knights come from all parts of the world to just and tourney for her love.

Per. Were my fortunes equal to my desires, I could wish to make one there.

First Fish. O, sir, things must be as they may; and what a man cannot get, he may lawfully deal for[1]—his wife's soul.

Re-enter Second and Third Fishermen, drawing up a Net.

Sec. Fish. Help, master, help! here's a fish hangs in the net, like a poor man's right in the law; 'twill hardly come out. Ha! bots on't, 'tis come at last, and 'tis turned to a rusty armour.

Per. An armour, friends! I pray you, let me see it.
Thanks, Fortune, yet, that, after all my crosses, [myself;
Thou givest me somewhat to repair
And though it was mine own, part of mine heritage, [to me,
Which my dead father did bequeath
With this strict charge, even as he left his life, [shield
'Keep it, my Pericles; it hath been a
'Twixt me and death;'—and pointed to this brace;—
'For that it saved me, keep it; in like necessity—
The which the gods protect thee from!—it may defend thee.'
It kept where I kept, I so dearly loved it; [any man,
Till the rough seas, that spare not
Took it in rage, though calm'd have given 't again:
I thank thee for 't: my shipwreck now 's no ill, [will.
Since I have here my father's gift in 's

First Fish. What mean you, sir?

Per. To beg of you, kind friends, this coat of worth,
For it was sometime target to a king;
I know it by this mark. He loved me dearly, [it;
And for his sake I wish the having of
And that you'd guide me to your sovereign's court, [man;
Where with 't I may appear a gentle-
And if that ever my low fortunes better, [your debtor.
I'll pay your bounties; till then rest

First Fish. Why, wilt thou tourney for the lady?

Per. I'll show the virtue I have borne in arms.

First Fish. Why, do 'e take it, and the gods give thee good on 't!

Sec. Fish. Ay, but hark you, my friend; 'twas we that made up this garment through the rough seams of the waters: there are certain condolements, certain vails. I hope, sir, if you thrive, you'll remember from whence you had it.

Per. Believe it, I will. [steel;
By your furtherance I am clothed in
And, spite of all the rapture of the sea,
This jewel holds his biding on my arm:
Unto thy value will I mount myself
Upon a courser, whose delightful steps
Shall make the gazer joy to see him tread. [vided
Only, my friend, I yet am unpro-
Of a pair of bases.

Sec. Fish. We'll sure provide: thou shalt have my best gown to make thee a pair; and I'll bring thee to the court myself. [my will;

Per. Then honour be but a goal to
This day I'll rise, or else add ill to ill.
[Exeunt.

SCENE II.—The Same. A public Way or Platform leading to the Lists. A Pavilion by the side of it for the reception of the King, Princess, Lords, etc.

Enter SIMONIDES, THAISA, Lords, and Attendants.

Sim. Are the knights ready to begin the triumph?

First Lord. They are, my liege;
And stay your coming to present themselves. [and our daughter,

Sim. Return them, we are ready;
In honour of whose birth these triumphs are, [Nature gat

My commendations great, whose merit's less. [princes are

A model, which heaven makes like to itself:
As jewels lose their glory if neglected,
So princes their renown if not respected.
'Tis now your honour, daughter, to explain

[1] There is probably some omission here.

The labour of each knight in his device.
Thai. Which, to preserve mine honour, I'll perform.

Enter a Knight; he passes over the Stage, and his Squire presents his shield to the Princess.

Sim. Who is the first that doth prefer himself?
Thai. A knight of Sparta, my renowned father; [shield
And the device he bears upon his

Is an arm'd knight that 's conquer'd by a lady;
The motto thus, in Spanish, 'Piu por dulzura que por fuerza.'

The Third Knight passes over.

Sim. And what 's the third?
Thai. The third of Antioch;
And his device a wreath of chivalry;
The word, 'Me pompæ provexit apex.'

The Fourth Knight passes over.

Sim. What is the fourth?
Thai. A burning torch that 's turned upside down; [guit.'

The Sixth Knight, PERICLES, passes over.

Sim. And what 's the sixth and last, which the knight himself
With such a graceful courtesy deliver'd?
Thai. He seems to be a stranger; but his present
Is a wither'd branch, that 's only green at top;
The motto, 'In hac spe vivo.'

Sim. A pretty moral;
From the dejected state wherein he is,
He hopes by you his fortunes yet may flourish.
First Lord. He had need mean better than his outward show
Can any way speak in his just commend;
For, by his rusty outside, he appears
To have practised more the whipstock than the lance.
Sec. Lord. He well may be a stranger, for he comes [ished.

Until this day, to scour it in the dust.
Sim. Opinion 's but a fool, that makes us scan
The outward habit by the inward man.
But stay, the knights are coming; we'll withdraw
Into the gallery. [Exeunt
[Great shouts within, and all cry, 'The mean knight!'

SCENE III.—The Same. A Hall of State. A Banquet prepared.

Enter SIMONIDES, THAISA, Lords, Knights from tilting, and Attendants.

Sim. Knights, [fluous.
To say you're welcome were super-

Since every worth in show commends
Prepare for mirth, for mirth becomes a feast:
You are princes and my guests.
Thai. But you, my knight and guest;
To whom this wreath of victory I give,
And crown you king of this day's happiness. [than my merit.
Per. 'Tis more by fortune, lady,
Sim. Call it by what you will, the day is yours; [it.
And here, I hope, is none that envies

To make some good, but others to
And you're her labour'd scholar. Come, queen o' the feast,—

For, daughter, so you are,—here take your place :
Marshal the rest, as they deserve their [grace.
Knights. We are honour'd much by good Simonides.
Sim. Your presence glads our days ; honour we love ; [above.
For who hates honour hates the gods
Marshal. [To PERICLES.] Sir, yond 's your place.
Per. Some other is more fit.
First Knight. Contend not, sir ; for we are gentlemen [eyes
That neither in our hearts nor outward
Envy the great nor do the low despise.
Per. You are right courteous knights.
Sim. Sit, sir, sit.
Per. [Aside.] By Jove, I wonder, that is king of thoughts,
These cates resist me, she but thought upon. [queen of marriage,
Thai. [Aside.] By Juno, that is
All viands that I eat do seem unsavoury,
Wishing him my meat. [Aloud] Sure, he 's a gallant gentleman.
Sim. He's but a country gentleman ;
Has done no more than other knights have done ;
Broken a staff or so ; so let it pass.
Thai. To me he seems like diamond to glass.
Per. [Aside.] Yon king 's to me like to my father's picture,
Which tells me in that glory once he was ; [throne,
Had princes sit, like stars, about his

Sim. What, are you merry, knights ?
First Knight. Who can be other in this royal presence ?
Sim. Here, with a cup that 's stored unto the brim,— [lips,—
As you do love, fill to your mistress'
We drink this health to you.
Knights. We thank your grace.
Sim. Yet pause awhile :
Yon knight, methinks, doth sit too melancholy,
As if the entertainment in our court
Had not a show might countervail his worth.
Note it not you, Thaisa ?
Thai. What is it
To me, my father ?
Sim. O, attend, my daughter :
Princes, in this, should live like gods above, [comes
Who freely give to every one that

Unto a stranger knight to be so bold :
He may my proffer take for an offence,
Since men take women's gifts for impudence.
Sim. How ! [else.
Do as I bid you, or you'll move me
Thai. [Aside.] Now, by the gods, he could not please me better.
Sim. And further tell him, we desire to know [age.
Of whence he is, his name and parent-
Thai. The king my father, sir, has drunk to you.
Per. I thank him.
Thai. Wishing it so much blood unto your life.
Per. I thank both him and you, and pledge him freely.
Thai. And further he desires to know of you, [parentage.
Of whence you are, your name and
Per. A gentleman of Tyre ; my name, Pericles ;
My education being in arts and arms ;
Who, looking for adventures in the world, [and men,
Was by the rough seas reft of ships
And after shipwreck driven upon this shore.
Thai. He thanks your grace ; names himself Pericles,
A gentleman of Tyre, who only by Misfortune of the seas has been bereft
Of ships and men, and cast upon this shore. [misfortune,
Sim. Now, by the gods, I pity his

And will awake him from his melancholy.
Come, gentlemen, we sit too long on trifles,
And waste the time, which looks for other revels.
Even in your armours, as you are addressed,
Will very well become a soldier's dance.
I will not have excuse, with saying this
Loud music is too harsh for ladies' heads,
Since they love men in arms as well as beds.
So, this was well ask'd, 'twas so well perform'd.
Come, sir; here is a lady that wants breathing
And I have often heard, you knights of Tyre
Are excellent in making ladies trip;
And that their measures are as excellent.

Per. In those that practise them they are, my lord.

Sim. O, that's as much as you would be denied
Of your fair courtesy.

[The Knights and Ladies dance. Unclasp, unclasp:
Thanks, gentlemen, to all; all have done well,
[To PERICLES] But you the best. Page and lights, to conduct
These knights unto their several lodgings! Yours, sir,
We have given order to be next our own.

Per. I am at your grace's pleasure.

Sim. Princes, it is too late to talk of love;
For that's the mark I know you level at:
Therefore each one betake him to his rest;
To-morrow all for speeding do their best. [Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—Tyre. A Room in HELICANUS' House.

Enter HELICANUS and ESCANES.

Hel. No, Escanes, know this of me,
Antiochus from incest lived not free;
For which, the most high gods not minding longer
To withhold the vengeance that they had in store,
Due to this heinous capital offence,
Even in the height and pride of all his glory,
When he was seated, and his daughter with him,
In a chariot of inestimable value,
A fire from heaven came and shrivell'd up
Their bodies, even to loathing; for they so stunk,
That all those eyes adored them ere their fall
Scorn now their hand should give them burial.

Esca. 'Twas very strange.

Hel. And yet but just; for though
This king were great, his greatness was no guard
To bar heaven's shaft, but sin had his reward.

Esca. 'Tis very true.

Enter two or three Lords.

First Lord. See, not a man in private conference
Or council has respect with him but he.

Sec. Lord. It shall no longer grieve without reproof.

Third Lord. And cursed be he that will not second it.

First Lord. Follow me, then. Lord Helicane, a word.

Hel. With me? and welcome: happy day, my lords.

First Lord. Know that our griefs are risen to the top,
And now at length they overflow their banks.

Hel. Your griefs! for what? wrong not the prince you love.

First Lord. Wrong not yourself, then, noble Helicane;
But if the prince do live, let us salute him,
Or know what ground 's made happy by his breath.
If in the world he live, we'll seek him out;
If in his grave he rest, we'll find him there;
And be resolved he lives to govern us,
Or dead, give 's cause to mourn his funeral,
And leaves us to our free election.

Sec. Lord. Whose death 's, indeed, the strongest in our censure:
And knowing this kingdom, if without a head,—
Like goodly buildings left without a roof,—
Will soon to ruin fall, your noble self,
That best know'st how to rule and how to reign,
We thus submit unto, our sovereign.

All. Live, noble Helicane!

Hel. For honour's cause, forbear your suffrages:
If that you love Prince Pericles, forbear.
Take I your wish, I leap into the seas

Where 's hourly trouble for a minute's ease. [you to
A twelvemonth longer, let me entreat
Forbear the absence of your king;
If in which time expired, he not return,
I shall with aged patience bear your yoke.
But if I cannot win you to this love,
Go search like noblemen, like noble subjects, [turous worth;
And in your search spend your adven-
Whom if you find, and win unto return, [crown.
You shall like diamonds sit about his
First Lord. To wisdom he 's a fool that will not yield;
And since Lord Helicane enjoineth us,
We with our travels will endeavour it.
Hel. Then you love us, we you, and we'll clasp hands:
When peers thus knit, a kingdom ever stands. [Exeunt.

SCENE V.—Pentapolis. A Room in the Palace.

Enter SIMONIDES, reading a letter, the Knights meet him.

First Knight. Good-morrow to the good Simonides.
Sim. Knights, from my daughter this I let you know,
That for this twelvemonth she'll not undertake
A married life.
Her reason to herself is only known,
Which yet from her by no means can I get.
Sec. Knight. May we not get access to her, my lord?
Sim. Faith, by no means; she hath so strictly tied her
To her chamber, that it is impossible.
One twelve moons more she'll wear Diana's livery; [vow'd,
This by the eye of Cynthia hath she
And on her virgin honour will not break it.
Third Knight. Though loth to bid farewell, we take our leaves. [Exeunt Knights.
Sim. So, [daughter's letter:
They're well dispatch'd; now to my
She tells me here, she'll wed the stranger knight, [light.
Or never more to view nor day nor Mistress; 'tis well; your choice agrees with mine; [she 's in 't,
I like that well:—nay, how absolute
Not minding whether I dislike or no!
Well, I do commend her choice;
And will no longer have it be delay'd.
Soft! here he comes: I must dissemble it.

Enter PERICLES.

Per. All fortune to the good Simonides! [holden to you
Sim. To you as much, sir! I am be-
For your sweet music this last night: I do
Protest my ears were never better fed
With such delightful pleasing harmony.
Per. It is your grace's pleasure to commend;
Not my desert.
Sim. Sir, you are music's master.
Per. The worst of all her scholars, my good lord.
Sim. Let me ask you one thing: what do you think of my daughter, sir?
Per. As of a most virtuous princess.
Sim. And she is fair too, is she not?
Per. As a fair day in summer; wondrous fair.
Sim. My daughter, sir, thinks very well of you;
Ay, so well, sir, that you must be her master, [look to it.
And she'll your scholar be; therefore
Per. Unworthy I to be her schoolmaster. [writing else.
Sim. She thinks not so; peruse this
Per. [Aside.] What 's here?
A letter, that she loves the knight of Tyre! [life.
'Tis the king's subtilty to have my [Aloud] O, seek not to entrap, my gracious lord,
A stranger and distressed gentleman,
That never aim'd so high to love your daughter,
But bent all offices to honour her.
Sim. Thou hast bewitch'd my daughter, and thou art
A villain.
Per. By the gods, I have not:
Never did thought of mine levy offence; [mence
Nor never did my actions yet com-
A deed might gain her love or your displeasure.
Sim. Traitor, thou liest.

Per. Traitor!
Sim. Ay, traitor.
Per. Even in his throat—unless it be the king—
That calls me traitor, I return the lie.
Sim. [Aside.] Now, by the gods, I do applaud his courage.
Per. My actions are as noble as my thoughts,
That never relish'd of a base descent.
I came unto your court for honour's cause,
And not to be a rebel to her state;
And he that otherwise accounts of me,
This sword shall prove he 's honour's enemy.
Sim. No? [ness it.
Here comes my daughter, she can wit-

Enter THAISA.

Per. Then, as you are as virtuous as fair,
Resolve your angry father, if my [tongue
Did e'er solicit, or my hand subscribe
To any syllable that made love to you?
Thai. Why, sir, say if you had,
Who takes offence at that would make me glad? [emptory?
Sim. Yea, mistress, are you so per-
[Aside] I am glad of it with all my heart. [Aloud] I'll tame you;
I'll bring you in subjection. [stow
Will you, not having my consent, be-
Your love and your affections on a stranger? [the contrary, [Aside] Who, for aught I know to
Or think, may be as great in blood as I.
[Aloud] Hear therefore, mistress; frame your will to mine,—
And you, sir, hear you.—Either be ruled by me,
Or I will make you—man and wife.
Nay, come; your hands and lips must seal it too: [destroy;
And being join'd, I'll thus your hopes
And for a further grief,—God give you joy!—
What, are you both pleased?
Thai. Yes, if you love me, sir.
Per. Even as my life my blood that fosters it.
Sim. What, are you both agreed?
Both. Yes, if it please your majesty.
Sim. It pleaseth me so well, that I will see you wed;
Then, with what haste you can, get you to bed. [Exeunt.

ACT III.

Enter GOWER.

Gow. Now sleep yslaked hath the rout;
No din but snores the house about, [breast
Made louder by the o'er-fed
Of this most pompous marriage-feast. [coal,
The cat, with eyne of burning
Now couches 'fore the mouse's hole; [mouth,
And crickets sing at the oven's
E'er the blither for their drouth.
Hymen hath brought the bride to bed, [head,
Where, by the loss of maiden-
A babe is moulded. Be attent,
And time that is so briefly spent
With your fine fancies quaintly eche: [with speech.
What 's dumb in show I'll plain

DUMB SHOW.

Enter PERICLES and SIMONIDES at one door, with Attendants; a Messenger meets them, kneels, and gives PERICLES a letter: PERICLES shows it to SIMONIDES; the Lords kneel to the former. Then enter THAISA with child, and LYCHORIDA: SIMONIDES shows his Daughter the letter; she rejoices: she and PERICLES take leave of her Father, and depart with LYCHORIDA and Attendants. Then SIMONIDES and the rest retire.

By many a dern and painful perch
Of Pericles the careful search,
By the four opposing coigns
Which the world together joins,
Is made with all due diligence
That horse and sail and high expense [from Tyre—
Can stead the quest. At last
Fame answering the most strong inquire—
To the court of King Simonides
Are letters brought, the tenour these: [dead;
Antiochus and his daughter
The men of Tyrus on the head
Of Helicanus would set on
The crown of Tyre, but he will none: [oppress;
The mutiny he there hastes t'
Says to 'em, if King Pericles

Come not home in twice six moons,
He, obedient to their dooms,
Will take the crown. The sum of this,
Brought hither to Pentapolis,
Y-ravished the regions round,
And every one with claps can sound,
'Our heir-apparent is a king!
Who dream'd, who thought of such a thing?' [Tyre:
Brief, he must hence depart to
His queen with child makes her desire— [to go.
Which who shall cross?—along
Omit we all their dole and woe:
Lychorida, her nurse, she takes,
And so to sea. Their vessel shakes [flood
On Neptune's billow; half the Hath their keel cut; but Fortune's mood
Varies again; the grisly north
Disgorges such a tempest forth,
That, as a duck for life that dives,
So up and down the poor ship drives: [near
The lady shrieks, and well-a-
Doth fall in travail with her fear:
And what ensues in this fell storm
Shall for itself itself perform.
I nill relate, action may Conveniently the rest convey;
Which might not what by me is told.
In your imagination hold
This stage the ship, upon whose deck
The sea-tost Pericles appears to speak. [Exit.

SCENE I.

Enter PERICLES, on shipboard.

Per. Thou god of this great vast, rebuke these surges,
Which wash both heaven and hell; and thou, that hast
Upon the winds command, bind them in brass, [still Having call'd them from the deep! O,
Thy deafening, dreadful thunders; gently quench
Thy nimble, sulphurous flashes!—O, how, Lychorida,
How does my queen?—Thou stormest venomously;
Wilt thou spit all thyself? The seaman's whistle
Is as a whisper in the ears of Death,
Unheard. Lychorida!—Lucina, O
Divinest patroness and midwife gentle
To those that cry by night, convey thy deity [the pangs
Aboard our dancing boat; make swift
Of my queen's travails!

Enter LYCHORIDA, with an Infant.

Now, Lychorida!

Lyc. Here is a thing too young for such a place,
Who, if it had conceit, would die, as I
Am like to do: take in your arms this piece
Of your dead queen.

Per. How, how, Lychorida!

Lyc. Patience, good sir; do not assist the storm. [queen,
Here 's all that is left living of your
A little daughter: for the sake of it,
Be manly, and take comfort.

Per. O you gods!
Why do you make us love your goodly gifts, [here below
And snatch them straight away? We Recall not what we give, and therein may Use honour with you.

Lyc. Patience, good sir,
Even for this charge.

Per. Now, mild may be thy life!
For a more blusterous birth had never babe:
Quiet and gentle thy conditions! for
Thou art the rudeliest welcome to this world [what follows!
That e'er was prince's child. Happy
Thou hast as chiding a nativity
As fire, air, water, earth, and heaven can make, [at the first
To herald thee from the womb: even
Thy loss is more than can thy portage quit, [the good gods
With all thou canst find here. Now
Throw their best eyes upon it!

Enter two Sailors.

First Sail. What courage, sir? God save you! [fear the flaw;

Per. Courage enough: I do not
It hath done to me the worst. Yet, for the love [sea-farer,
Of this poor infant, this fresh-new

I would it would be quiet.

First Sail. Slack the bolins there! Thou wilt not, wilt thou? Blow, and split thyself.

Sec. Sail. But sea-room, an the brine and cloudy billow kiss the moon, I care not.

First Sail. Sir, your queen must overboard: the sea works high, the wind is loud, and will not lie till the ship be cleared of the dead.

Per. That 's your superstition.

First Sail. Pardon us, sir; with us at sea it hath been still observed; and we are strong in custom. Therefore briefly yield her; for she must overboard straight.

Per. Be it as you think meet. Most wretched queen!

Lyc. Here she lies, sir.

Per. A terrible childbed hast thou had, my dear; [elements
No light, no fire: the unfriendly
Forgot thee utterly; nor have I time
To give thee hallow'd to thy grave, but straight [ooze;
Must cast thee, scarcely coffin'd, in the
Where, for a monument upon thy bones, [ing whale
And aye-remaining lamps, the belch-
And humming water must o'erwhelm thy corpse,
Lying with simple shells. Lychorida,
Bid Nestor bring me spices, ink and paper, [Nicander
My casket and my jewels; and bid
Bring me the satin coffer: lay the babe
Upon the pillow: hie thee, whiles I say
A priestly farewell to her: suddenly, woman. [Exit LYCHORIDA.

Sec. Sail. Sir, we have a chest beneath the hatches, caulked and bitumed ready. [what coast is this?

Per. I thank thee. Mariner, say

Sec. Sail. We are near Tarsus.

Per. Thither, gentle mariner,
Alter thy course for Tyre. When canst thou reach it?

Sec. Sail. By break of day, if the wind cease.

Per. O, make for Tarsus!
There will I visit Cleon, for the babe
Cannot hold out to Tyrus: there I'll leave it [good mariner;
At careful nursing. Go thy ways,
I'll bring the body presently.

[Exeunt.

SCENE II.—Ephesus. A Room in CERIMON'S House.

Enter CERIMON, with Servant, and some Persons who have been shipwrecked.

Cer. Philemon, ho!

Enter PHILEMON.

Phil. Doth my lord call?

Cer. Get fire and meat for these poor men: [night.
'T has been a turbulent and stormy

Serv. I have been in many; but such a night as this,
Till now, I ne'er endured.

Cer. Your master will be dead ere you return; [nature
There 's nothing can be minister'd to
That can recover him. [To PHILEMON] Give this to the 'pothecary,
And tell me how it works.

[Exeunt all but CERIMON.

Enter two Gentlemen.

First Gent. Good-morrow, sir,

Sec. Gent. Good-morrow to your lordship.

Cer. Gentlemen,
Why do you stir so early?

First Gent. Sir, [sea,
Our lodgings, standing bleak upon the
Shook as the earth did quake;
The very principals did seem to rend
And all-to topple: pure surprise and fear
Made me to quit the house.

Sec. Gent. That is the cause we trouble you so early;
'Tis not our husbandry.

Cer. O, you say well.

First Gent. But I much marvel that your lordship, having Rich tire about you, should at these early hours [pose.
Shake off the golden slumber of re-
It is most strange, [pain,
Nature should be so conversant with Being thereto not compell'd.

Cer. I hold it ever,
Virtue and cunning were endowments greater [heirs
Than nobleness and riches: careless
May the two latter darken and expend;
But immortality attends the former,
Making a man a god. 'Tis known, I ever [secret art,
Have studied physic, through which

By turning o'er authorities, I have,
Together with my practice, made familiar [sions
To me and to my aid the blest infu-
That dwell in vegetives, in metals, stones;
And I can speak of the disturbances
That Nature works, and of her cures; which doth give me [light
A more content in course of true de-
Than to be thirsty after tottering honour,
Or tie my treasure up in silken bags,
To please the Fool and Death.

Sec. Gent. Your honour has through Ephesus pour'd forth
Your charity and hundreds call themselves [restored:
Your creatures, who by you have been
And not your knowledge, your personal pain, but even
Your purse, still open, hath built Lord Cerimon [decay.
Such strong renown as time shall ne'er

Enter two or three Servants with a Chest.

First Serv. So; lift there.
Cer. What is that?
First Serv. Sir, even now
Did the sea toss upon our shore this chest:
'Tis of some wreck.
Cer. Set it down, let 's look on it.
Sec. Gent. 'Tis like a coffin, sir.
Cer. Whate'er it be,
'Tis wondrous heavy. Wrench it open straight: [with gold,
If the sea's stomach be o'ercharged
It is a good constraint of Fortune, that
It belches upon us.
Sec. Gent. 'Tis so, my lord.
Cer. How close 'tis caulk'd and bitumed!
Did the sea cast it up? [billow, sir,
First Serv. I never saw so huge a
As toss'd it upon shore.
Cer. Come, wrench it open:
Soft, soft! it smells most sweetly to my sense.
Sec. Gent. A delicate odour.
Cer. As ever hit my nostril. So, up with it. [a corse!
O you most potent gods! what 's here?
First Gent. Most strange!
Cer. Shrouded in cloth of state; balm'd and entreasured
With bags of spices full! A passport too!
Apollo, perfect me i' the characters!

[Reads from a Scroll.

'Here I give to understand,
If e'er this coffin drive a-land,
I, King Pericles, have lost
This queen, worth all our mundane cost.
Who finds her, give her burying;
She was the daughter of a king:
Besides this treasure for a fee,
The gods requite his charity!'

If thou livest, Pericles, thou hast a heart [chanced to-night.
That even cracks for woe!—This
Sec. Gent. Most likely, sir.
Cer. Nay, certainly to-night;
For look how fresh she looks! They were too rough [within;
That threw her in the sea. Make fire
Fetch hither all the boxes in my closet.

[Exit a Servant.

Death may usurp on nature many hours,
And yet the fire of life kindle again
The overpressed spirits. I have heard
Of an Egyptian had nine hours lien dead,
By good appliance was recovered.

Re-enter Servant, with boxes, napkins, and fire.

Well said, well said; the fire and cloths. [we have,
The rough and woeful music that Cause it to sound, beseech you.
The viol once more: how thou stirr'st, thou block! [her air.
The music there!—I pray you, give
Gentlemen, [a warmth
This queen will live: nature awakes;
Breathes out of her; she hath not been entranced [blow
Above five hours: see how she 'gins to
Into life's flower again!
First Gent. The heavens, sir,
Through you, increase our wonder, and set up
Your fame for ever.
Cer. She is alive; behold,
Her eyelids, cases to those heavenly jewels [part
Which Pericles hath lost, begin to
Their fringes of bright gold; the diamonds
Of a most praised water do appear
To make the world twice rich. O live,

And make us weep to hear your fate, fair creature,
Rare as you seem to be! [She moves.
Thai. O dear Diana,
Where am I? Where 's my lord? What world is this?
Sec. Gent. Is not this strange?
First Gent. Most rare.
Cer. Hush, gentle neighbours!
Lend me your hands; to the next chamber bear her.
Get linen: now this matter must be look'd to, [come, come;
For her relapse is mortal. Come, Come,
And Æsculapius guide us!
[Exeunt, carrying THAISA away.

SCENE III.—Tarsus. A Room in CLEON'S House.

Enter PERICLES, CLEON, DIONYZA, and LYCHORIDA with MARINA in her arms.

Per. Most honour'd Cleon, I must needs be gone;
My twelve months are expired, and Tyrus stands [lady
In a litigious peace. You and your Take from my heart all thankfulness! The gods
Make up the rest upon you!
Cle. Your shafts of fortune, though they hurt you mortally,
Yet glance full wanderingly on us.
Dion. O your sweet queen!
That the strict Fates had pleased you had brought her hither,
To have bless'd mine eyes!
Per. We cannot but obey
The powers above us. Could I rage and roar [end
As doth the sea she lies in, yet the
Must be as 'tis. My gentle babe Marina, whom, [so, here
For she was born at sea, I have named
I charge your charity withal, and leave her [you
The infant of your care; beseeching
To give her princely training, that she may be Manner'd as she is born. [think
Cle. Fear not, my lord, but
Your grace, that fed my country with your corn, [fall upon you,
For which the people's prayers still Must in your child be thought on. If neglection [mon body,
Should therein make me vile, the com-
By you relieved, would force me to my duty:
But if to that my nature need a spur,
The gods revenge it upon me and mine,
To the end of generation!
Per. I believe you;
Your honour and your goodness teach me to 't,
Without your vows. Till she be married, madam, [all
By bright Diana, whom we honour,
Unscissar'd shall this hair of mine remain, [leave.
Though I show ill in 't. So I take my Good madam, make me blessed in your care
In bringing up my child.
Dion. I have one myself,
Who shall not be more dear to my respect
Than yours, my lord. [prayers.
Per. Madam, my thanks and
Cle. We'll bring your grace e'en to the edge o' the shore;
Then give you up to the mask'd Neptune, and
The gentlest winds of heaven.
Per. I will embrace
Your offer. Come, dear'st madam.—O, no tears,
Lychorida, no tears: [grace
Look to your little mistress, on whose
You may depend hereafter.—Come, my lord. [Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—Ephesus. A Room in CERIMON'S House.

Enter CERIMON and THAISA.

Cer. Madam, this letter, and some certain jewels, [are now
Lay with you in your coffer; which
At your command. Know you the character?
Thai. It is my lord's.
That I was shipp'd at sea, I well remember, [there
Even on my eaning time; but whether Delivered or no, by the holy gods,
I cannot rightly say. But since King Pericles, [again,
My wedded lord, I ne'er shall see
A vestal livery will I take me to,
And never more have joy.
Cer. Madam, if this you purpose as you speak,
Diana's temple is not distant far,

Where you may abide till your date expire. [mine
Moreover, if you please, a niece of Shall there attend you. [that 's all;
Thai. My recompense is thanks, Yet my good will is great, though the gift small. [Exeunt.

ACT IV.

Enter GOWER.

Gow. Imagine Pericles arrived at Tyre,
Welcomed and settled to his own desire. [Ephesus,
His woeful queen we leave at Unto Diana there a votaress.
Now to Marina bend your mind,
Whom our fast-growing scene must find
At Tarsus, and by Cleon train'd
In music, letters; who hath gain'd
Of education all the grace,
Which makes her both the heart and place
Of general wonder. But, alack,
That monster Envy, oft the wrack
Of earned praise, Marina's life
Seeks to take off by Treason's knife.
And in this kind hath our Cleon
One daughter, and a wench full grown, [maid
Even ripe for marriage-rite; this
Hight Philoten: and it is said
For certain in our story, she Would ever with Marina be:
Be 't when she weaved the sleided silk [as milk;
With fingers long, small, white
Or when she would with sharp neeld wound
The cambric, which she made more sound
By hurting it; or when to the lute [bird mute,
She sung, and made the night-
That still records with moan; or when [pen
She would with rich and constant
Vail to her mistress Dian; still
This Philoten contends in skill
With absolute Marina: so
With the dove of Paphos might the crow
Vie feathers white. Marina gets
All praises, which are paid as debts,
And not as given. This so darks
In Philoten all graceful marks,
That Cleon's wife, with envy rare, [pare
A present murderer does pre-
For good Marina, that her daughter [slaughter.
Might stand peerless by this
The sooner her vile thoughts to stead,
Lychorida, our nurse, is dead:
And cursed Dionyza hath
The pregnant instrument of wrath [born event
Prest for this blow. The un-
I do commend to your content:
Only I carry winged Time
Post on the lame feet of my rhyme;
Which never could I so convey,
Unless your thoughts went on my way.
Dionyza does appear,
With Leonine, a murderer. [Exit.

SCENE I.—Tarsus. An open Place near the Sea-shore.

Enter DIONYZA and LEONINE.

Dion. Thy oath remember; thou hast sworn to do 't:
'Tis but a blow, which never shall be known. [so soon,
Thou canst not do a thing i' the world
To yield thee so much profit. Let not conscience, [thy bosom,
Which is but cold, inflaming love i'
Inflame too nicely; nor let pity, which Even women have cast off, melt thee, but be
A soldier to thy purpose.
Leon. I'll do 't; but yet she is a goodly creature.
Dion. The fitter, then, the gods should have her. Here
Weeping she comes for her old nurse's death.
Thou art resolved?
Leon. I am resolved.

Enter MARINA, with a basket of flowers.

Mar. No, I will rob Tellus of her weed, [yellows, blues,
To strew thy green with flowers: the
The purple violets, and marigolds,

Shall, as a carpet, hang upon thy grave,
While summer-days do last. Ay me! poor maid, [died,
Born in a tempest, when my mother
This world to me is like a lasting storm,
Whirring me from my friends.
Dion. How now, Marina! why do you keep alone?
How chance my daughter is not with you? Do not [you have Consume your blood with sorrowing;
A nurse of me. Lord, how your favour's changed [come;
With this unprofitable woe! Come,
Give me your wreath of flowers, ere the sea mar it.
Walk forth with Leonine; the air is quick there, [ach. Come,
And it pierces and sharpens the stom-
Leonine, take her by the arm, walk with her.
Mar. No, I pray you;
I'll not bereave you of your servant.
Dion. Come, come;
I love the king your father, and yourself, [every day
With more than foreign heart. We Expect him here: when he shall come, and find
Our paragon to all reports thus blasted,
He will repent the breadth of his great voyage; [have ta'en
Blame both my lord and me, that we
No care to your best courses. Go, I pray you, [reserve
Walk, and be cheerful once again;
That excellent complexion, which did steal [for me;
The eyes of young and old. Care not
I can go home alone.
Mar. Well, I will go;
But yet I have no desire to it.
Dion. Come, come, I know 'tis good for you. [least:
Walk half an hour, Leonine, at the Remember what I have said.
Leon. I warrant you, madam.
Dion. I'll leave you, my sweet lady, for awhile; [your blood:
Pray you, walk softly, do not heat
What! I must have a care of you.
Mar. Thanks, sweet madam.
[Exit DIONYZA.
Is this wind westerly that blows?
Leon. South-west.
Mar. When I was born, the wind was north.
Leon. Was't so?
Mar. My father, as nurse said, did never fear, [ors, galling
But cried 'Good seamen!' to the sail-
His kingly hands with haling of the ropes; [a sea
And, clasping to the mast, endured
That almost burst the deck.
Leon. When was this?
Mar. When I was born:
Never was waves nor wind more violent; [off
And from the ladder-tackle washes
A canvas-climber. 'Ha!' says one, 'wilt out?' [skip
And with a dropping industry they
From stem to stern: the boatswain whistles, and [confusion.
The master calls, and trebles their Leon. Come, say your prayers.
Mar. What mean you?
Leon. If you require a little space for prayer,
I grant it: pray; but be not tedious,
For the gods are quick of ear, and I am sworn
To do my work with haste.
Mar. Why will you kill me?
Leon. To satisfy my lady.
Mar. Why would she have me kill'd? [troth,
Now, as I can remember, by my
I never did her hurt in all my life;
I never spake bad word, nor did ill turn [la,
To any living creature: believe me,
I never kill'd a mouse, nor hurt a fly:
I trod upon a worm against my will,
But I wept for it. How have I offended, [profit,
Wherein my death might yield her any
Or my life imply her any danger?
Leon. My commission
Is not to reason of the deed, but do it.
Mar. You will not do 't for all the world, I hope. [foreshow
You are well favour'd, and your looks
You have a gentle heart. I saw you lately, [that fought:
When you caught hurt in parting two
Good sooth, it show'd well in you; do so now: [between,
Your lady seeks my life; come you
And save poor me, the weaker.
Leon. I am sworn,
And will dispatch.
[He seizes her.

Enter Pirates, whilst MARINA is struggling.

First Pirate. Hold, villain!

[LEONINE runs away.

Sec. Pirate. A prize! a prize!

Third Pirate. Half-part, mates, half-part. Come, let's have her aboard suddenly.

[Exeunt Pirates with MARINA.

Re-enter LEONINE.

Leon. These roguing thieves serve the great pirate Valdes;
And they have seized Marina. Let her go:
There's no hope she'll return. I'll swear she 's dead,
And thrown into the sea. But I'll see further; [selves upon her,
Perhaps they will but please them-
Not carry her aboard. If she remain,
Whom they have ravish'd must by me be slain. [Exit.

SCENE II.—Mitylene. A Room in a Brothel.

Enter Pandar, Bawd, and BOULT.

Pand. Boult!

Boult. Sir?

Pand. Search the market narrowly; Mitylene is full of gallants. We lost too much money this mart by being too wenchless.

Bawd. We were never so much out of creatures. We have but poor three, and they can do no more than they can do; and they with continual action are even as good as rotten.

Pand. Therefore let 's have fresh ones, whate'er we pay for them. If there be not a conscience to be used in every trade, we shall never prosper.

Bawd. Thou sayest true: 'tis not the bringing up of poor bastards,—as, I think, I have brought up some eleven—

Boult. Ay, to eleven; and brought them down again. But shall I search the market?

Bawd. What else, man? The stuff we have, a strong wind will blow it to pieces, they are so pitifully sodden.

Pand. Thou sayest true; they're too unwholesome, o' conscience. The poor Transylvanian is dead, that lay with the little baggage.

Boult. Ay, she quickly pooped him; she made him roast-meat for worms. But I'll go search the market. [Exit.

Pand. Three or four thousand chequins were as pretty a proportion to live quietly, and so give over.

Bawd. Why to give over, I pray you? is it a shame to get when we are old?

Pand. O, our credit comes not in like the commodity, nor the commodity wages not with the danger: therefore, if in our youths we could pick up some pretty estate, 'twere not amiss to keep our door hatched. Besides, the sore terms we stand upon with the gods will be strong with us for giving over.

Bawd. Come, other sorts offend as well as we.

Pand. As well as we! ay, and better too; we offend worse. Neither is our profession any trade; it 's no calling. But here comes Boult.

Re-enter BOULT, with the Pirates and MARINA.

Boult. [To MARINA.] Come your ways. My masters, you say she 's a virgin? [not.

First Pirate. O, sir, we doubt it

Boult. Master, I have gone thorough for this piece, you see: if you like her, so; if not, I have lost my earnest.

Bawd. Boult, has she any qualities?

Boult. She has a good face, speaks well, and has excellent good clothes: there 's no further necessity of qualities can make her be refused.

Bawd. What 's her price, Boult?

Boult. I cannot be bated one doit of a thousand pieces.

Pand. Well, follow me, my masters, you shall have your money presently. Wife, take her in; instruct her what she has to do, that she may not be raw in her entertainment.

[Exeunt Pandar and Pirates.

Bawd. Boult, take you the marks of her; the colour of her hair, complexion, height, age, with warrant of her virginity; and cry 'He that will give most shall have her first.' Such a maidenhead were no cheap thing, if men were as they have been. Get this done as I command you.

Boult. Performance shall follow. [Exit.

Mar. Alack, that Leonine was so slack, so slow!
He should have struck, not spoke; or that these pirates,
Not enough barbarous, had not o'erboard thrown me
For to seek my mother! [one?

Bawd. Why lament you, pretty

Mar. That I am pretty.

Bawd. Come, the gods have done their part in you.

Mar. I accuse them not.

Bawd. You are lit into my hands, where you are like to live.

Mar. The more my fault [to die.
To 'scape his hands where I was like

Bawd. Ay, and you shall live in pleasure.

Mar. No.

Bawd. Yes, indeed shall you, and taste gentlemen of all fashions. You shall fare well; you shall have the difference of all complexions. What! do you stop your ears?

Mar. Are you a woman?

Bawd. What would you have me be, an I be not a woman? [woman.

Mar. An honest woman, or not a

Bawd. Marry, whip thee, gosling: I think I shall have something to do with you. Come, you're a young foolish sapling, and must be bowed as I would have you.

Mar. The gods defend me!

Bawd. If it please the gods to defend you by men, then men must comfort you, men must feed you, men must stir you up. Boult 's returned.

Re-enter BOULT.

Now, sir, hast thou cried her through the market?

Boult. I have cried her almost to the number of her hairs; I have drawn her picture with my voice.

Bawd. And I prithee tell me, how dost thou find the inclination of the people, especially of the younger sort?

Boult. Faith, they listened to me as they would have hearkened to their father's testament. There was a Spaniard's mouth so watered, that he went to bed to her very description.

Bawd. We shall have him here to-morrow with his best ruff on.

Boult. To-night, to-night. But, mistress, do you know the French knight that cowers i' the hams?

Bawd. Who? Monsieur Veroles?

Boult. Ay, he: he offered to cut a caper at the proclamation; but he made a groan at it, and swore he would see her to-morrow.

Bawd. Well, well; as for him, he brought his disease hither: here he does but repair it. I know he will come in our shadow, to scatter his crowns in the sun.

Boult. Well, if we had of every nation a traveller, we should lodge them with this sign.

Bawd. [To MARINA.] Pray you, come hither awhile. You have fortunes coming upon you. Mark me: you must seem to do that fearfully which you commit willingly; to despise profit where you have most gain. To weep that you live as you do makes pity in your lovers: seldom but that pity begets you a good opinion, and that opinion a mere profit.

Mar. I understand you not.

Boult. O, take her home, mistress, take her home: these blushes of hers must be quenched with some present practice.

Bawd. Thou sayest true, i' faith, so they must; for your bride goes to that with shame which is her way to go with warrant.

Boult. Faith, some do, and some do not. But, mistress, if I have bargained for the joint,— [the spit.

Bawd. Thou mayst cut a morsel off

Boult. I may so.

Bawd. Who should deny it? Come, young one, I like the manner of your garments well.

Boult. Ay, by my faith, they shall not be changed yet.

Bawd. Boult, spend thou that in the town: report what a sojourner we have; you'll lose nothing by custom. When Nature framed this piece, she meant thee a good turn; therefore say what a paragon she is, and thou hast the harvest out of thine own report.

Boult. I warrant you, mistress, thunder shall not so awake the beds of eels as my giving out her beauty stir up the lewdly-inclined. I'll bring home some to-night.

Bawd. [To MARINA.] Come your ways; follow me.

Mar. If fires be hot, knives sharp, or waters deep,
Untied I still my virgin knot will keep.
Diana, aid my purpose!

Bawd. What have we to do with Diana? Pray you, will you go with us? [Exeunt.

SCENE III.—Tarsus. A Room in CLEON'S House.

Enter CLEON and DIONYZA.

Dion. Why, are you foolish? Can it be undone? [slaughter

Cle. O Dionyza, such a piece of
The sun and moon ne'er look'd upon!

Dion. I think
You'll turn a child again.

Cle. Were I chief lord of all this spacious world,
I'd give it to undo the deed. O lady,
Much less in blood than virtue, yet a princess
To equal any single crown o' the earth
I' the justice of compare! O villain Leonine!
Whom thou hast poison'd too:
If thou hadst drunk to him, 't had been a kindness [thou say
Becoming well thy fact: what canst
When noble Pericles shall demand his child? [not the Fates,

Dion. That she is dead. Nurses are
To foster it, nor ever to preserve.
She died at night; I'll say so. Who can cross it?
Unless you play the pious innocent,
And for an honest attribute cry out
'She died by foul play.'

Cle. O, go to. Well, well,
Of all the faults beneath the heavens, the gods
Do like this worst.

Dion. Be one of those that think
The petty wrens of Tarsus will fly hence,
And open this to Pericles. I do shame
To think of what a noble strain you are,
And of how coward a spirit.

Cle. To such proceeding
Who ever but his approbation added,
Though not his pre-consent, he did not flow
From honourable sources.

Dion. Be it so, then:
Yet none does know, but you, how she came dead, [gone.
Nor none can know, Leonine being
She did distain my child, and stood between [look on her,
Her and her fortunes: none would
But cast their gazes on Marina's face;
Whilst ours was blurted at and held a malkin [me thorough;
Not worth the time of day. It pierced
And though you call my course unnatural, [I find
You not your child well loving, yet
It greets me as an enterprise of kindness
Perform'd to your sole daughter.

Cle. Heavens forgive it!

Dion. And as for Pericles,
What should he say? We wept after her hearse, [ment
And even yet we mourn: her monu-
Is almost finish'd, and her epitaphs
In glittering golden characters express
A general praise to her, and care in us
At whose expense 'tis done.

Cle. Thou art like the harpy,
Which, to betray, dost, with thine angel's face,
Seize with thine eagle's talons.

Dion. You are like one that superstitiously [kills the flies;
Doth swear to the gods that winter
But yet I know you'll do as I advise.
[Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—Before the Monument of MARINA at Tarsus.

Enter GOWER.

Gow. Thus time we waste, and longest leagues make short;
Sail seas in cockles, have an wish but for 't;
Making, to take your imagination, [region.
From bourn to bourn, region to
By you being pardon'd, we commit no crime
To use one language in each several clime
Where our scenes seem to live. I do beseech you
To learn of me, who stand i' the gaps to teach you [cles
The stages of our story. Peri-
Is now again thwarting the wayward seas, [knight,
Attended on by many a lord and

To see his daughter, all his life's delight.
Old Escanes, whom Helicanus late
Advanced in time to great and high estate,
Is left to govern. Bear you it in mind,
Old Helicanus goes along behind.
Well-sailing ships and bounteous winds have brought
This king to Tarsus,—think his pilot thought;
So with his steerage shall your thoughts grow on,—
To fetch his daughter home, who first is gone.
Like motes and shadows see them move awhile; [cile.
Your ears unto your eyes I'll recon-

DUMB SHOW.

Enter PERICLES, with his Train, at one door; CLEON and DIONYZA at the other. CLEON shows PERICLES the Tomb of MARINA; whereat PERICLES makes lamentation, puts on sackcloth, and in a mighty passion departs. Then exeunt CLEON, DIONYZA, and the rest.

See how belief may suffer by foul show! [true old woe;
This borrow'd passion stands for
And Pericles, in sorrow all devour'd,
With sighs shot through, and biggest tears o'er-shower'd,
Leaves Tarsus and again embarks. He swears
Never to wash his face, nor cut his hairs: [He bears
He puts on sackcloth, and to sea.
A tempest, which his mortal vessel tears, [please you wit
And yet he rides it out. Now
The epitaph is for Marina writ
By wicked Dionyza.

[Reads the Inscription on MARINA'S Monument.

'The fairest, sweet'st, and best, lies here,
Who wither'd in her spring of year.
She was of Tyrus the king's daughter,
On whom foul Death had made this slaughter;
Marina was she call'd; and at her birth,
Thetis, being proud, swallow'd some part o' the earth: [flow'd,
Therefore the earth, fearing to be o'er-
Hath Thetis' birth-child on the heavens bestow'd: [never stint,
Wherefore she does, and swears she'll
Make raging battery upon shores of flint.'
No visor does become black villany [tery.
So well as soft and tender flat-
Let Pericles believe his daughter 's dead, [dered
And bear his courses to be or-
By Lady Fortune; while our scene must play
His daughter's woe and heavy well-a-day [then,
In her unholy service. Patience,
And think you now are all in Mitylen. [Exit.

SCENE V.—Mitylene. A Street before the Brothel.

Enter, from the Brothel, two Gentlemen.

First Gent. Did you ever hear the like?

Sec. Gent. No, nor never shall do in such a place as this, she being once gone.

First Gent. But to have divinity preached there! did you ever dream of such a thing?

Sec. Gent. No, no. Come, I am for no more bawdy-houses: shall 's go hear the vestals sing?

First Gent. I'll do any thing now that is virtuous; but I am out of the road of rutting for ever. [Exeunt.

SCENE VI.—The Same. A Room in the Brothel.

Enter Pandar, Bawd, and BOULT.

Pand. Well, I had rather than twice the worth of her she had ne'er come here.

Bawd. Fie, fie upon her! she 's able to freeze the god Priapus, and undo a whole generation. We must either get her ravished, or be rid of her. When she should do for clients her fitment, and do me the kindness of our profession, she has me her quirks, her reasons, her master reasons, her prayers, her knees; that she would make a puritan of the devil, if he should cheapen a kiss of her.

Boult. Faith, I must ravish her, or she'll disfurnish us of all our cavaliers, and make all our swearers priests.

Pand. Now, the pox upon her green-sickness for me!

Bawd. Faith, there's no way to be rid on 't but by the way to the pox. Here comes the Lord Lysimachus, disguised.

Boult. We should have both lord and lown, if the peevish baggage would but give way to customers.

Enter LYSIMACHUS.

Lys. How now! How a dozen of virginities? [honour!

Bawd. Now, the gods to-bless your

Boult. I am glad to see your honour in good health.

Lys. You may so; 'tis the better for you that your resorters stand upon sound legs. How now! wholesome iniquity, have you that a man may deal withal, and defy the surgeon?

Bawd. We have here one, sir, if she would—but there never came her like in Mitylene.

Lys. If she 'd do the deed of darkness, thou wouldst say.

Bawd. Your honour knows what 'tis to say well enough.

Lys. Well, call forth, call forth.

Boult. For flesh and blood, sir, white and red, you shall see a rose; and she were a rose indeed, if she had but—

Lys. What, prithee?

Bout. O, sir, I can be modest.

Lys. That dignifies the renown of a bawd, no less than it gives a good report to a number to be chaste.

[Exit BOULT.

Bawd. Here comes that which grows to the stalk; never plucked yet, I can assure you.

Re-enter BOULT with MARINA.

Is she not a fair creature?

Lys. Faith, she would serve after a long voyage at sea. Well, there 's for you: leave us.

Bawd. I beseech your honour, give me leave: a word, and I'll have done presently.

Lys. I beseech you, do.

Bawd. [Aside to MARINA.] First, I would have you note, this is an honourable man.

Mar. I desire to find him so, that I may worthily note him.

Bawd. Next, he 's the governor of this country, and a man whom I am bound to.

Mar. If he govern the country, you are bound to him indeed; but how honourable he is in that, I know not.

Bawd. Pray you, without any more virginal fencing, will you use him kindly? He will line your apron with gold.

Mar. What he will do graciously, I will thankfully receive.

Lys. Ha' you done?

Bawd. My lord, she 's not paced yet: you must take some pains to work her to your manage. Come, we will leave his honour and her together.

Lys. Go thy ways.

[Exeunt Bawd, Pandar, and BOULT.

Now, pretty one, how long have you been at this trade?

Mar. What trade, sir?

Lys. Why, I cannot name 't but I shall offend.

Mar. I cannot be offended with my trade. Please you to name it.

Lys. How long have you been of this profession?

Mar. Ever since I can remember.

Lys. Did you go to it so young? Were you a gamester at five or at seven?

Mar. Earlier too, sir, if now I be one.

Lys. Why, the house you dwell in proclaims you to be a creature of sale.

Mar. Do you know this house to be a place of such resort, and will come into it? I hear say you are of honourable parts, and are the governor of this place.

Lys. Why, hath your principal made known unto you who I am?

Mar. Who is my principal?

Lys. Why, your herb-woman; she that sets seeds and roots of shame and iniquity. O, you have heard something of my power, and so stand aloof for more serious wooing. But I protest to thee, pretty one, my authority shall not see thee, or else look friendly upon thee. Come, bring me to some private place: come, come. [show it now;

Mar. If you were born to honour,
If put upon you, make the judgment good
That thought you worthy of it.

Lys. How 's this? how 's this?
Some more; be sage.

Mar. For me,
That am a maid, though most ungentle
Fortune [since I came,
Hath placed me in this sty, where,

Diseases have been sold dearer than physic,
O, that the gods [low'd place,
Would set me free from this unhal-
Though they did change me to the meanest bird
That flies i' the purer air!

Lys. I did not think
Thou couldst have spoke so well; ne'er dream'd thou couldst.
Had I brought hither a corrupted mind,
Thy speech had alter'd it. Hold, here's gold for thee: [goest,
Persever still in that clear way thou
And the gods strengthen thee!

Mar. The gods preserve you!

Lys. For me, be you thoughten
That I came with no ill intent; for to me [vilely.
The very doors and windows savour
Farewell. Thou art a piece of virtue, and [noble.
I doubt not but thy training hath been
Hold, here's more gold for thee.
A curse upon him, die he like a thief,
That robs thee of thy goodness! If thou dost [good.
Hear from me, it shall be for thy

Re-enter BOULT.

Boult. I beseech your honour, one piece for me.

Lys. Avaunt, thou damned door-keeper! Your house, [up,
But for this virgin that doth prop it
Would sink and overwhelm you all. Away! [Exit.

Boult. How 's this? We must take another course with you. If your peevish chastity, which is not worth a breakfast in the cheapest country under the cope, shall undo a whole household, let me be gelded like a spaniel. Come your ways.

Mar. Whither would you have me?

Boult. I must have your maidenhead taken off, or the common hangman shall execute it. Come your ways. We'll have no more gentlemen driven away. Come your ways, I say.

Re-enter Bawd.

Bawd. How now! what 's the matter?

Boult. Worse and worse, mistress; she has here spoken holy words to the Lord Lysimachus.

Bawd. O abominable!

Boult. She makes our profession as it were to stink afore the face of the gods.

Bawd. Marry, hang her up for ever!

Boult. The nobleman would have dealt with her like a nobleman, and she sent him away as cold as a snowball; saying his prayers too.

Bawd. Boult, take her away; use her at thy pleasure: crack the glass of her virginity, and make the rest malleable.

Boult. An if she were a thornier piece of ground than she is, she shall be ploughed.

Mar. Hark, hark, you gods!

Bawd. She conjures: away with her! Would she had never come within my doors! Marry, hang you! She 's born to undo us. Will you not go the way of womenkind? Marry, come up, my dish of chastity with rosemary and bays! [Exit.

Boult. Come, mistress; come your ways with me.

Mar. Whither would you have me?

Boult. To take from you the jewel you hold so dear. [first.

Mar. Prithee, tell me one thing

Boult. Come now, your one thing.

Mar. What canst thou wish thine enemy to be?

Boult. Why, I could wish him to be my master, or rather, my mistress.

Mar. Neither of these are yet so bad as thou art, [mand.
Since they do better thee in their com-
Thou hold'st a place, for which the pained'st fiend [change;
Of hell would not in reputation
Thou art the damned door-keeper to every [Tib;
Coystril that comes inquiring for his
To the choleric fisting of each rogue thy ear
Is liable; thy very food is such
As hath been belch'd on by infected lungs.

Boult. What would you have me do? go to the wars, would you? where a man may serve seven years for the loss of a leg, and have not money enough in the end to buy him a wooden one?

Mar. Do any thing but this thou doest. Empty [of filth;
Old receptacles, or common sewers,

Serve by indenture to the common hangman: [this;
Any of these ways are yet better than
For what thou professest, a baboon, could he speak,
Would own a name too dear. O, that the gods [me!
Would safely from this place deliver
Here, here is gold for thee.
If that thy master would gain aught
by me, [and dance,
Proclaim that I can sing, weave, sew,
With other virtues, which I'll keep from boast; [teach.
And I will undertake all these to
I doubt not but this populous city will Yield many scholars.

Boult. But can you teach all this you speak of?

Mar. Prove that I cannot, take me home again,
And prostitute me to the basest groom
That doth frequent your house.

Boult. Well, I will see what I can do for thee: if I can place thee, I will.

Mar. But amongst honest women.

Boult. Faith, my acquaintance lies little amongst them. But since my master and mistress have bought you, there 's no going but by their consent: therefore I will make them acquainted with your purpose, and I doubt not but I shall find them tractable enough. Come, I'll do for thee what I can; come your ways. [Exeunt.

ACT V.

Enter GOWER.

Gow. Marina thus the brothel 'scapes, and chances [story says.
Into an honest house, our
She sings like one immortal, and she dances [lays;
As goddess-like to her admired
Deep clerks she dumbs; and with her neeld composes
Nature's own shape, of bud,
bird, branch, or berry,
That even her art sisters the natural roses;
Her inkle, silk, twin with the
rubied cherry: [race,
That pupils lacks she none of noble
Who pour their bounty on her;
and her gain
She gives the cursed bawd. Here
we her place;
And to her father turn our thoughts again,
Where we left him, on the sea.
We there him lost;
Whence, driven before the winds, he is arrived
Here where his daughter dwells;
and on this coast
Suppose him now at anchor.
The city strived
God Neptune's annual feast to keep: from whence Lysimachus our Tyrian ship
espies, [rich expense;
His banners sable, trimm'd with
And to him in his barge with fervour hies.
In your supposing once more put your sight; [the bark:
Of heavy Pericles think this
Where what is done in action, more, if might,
Shall be discover'd; please you, sit and hark. [Exit.

SCENE I.—On board PERICLES' Ship, off Mitylene. A Pavilion on deck, with a curtain before it; PERICLES within it, reclined on a couch. A Barge lying beside the Tyrian Vessel.

Enter two Sailors, one belonging to the Tyrian Vessel, the other to the Barge; to them HELICANUS.

Tyr. Sail. [To the Sailor of Mitylene.] Where 's the Lord Helicanus? he can resolve you.
O, here he is.
[To HELICANUS] Sir, there 's a barge
put off from Mitylene,
And in it is Lysimachus the governor,
Who craves to come aboard. What is your will?

Hel. That he have his. Call up some gentlemen. [calls.

Tyr. Sail. Ho, gentlemen! my lord

Enter two or three Gentlemen.

First Gent. Doth your lordship call?

Hel. Gentlemen, there 's some of worth would come aboard;
I pray ye, greet them fairly.

[The Gentlemen and the two Sailors descend, and go on board the Barge.

Enter, from thence, LYSIMACHUS and Lords; with the Gentlemen and the two Sailors.

Tyr. Sail. Sir, [would,
This is the man that can, in aught you
Resolve you. [preserve you!
Lys. Hail, reverend sir! the gods
Hel. And you, sir, to outlive the age I am,
And die as I would do.
Lys. You wish me well.
Being on shore, honouring of Neptune's triumphs, [us,
Seeing this goodly vessel ride before
I made to it, to know of whence you are.
Hel. First, sir, what is your place?
Lys. I am governor of this place you lie before.
Hel. Sir,
Our vessel is of Tyre, in it the king;
A man who for this three months hath not spoken
To any one, nor taken sustenance
But to prorogue his grief.
Lys. Upon what ground is his distemperature? [repeat;
Hel. Sir, it would be too tedious to
But the main grief of all springs from the loss
Of a beloved daughter and a wife.
Lys. May we not see him?
Hel. You may; [speak
But bootless is your sight: he will not
To any.
Lys. Yet let me obtain my wish.
Hel. Behold him. [PERICLES discovered.] This was a goodly person,
Till the disaster that, one mortal night,
Drove him to this. [preserve you!
Lys. Sir king, all hail! the gods
Hail, royal sir! [to you.
Hel. It is in vain; he will not speak
First Lord. Sir, [wager,
We have a maid in Mitylen, I durst
Would win some words of him.
Lys. 'Tis well bethought.
She, questionless, with her sweet harmony [allure,
And other choice attractions, would
And make a battery through his deafen'd parts,
Which now are midway stopp'd:
She is all happy as the fairest of all,
And, with her fellow maids, is now upon
The leafy shelter that abuts against
The island's side.

[Whispers a Lord, who goes off in the Barge of LYSIMACHUS.

Hel. Sure, all 's effectless; yet nothing we'll omit
That bears recovery's name. But, since your kindness
We have stretch'd thus far, let us beseech you further,
That for our gold we may provision have,
Wherein we are not destitute for want,
But weary for the staleness.
Lys. O, sir, a courtesy
Which if we should deny, the most just gods
For every graff would send a caterpillar,
And so afflict our province. Yet once more [cause
Let me entreat to know at large the
Of your king's sorrow.
Hel. Sit, sir, I will recount it;—
But, see, I am prevented.

Re-enter, from the Barge, Lord, with MARINA, and a young Lady.

Lys. O, here is
The lady that I sent for. Welcome, fair one!—
Is 't not a goodly presence?
Hel. A gallant lady.
Lys. She 's such a one, that, were I well assured [stock,
She came of gentle kind and noble
I'd wish no better choice, and think me rarely wed. [bounty
Fair one, all goodness that consists in
Expect even here, where is a kingly patient: [feat
If that thy prosperous and artificial
Can draw him but to answer thee in aught, [pay
Thy sacred physic shall receive such
As thy desires can wish.
Mar. Sir, I will use
My utmost skill in his recovery,
Provided [maid
That none but I and my companion
Be suffer'd to come near him.
Lys. Come, let us leave her;
And the gods make her prosperous!
[MARINA sings.
Lys. Mark'd he your music?
Mar. No, nor look'd on us.
Lys. See, she will speak to him.
Mar. Hail, sir! my lord, lend ear.
Per. Hum, ha!
Mar. I am a maid,
My lord, that ne'er before invited eyes,

But have been gazed on like a comet? she speaks,
My lord, that, may be, hath endured [a grief
Might equal yours, if both were justly weigh'd. [my state,
Though wayward Fortune did malign
My derivation was from ancestors
Who stood equivalent with mighty kings: [age,
But Time hath rooted out my parent-
And to the world and awkward casual-ties [desist;
Bound me in servitude. [Aside] I will
But there is something glows upon my cheek, [he speak.'
And whispers in mine ear 'Go not till
Per. My fortunes—parentage—good parentage—
To equal mine!—was it not thus? what say you?
Mar. I said, my lord, if you did know my parentage,
You would not do me violence.
Per. I do think so. Pray you, turn your eyes upon me.
You are like something that—What countrywoman?
Here of these shores?
Mar. No, nor of any shores:
Yet I was mortally brought forth, and am
No other than I appear.
Per. I am great with woe, and shall deliver weeping.
My dearest wife was like this maid, and such a one
My daughter might have been: my queen's square brows;
Her stature to an inch; as wand-like straight; [like
As silver-voiced; her eyes as jewel-
And cased as richly; in pace another Juno;
Who starves the ears she feeds, and makes them hungry,
The more she gives them speech.—Where do you live?
Mar. Where I am but a stranger: from the deck
You may discern the place.
Per. Where were you bred?
And how achieved you these endowments, which
You make more rich to owe?
Mar. If I should tell my history, it would seem Like lies disdain'd in the reporting.
Per. Prithee, speak:
Falseness cannot come from thee, for thou look'st [palace
Modest as Justice, and thou seem'st a
For the crown'd Truth to dwell in: I'll believe thee, [tion
And make my senses credit thy rela-
To points that seem impossible; for thou look'st [thy friends?
Like one I loved indeed. What were Didst thou not say, when I did push thee back—
Which was when I perceived thee—that thou camest
From good descending?
Mar. So indeed I did.
Per. Report thy parentage. I think thou said'st [injury,
Thou hadst been toss'd from wrong to
And that thou thought'st thy griefs might equal mine,
If both were open'd.
Mar. Some such thing
I said, and said no more but what my thoughts
Did warrant me was likely.
Per. Tell thy story;
If thine consider'd prove the thousandth part [and I
Of my endurance, thou art a man,
Have suffer'd like a girl: yet thou dost look [and smiling
Like Patience gazing on kings' graves,
Extremity out of act. What were thy friends?
How lost thou them? Thy name, my most kind virgin?
Recount, I do beseech thee: come, sit by me.
Mar. My name, sir, is Marina.
Per. O, I am mock'd,
And thou by some incensed god sent hither
To make the world laugh at me.
Mar. Patience, good sir,
Or here I'll cease.
Per Nay, I'll be patient.
Thou little know'st how thou dost startle me,
To call thyself Marina.
Mar. The name
Was given me by one that had some power,
My father, and a king.
Per. How! a king's daughter?
And call'd Marina? [me;
Mar. You said you would believe

But, not to be a troubler of your peace,
I will end here.
Per. But are you flesh and blood?
Have you a working pulse? and are no fairy?
No motion?—Well; speak on. Where were you born?
And wherefore call'd Marina?
Mar. Call'd Marina
For I was born at sea.
Per. At sea! what mother?
Mar. My mother was the daughter of a king;
Who died the very minute I was born,
As my good nurse Lychorida hath oft
Deliver'd weeping.
Per. O, stop there a little!
[Aside] This is the rarest dream that e'er dull sleep
Did mock sad fools withal: this can not be:
My daughter 's buried. [To MARINA] Well: where were you bred?
I'll hear you more, to the bottom of your story,
And never interrupt you.
Mar. You'll scarce believe me; 'twere best I did give o'er.
Per. I will believe you by the syllable
Of what you shall deliver. Yet, give me leave:
How came you in these parts? where were you bred?
Mar. The king my father did in Tarsus leave me;
Till cruel Cleon, with his wicked wife,
Did seek to murder me: and having woo'd
A villain to attempt it, who having drawn to do 't,
A crew of pirates came and rescued me;
Brought me to Mitylene. But, good sir,
Whither will you have me? Why do you weep? It may be,
You think me an impostor: no, good faith;
I am the daughter to King Pericles,
If good King Pericles be.
Per. Ho, Helicanus!
Hel. Calls my lord?
Per. Thou art a grave and noble counsellor,
Most wise in general: tell me, if thou canst,
What this maid is, or what is like to be,
That thus hath made me weep?
Hel. I know not; but Here is the regent, sir, of Mitylene,
Speaks nobly of her.
Lys. She would never tell
Her parentage; being demanded that,
She would sit still and weep.
Per. O Helicanus, strike me, honour'd sir;
Give me a gash, put me to present pain;
Lest this great sea of joys rushing upon me
O'erbear the shores of my mortality,
And drown me with their sweetness. O, come hither,
Thou that beget'st him that did thee beget;
Thou that wast born at sea, buried at Tarsus,
And found at sea again! O Helicanus,
Down on thy knees; thank the holy gods as loud
As thunder threatens us: this is Marina.—
Which was thy mother's name? tell me but that,
For truth can never be confirm'd enough,
Though doubts did ever sleep.
Mar. First, sir, I pray,
What is your title?
Per. I am Pericles of Tyre: but tell me now
My drown'd queen's name,—as in the rest you said
Thou hast been godlike perfect,—thou'rt heir of kingdoms, and
And mother-like to Pericles thy father.
Mar. Is it no more to be your daughter than
To say my mother's name was Thaisa?
Thaisa was my mother, who did end
The minute I began.
Per. Now, blessing on thee! rise; thou art my child.
Give me fresh garments. Mine own, Helicanus;
She is not dead at Tarsus, as she should have been,
By savage Cleon: she shall tell all; thee
When thou shalt kneel, and justify in knowledge
She is thy very princess.—Who is this?
Hel. Sir, 'tis the Governor of Mitylene,
Who, hearing of your melancholy state,
Did come to see you.
Per. I embrace you, sir.
Give me my robes. I am wild in my beholding.
O heavens bless my girl! But, hark, what music?
Tell Helicanus, my Marina, tell him
O'er, point by point, for yet he seems to doubt,
How sure you are my daughter.— But, what music?
Hel. My lord, I hear none.

Per. None! [Marina.
The music of the spheres! List, my
Lys. It is not good to cross him; give him way. [hear?
Per. Rarest sounds! Do ye not
Lys. My lord, I hear. [Music.
Per. Most heavenly music!
It nips me unto listening, and thick slumber
Hangs on mine eyelids: let me rest.
[He sleeps.
Lys. A pillow for his head:
So, leave him all. Well, my companion
friends,
If this but answer to my just belief,
I'll well remember you.
[Exeunt all but PERICLES.

DIANA appears to PERICLES as in a vision.

Dia. My temple stands in Ephesus: hie thee thither, [fice,
And do upon mine altar sacri-
There, when my maiden priests are met together,
Before the people all,
Reveal how thou at sea didst lose thy wife:
To mourn thy crosses, with thy daughter's, call [the life.
And give them repetition to Perform my bidding, or thou livest in woe; [bow!
Do it, and happy; by my silver
Awake, and tell thy dream.
[Disappears.
Per. Celestial Dian, goddess argentine,
I will obey thee!—Helicanus!

Re-enter LYSIMACHUS, HELICANUS, and MARINA.

Hel. Sir?
Per. My purpose was for Tarsus,
there to strike
The inhospitable Cleon; but I am
For other service first: toward Ephesus
Turn our blown sails; eftsoons I'll tell thee why.
[To LYSIMACHUS] Shall we refresh us,
sir, upon your shore,
And give you gold for such provision
As our intents will need?
Lys. Sir, [come ashore,
With all my heart; and when you
I have another suit.
Per. You shall prevail,
Were it to woo my daughter; for it, seems
You have been noble towards her.
Lys. Sir, lend your arm.
Per. Come, my Marina. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—Before the Temple of DIANA at Ephesus.

Enter GOWER.

Gow. Now our sands are almost run;
More a little, and then dumb.
This, as my last boon, give me,
For such kindness must relieve me,
That you aptly will suppose
What pageantry, what feats, what shows,
What minstrelsy, and pretty din,
The regent made in Mitylen,
To greet the king. So he thrived,
That he is promised to be wived
To fair Marina; but in no wise
Till he had done his sacrifice,
As Dian bade: whereto being bound, [found.
The interim, pray you, all con-
In feather'd briefness sails are fill'd, [will'd.
And wishes fall out as they're
At Ephesus, the temple see,
Our king and all his company.
That he can hither come so soon,
Is by your fancy's thankful doom.
[Exit.

SCENE III.—The temple of DIANA at Ephesus; THAISA standing near the altar, as High Priestess; a number of Virgins on each side; CERIMON and other Inhabitants of Ephesus attending.

Enter PERICLES, with his Train; LYSIMACHUS, HELICANUS, MARINA, and a Lady.

Per. Hail, Dian! to perform thy just command, [Tyre;
I here confess myself the King of
Who, frighted from my country, did wed
At Pentapolis the fair Thaisa.
At sea in childbed died she, but brought forth [goddess,
A maid-child call'd Marina; who, O
Wears yet thy silver livery. She at Tarsus [teen years
Was nursed with Cleon; whom at four-

He sought to murder; but her better stars [whose shore
Brought her to Mitylene; 'gainst Riding, her fortunes brought the maid aboard us, [brance, she Where, by her own most clear remem-
Made known herself my daughter.
Thai. Voice and favour!
You are, you are—O royal Pericles!—
[Faints.
Per. What means the nun? she dies! help, gentlemen!
Cer. Noble sir,
If you have told Diana's altar true,
This is your wife.
Per. Reverend appearer, no;
I threw her overboard with these very arms. [you.
Cer. Upon this coast, I warrant
Per. 'Tis most certain.
Cer. Look to the lady. O, she 's but o'erjoy'd.
Early one blustering morn this lady was Thrown on this shore. I oped the coffin, and Found there rich jewels; recover'd her, and placed her
Here in Diana's temple.
Per. May we see them?
Cer. Great sir, they shall be brought you to my house, [is Whither I invite you. Look, Thaisa
Recover'd.
Thai. O, let me look!
If he be none of mine, my sanctity
Will to my sense bend no licentious ear,
But curb it, spite of seeing. O, my lord,
Are you not Pericles? Like him you speak, [a tempest,
Like him you are: did you not name
A birth, and death?
Per. The voice of dead Thaisa!
Thai. That Thaisa am I, supposed dead
And drown'd.
Per. Immortal Dian!
Thai. Now I know you better.
When we with tears parted Pentapolis,
The king my father gave you such a ring. [Shows a Ring.
Per. This, this: no more, you gods! your present kindness
Makes my past miseries sports: you shall do well,
That on the touching of her lips I may
Melt, and no more be seen. O, come, be buried
A second time within these arms.
Mar. My heart
Leaps to be gone into my mother's bosom. [Kneels to THAISA.
Per. Look, who kneels here! Flesh of thy flesh, Thaisa;
Thy burden at the sea, and call'd Marina
For she was yielded there.
Thai. Blest, and mine own!
Hel. Hail, madam, and my queen!
Thai. I know you not.
Per. You have heard me say, when I did fly from Tyre,
I left behind an ancient substitute:
Can you remember what I call'd the man?
I have named him oft.
Thai. 'Twas Helicanus then.
Per. Still confirmation: [he.
Embrace him, dear Thaisa; this is Now do I long to hear how you were found; [to thank,
How possibly preserved; and who
Besides the gods, for this great miracle.
Thai. Lord Cerimon, my lord; this man,
Through whom the gods have shown their power; that can
From first to last resolve you.
Per. Reverend sir,
The gods can have no mortal officer
More like a god than you. Will you deliver
How this dead queen re-lives?
Cer. I will, my lord.
Beseech you, first go with me to my house, [found with her;
Where shall be shown you all was
How she came placed here within the temple;
No needful thing omitted.
Per. Pure Diana!
I bless thee for thy vision, and will offer
My night oblations to thee. Thaisa,
This prince, the fair-betrothed of your daughter,
Shall marry her at Pentapolis. [To MARINA] And now,
This ornament [form:
Makes me look dismal will I clip to
And what this fourteen years no razor touch'd, [tify.
To grace thy marriage-day, I'll beau-
Thai. Lord Cerimon hath letters of good credit, sir,

My father's dead.
Per. Heavens make a star of him! Yet there, my queen,
We'll celebrate their nuptials, and ourselves [lowing days:
Will in that kingdom spend our fol-
Our son and daughter shall in Tyrus reign.
Lord Cerimon, we do our longing stay
To hear the rest untold: sir, lead 's the way. [Exeunt.

Enter GOWER.

Gow. In Antiochus and his daughter you have heard
Of monstrous lust the due and just reward:
In Pericles, his queen and daughter, seen,
Although assail'd with fortune fierce and keen,
Virtue preserved from fell destruction's blast,
Led on by heaven, and crown'd with joy at last. [scry
In Helicanus may you well de-
A figure of truth, of faith, of loyalty: [appears
In reverend Cerimon there well
The worth that learned charity aye wears:
For wicked Cleon and his wife, when fame
Had spread their cursed deed, and honour'd name
Of Pericles, to rage the city turn,
That him and his they in his palace burn; [so content
The gods for murder seemed
To punish them; although not done, but meant.
So, on your patience evermore attending,
New joy wait on you! Here our play has ending.
[Exit.

SONGS AND LYRICS FROM THE PLAYS

THE ISLAND

Be not afeard ; the isle is full of noises,
Sounds and sweet airs, that give delight and hurt not.

The Tempest, Act III. Scene II.

ARIEL SINGS

Come unto these yellow sands,
And then take hands :
Courtsied when you have and kiss'd
The wild waves whist,
Foot it featly here and there ;
And, sweet sprites, the burden bear.
Hark, hark !
Bow, wow.
The watch-dogs bark :
Bow, wow.
Hark, hark ! I hear
The strain of strutting chanticlere
Cry, Cock-a-doodle-doo.

The Tempest, Act I. Scene II.

ARIEL TO FERDINAND

Full fathom five thy father lies ;
Of his bones are coral made ;
Those are pearls that were his eyes :
Nothing of him that doth fade,
But doth suffer a sea-change
Into something rich and strange.
Sea-nymphs hourly ring his knell :
Ding-dong.
Hark ! now I hear them,—Ding-dong, bell.

The Tempest, Act I. Scene II.

ARIEL TO GONZALO ASLEEP

While you here do snoring lie,
Open-eyed conspiracy
His time doth take :
If of life you keep a care,
Shake off slumber, and beware :
Awake ! Awake !

The Tempest, Act II. Scene I.

ARIEL

Where the bee sucks, there suck I :
In a cowslip's bell I lie :
There I couch when owls do cry ;
On the bat's back I do fly,
After summer, merrily :
Merrily, merrily shall I live now,
Under the blossom that hangs on the bough.

The Tempest, Act V. Scene I.

ARIEL TO PROSPERO

Before you can say 'Come' and 'go,'
And breathe twice ; and cry 'so, so ;'
Each one, tripping on his toe,
Will be here with mop and mow :
Do you love me, master ? no ?

The Tempest, Act IV. Scene I.

CALIBAN DREAMS OF FREEDOM

No more dams I'll make for fish ;
Nor fetch in firing
At requiring,
Nor scrape trencher, nor wash dish ;
'Ban 'Ban, Ca—Caliban [man.
Has a new master—Get a new

The Tempest, Act II. Scene II.

STEPHANO SINGS

The master, the swabber, the boatswain and I,
The gunner and his mate,
Loved Mall, Meg and Marian and Margery,
But none of us cared for Kate :
For she had a tongue with a tang,
Would cry to a sailor, 'Go hang :'
She loved not the savour of tar nor of pitch, [e'er she did itch :
Yet a tailor might scratch her where-
Then to sea, boys, and let her go hang !

The Tempest, Act II. Scene II.

HONOUR, RICHES, MARRIAGE-BLESSING

Honour, riches, marriage-blessing,
Long continuance, and increasing,
Hourly joys be still upon you !
Juno sings her blessings on you.

Earth's increase, and foison plenty,
Barns and garners never empty ;

Vines with clustering bunches growing;
Plants with goodly burden bowing;

Spring come to you at the farthest
In the very end of harvest!
Scarcity and want shall shun you;
Ceres' blessing so is on you.

The Tempest, Act IV. Scene I.

YOU NYMPHS CALL'D NAIADS

You nymphs, call'd Naiads, of the wandering brooks,
With your sedged crowns and ever-harmless looks,
Leave your crisp channels and on this green land [command;
Answer your summons; Juno does
Come, temperate nymphs, and help to celebrate [late.
A contract of true love; be not too

The Tempest, Act IV. Scene I.

DUMB JEWELS

Dumb jewels often in their silent kind
More than quick words do move a woman's mind.

The Two Gentlemen of Verona, Act III. Scene I.

O, HOW THIS SPRING OF LOVE

O, how this spring of love resembleth
The uncertain glory of an April day;
Which now shows all the beauty of the sun,
And by and by a cloud takes all away!

The Two Gentlemen of Verona, Act I. Scene III.

THE CURRENT

The current that with gentle murmur glides, [tiently doth rage;
Thou know'st, being stopp'd, impa-
But when his fair course is not hindered,
He makes sweet music with the enamell'd stones,
Giving a gentle kiss to every sedge
He overtaketh in his pilgrimage;
And so by many winding nooks he strays,
With willing sport, to the wild ocean.

The Two Gentlemen of Verona, Act II. Scene VII.

VALENTINE TO SILVIA

My thoughts do harbour with my Silvia nightly; [them flying:
And slaves they are to me, that send
O, could their master come and go as lightly, [they are lying.
Himself would lodge where senseless
My herald thoughts in thy pure bosom rest them; [them importune,
While I, their king, that thither
Do curse the grace that with such grace hath bless'd them,
Because myself do want my servants' fortune:
I curse myself, for they are sent by me;
That they should harbour where their lord should be.

The Two Gentlemen of Verona, Act III. Scene I.

SILVIA

Who is Silvia? what is she,
That all our swains commend her?
Holy, fair, and wise is she;
The heaven such grace did lend her,
That she might admired be.

Is she kind, as she is fair?
For beauty lives with kindness:
Love doth to her eyes repair,
To help him of his blindness;
And, being help'd, inhabits there.

Then to Silvia let us sing,
That Silvia is excelling;
She excels each mortal thing
Upon the dull earth dwelling:
To her let us garlands bring.

The Two Gentlemen of Verona, Act IV. Scene II.

ORPHEUS' LUTE

For Orpheus' lute was strung with poets' sinews; [and stones.
Whose golden touch could soften steel
Make tigers tame, and huge leviathans
Forsake unsounded deeps to dance on sands.

The Two Gentlemen of Verona, Act III. Scene II.

O, 'TIS THE CURSE IN LOVE

O, 'tis the curse in love, and still approved, [they're beloved!
When women cannot love where

LOVE LIKE A SHADOW FLIES

Love like a shadow flies when substance love pursues;

Pursuing that that flies, and flying what pursues.

The Merry Wives of Windsor, Act II. Scene II.

MERRY WIVES

We'll leave a proof, by that which we will do, [too:
Wives may be merry, and yet honest
We do not act, that often jest and laugh; [the draff.
'Tis old but true, 'Still swine eat all

The Merry Wives of Windsor, Act IV. Scene II.

FIE ON SINFUL FANTASY

Fie on sinful fantasy!
Fie on lust and luxury!
Lust is but a bloody fire,
Kindled with unchaste desire,
Fed in heart; whose flames aspire,
As thoughts do blow them, higher and higher.

The Merry Wives of Windsor, Act V. Scene V.

TAKE, O TAKE THOSE LIPS AWAY

Take, O take those lips away,
That so sweetly were forsworn;
And those eyes, the break of day,
Lights that do mislead the morn:
But my kisses bring again, bring again;
Seals of love, but seal'd in vain, seal'd in vain.

Measure for Measure, Act IV. Scene I.

CALUMNY

No might nor greatness in mortality
Can censure 'scape; back-wounding calumny [so strong
The whitest virtue strikes. What king
Can tie the gall up in the slanderous tongue?

Measure for Measure, Act III. Scene II.

HE WHO THE SWORD OF HEAVEN WILL BEAR

He who the sword of heaven will bear
Should be as holy as severe;
Pattern in himself to know,
Grace to stand, and virtue go;
More nor less to others paying
Than by self-offences weighing.
Shame to him whose cruel striking
Kills for faults of his own liking!

Measure for Measure, Act III. Scene II.

HIERARCHY

There 's nothing situate under heaven's eye [in sky:
But hath his bound, in earth, in sea,
The beasts, the fishes, and the winged fowls, [controls:
Are their males' subjects, and at their
Men, more divine, the masters of all these, [watery seas,
Lords of the wide world and wide
Indued with intellectual sense and souls, [fowls,
Of more pre-eminence than fish and
Are masters to their females, and their lords: [accords.
Then let your will attend on their

Comedy of Errors, Act II. Scene I.

Will lose his beauty; and though gold 'bides still, [will
That others touch, yet often touching
Wear gold: and no man that hath a name, [shame.
But falsehood and corruption doth it

Comedy of Errors, Act II. Scene I.

ALAS, POOR WOMEN

Alas, poor women! make us but believe, [love us;
Being compact of credit, that you
Though others have the arm, show us the sleeve; [may move us.
We in your motion turn, and you

Comedy of Errors, Act III. Scene II.

TO THE MISTRESS UNKNOWN

Sweet mistress,—what your name is else, I know not, [mine,— Nor by what wonder you do hit of Less in your knowledge and your grace you show not [earth divine.
Than our earth's wonder; more than
Teach me, dear creature, how to think and speak;
Lay open to my earthy gross conceit,
Smother'd in errors, feeble, shallow, weak, [deceit.
The folded meaning of your words'
Against my soul's pure truth why labour you, [field?
To make it wander in an unknown
Are you a god? would you create me new? [power I'll yield.
Transform me then, and to your

Comedy of Errors, Act III. Scene II.

TIME

TIME is a very bankrout, and owes more than he 's worth to season.
Nay, he 's a thief too: have you not heard men say, [and day?
That Time comes stealing on by night
If he be in debt and theft, and a sergeant in the way,
Hath he not reason to turn back an hour in a day?

Comedy of Errors, Act IV. Scene II.

BEATRICE CONVERTED

WHAT fire is in mine ears? Can this be true? [scorn so much?
Stand I condemn'd for pride and

Much Ado about Nothing, Act III. Scene I.

HERO'S EPITAPH

DONE to death by slanderous tongues
Was the Hero that here lies:
Death, in guerdon of her wrongs,
Gives her fame which never dies:
So the life that died with shame
Lives in death with glorious fame.

Much Ado about Nothing, Act V. Scene III.

CUPID

LOVING goes by haps:
Some Cupid kills with arrows, some with traps.

Much Ado about Nothing, Act III. Scene I.

SIGH NO MORE, LADIES

SIGH no more, ladies, sigh no more,
Men were deceivers ever;
One foot in sea and one on shore,
To one thing constant never:
Then sigh not so, but let them go,
And be you blithe and bonny,
Converting all your sounds of woe
Into Hey nonny, nonny.
Sing no more ditties, sing no moe
Of dumps so dull and heavy;
The fraud of men was ever so,
Since summer first was leavy:
Then sigh not so, but let them go,
And be you blithe and bonny,
Converting all your sounds of woe
Into Hey nonny, nonny.

Much Ado about Nothing, Act II. Scene III.

DIRGE FOR HERO

PARDON, goddess of the night,
Those that slew thy virgin knight;
For the which, with songs of woe,
Round about her tomb they go.
Midnight, assist our moan;
Help us to sigh and groan,
Heavily, heavily:
Graves, yawn, and yield your dead,
Till death be uttered,
Heavily, heavily.

Love's Labour's Lost, Act I. Scene I.

STUDY

STUDY is like the heaven's glorious sun,
That will not be deep-search'd with saucy looks: [won,
Small have continual plodders ever
Save base authority from others'
books. [lights,
These earthly godfathers of heaven's
That give a name to every fixed star,
Have no more profit of their shining nights [what they are.
Than those that walk and wot not Too much to know, is to know nought
but fame;
And every godfather can give a name.

Love's Labour's Lost, Act I. Scene I.

GRAVITY'S REVOLT

THE blood of youth burns not with such excess
As gravity's revolt to wantonness.

Love's Labour's Lost, Act V. Scene II.

IF SHE BE MADE OF WHITE AND RED

IF she be made of white and red,
Her faults will ne'er be known;
For blushing cheeks by faults are bred,
And fears by pale-white shown:

Then if she fear, or be to blame,
By this you shall not know;
For still her cheeks possess the same
Which native she doth owe.

Love's Labour's Lost, Act I. Scene II.

SO SWEET A KISS

So sweet a kiss the golden sun gives not
To those fresh morning drops upon the rose,
As thy eye-beams, when their fresh [rays have smote
The night of dew that on my cheeks down flows: [bright
Nor shines the silver moon one half so
Through the transparent bosom of the deep, [give light;
As doth thy face through tears of mine
Thou shinest in every tear that I do weep:
No drop but as a coach doth carry thee;
So ridest thou triumphing in my woe. [me,
Do but behold the tears that swell in
And they thy glory through my grief will show: [keep
But do not love thyself; then thou wilt
My tears for glasses, and still make me weep. [excel,
O queen of queens! how far dost thou
No thought can think, nor tongue of mortal tell.

Love's Labour's Lost, Act IV. Scene III.

SPRING

When daisies pied and violets blue,
And lady-smocks all silver-white,
And cuckoo-buds of yellow hue,
Do paint the meadows with delight,
The cuckoo then, on every tree,
Mocks married men; for thus sings he,
Cuckoo;
Cuckoo, cuckoo,—O word of fear,
Unpleasing to a married ear!

When shepherds pipe on oaten straws,
And merry larks are ploughmen's clocks,
When turtles tread, and rooks, and [daws,
And maidens bleach their summer smocks,
The cuckoo then, on every tree,
Mocks married men; for thus sings he,
Cuckoo;
Cuckoo, cuckoo,—O word of fear,
Unpleasing to a married ear!

Love's Labour's Lost, Act V. Scene II.

WISDOM AND FOLLY

Folly in fools bears not so strong a note [dote;
As foolery in the wise, when wit doth
Since all the power thereof it doth apply
To prove, by wit, worth in simplicity.

Love's Labour's Lost, Act V. Scene II.

WINTER

When icicles hang by the wall,
And Dick the shepherd blows his nail,
And Tom bears logs into the hall,
And milk comes frozen home in pail,
When blood is nipp'd and ways be foul,
Then nightly sings the staring owl,
Tu-who;
Tu-whit, tu-who, a merry note,
While greasy Joan doth keel the pot.

When all aloud the wind doth blow,
And coughing drowns the parson's saw,
And birds sit brooding in the snow,
And Marian's nose looks red and raw,
When roasted crabs hiss in the bowl,
Then nightly sings the staring owl,
Tu-who;
Tu-whit, tu-who, a merry note,
While greasy Joan doth keel the pot.

Love's Labour's Lost, Act V. Scene II.

THE TONGUES OF MOCKING WENCHES

The tongues of mocking wenches are as keen
As is the razor's edge invisible,
Cutting a smaller hair than may be seen; [sible
Above the sense of sense: so sen-
Seemeth their conference; their conceits have wings
Fleeter than arrows, bullets, wind, thought, swifter things.

Love's Labour's Lost, Act V. Scene II.

LOVER'S ECSTASY

Of all complexions the cull'd sovereignty [cheek;
Do meet, as at a fair, in her fair
Where several worthies make one dignity; [self doth seek.
Where nothing wants that want it-
Lend me the flourish of all gentle tongues,— [it not:

FAIR LADIES

Fair ladies, mask'd, are roses in their bud; [mixture shown,
Dismask'd, their damask sweet com-
Are angels vailing clouds, or roses blown.

Love's Labour's Lost, Act V. Scene II.

LOVE, THE CHILD

Things base and vile, holding no quantity, [nity:
Love can transpose to form and dig-
Love looks not with the eyes, but with the mind; [blind:
And therefore is wing'd Cupid painted
Nor hath Love's mind of any judgment taste; [haste:
Wings, and no eyes, figure unheedy
And therefore is Love said to be a child,
Because in choice he is so oft beguiled.
As waggish boys in game themselves forswear,
So the boy Love is perjured every where.

A Midsummer-Night's Dream, Act I. Scene I.

FAIRY WANDERINGS

Over hill, over dale,
Thorough bush, thorough brier,
Over park, over pale,
Thorough flood, thorough fire,
I do wander every where,
Swifter than the moon's sphere;
And I serve the fairy queen,
To dew her orbs upon the green.
The cowslips tall her pensioners be;
In their gold coats spots you see;
Those be rubies, fairy favours,
In those freckles live their savours:
I must go seek some dewdrop's here,
And hang a pearl in every cowslip's ear.

A Midsummer-Night's Dream, Act II. Scene I.

I KNOW A BANK

I know a bank where the wild thyme blows, [grows;
Where oxlips and the nodding violet
Quite over-canopied with luscious woodbine, [eglantine:
With sweet musk-roses, and with
There sleeps Titania some time of the night, [delight;
Lull'd in these flowers with dances and
And there the snake throws her enamell'd skin,
Weed wide enough to wrap a fairy in.

A Midsummer-Night's Dream, Act II. Scene I.

TITANIA'S LULLABY

You spotted snakes with double tongue,
Thorny hedgehogs, be not seen;
Newts and blind-worms, do no wrong;
Come not near our fairy queen:

Weaving spiders, come not here;
Hence, you long-legg'd spinners, hence!
Beetles black, approach not near;
Worm nor snail, do no offence.

Philomel, with melody,
Sing in our sweet lullaby; [by:
Lulla, lulla, lullaby; lulla, lulla, lulla-
Never harm,
Nor spell nor charm,
Come our lovely lady nigh;
So, good night, with lullaby.

A Midsummer-Night's Dream, Act II. Scene II.

BOTTOM SINGS

The ousel-cock so black of hue,
With orange-tawny bill,
The throstle with his note so true,
The wren with little quill;
The finch, the sparrow, and the lark,
The plain-song cuckoo grey,

Whose note full many a man doth mark,
And dares not answer, nay.

A Midsummer-Night's Dream, Act III. Scene I.

CHARM

What thou seest when thou dost wake,
Do it for thy true love take;
Love and languish for his sake:
Be it ounce, or cat, or bear,
Pard, or boar with bristled hair,
In thy eye that shall appear
When thou wakest, it is thy dear:
Wake when some vile thing is near.

A Midsummer-Night's Dream, Act II. Scene II.

COUNTERCHARM

Be as thou wast wont to be;
See as thou wast wont to see:
Dian's bud o'er Cupid's flower
Hath such force and blessed power.

A Midsummer-Night's Dream, Act IV. Scene I.

THE MORN

Phœbe doth behold
Her silver visage in the watery glass,
Decking with liquid pearl the bladed grass.

A Midsummer-Night's Dream, Act I. Scene I.

SINCERITY IN LOVE

Why should you think that I should woo in scorn? [tears:
Scorn and derision never come in
Look, when I vow, I weep; and vows so born,
In their nativity all truth appears.
How can these things in me seem scorn to you, [them true?
Bearing the badge of faith, to prove

PUCK

I'll follow you, I'll lead you about a round, [brake, through brier:
Through bog, through bush, through
Sometime a horse I'll be, sometime a hound, [fire;
A hog, a headless bear, sometime a
And neigh, and bark, and grunt, and roar, and burn, [every turn.

Up and down, up and down;
I will lead them up and down:
I am fear'd in field and town:
Goblin, lead them up and down.

A Midsummer-Night's Dream, Act III. Scene II.

THE FAIRY TIME

Now the hungry lion roars,
And the wolf behowls the moon;
Whilst the heavy ploughman snores,
All with weary task fordone.
Now the wasted brands do glow,
Whilst the screech-owl, screeching loud,
Puts the wretch that lies in woe
In remembrance of a shroud.
Now it is the time of night,
That the graves, all gaping wide,
Every one lets forth his sprite,
In the church-way paths to glide:
And we fairies, that do run
By the triple Hecate's team,
From the presence of the sun,
Following darkness like a dream,
Now are frolic: not a mouse
Shall disturb this hallow'd house.

A Midsummer-Night's Dream, Act V. Scene I.

FAIRIES' FAREWELL

If we shadows have offended,
Think but this, and all is mended,
That you have but slumber'd here,
While these visions did appear.
And this weak and idle theme,
No more yielding but a dream,
Gentles, do not reprehend;
If you pardon, we will mend.

A Midsummer-Night's Dream, Act V. Scene I.

SILENCE

Silence is only commendable
In a neat's tongue dried, and a maid not vendible.

The Merchant of Venice, Act I. Scene I.

FANCY

Tell me where is fancy bred,
Or in the heart or in the head?
How begot, how nourished?
Reply, reply.

It is engender'd in the eyes,
With gazing fed; and fancy dies

In the cradle where it lies.
Let us all ring fancy's knell:
I'll begin it,—Ding, dong, bell.
Ding, dong, bell.

The Merchant of Venice, Act III. Scene II.

CASKET OF GOLD

All that glisters is not gold;
Often have you heard that told:
Many a man his life hath sold
But my outside to behold:
Gilded tombs do worms infold.
Had you been as wise as bold,
Young in limbs, in judgment old,
Your answer had not been inscroll'd:
Fare you well; your suit is cold.

The Merchant of Venice, Act II. Scene VII.

CASKET OF SILVER

The fire seven times tried this:
Seven times tried that judgment is,
That did never choose amiss.
Some there be that shadows kiss;
Such have but a shadow's bliss:
There be fools alive, I wis,
Silver'd o'er; and so was this.
Take what wife you will to bed,
I will ever be your head:
So begone, sir: you are sped.

The Merchant of Venice, Act II. Scene IX.

CASKET OF LEAD

You that choose not by the view,
Chance as fair, and choose as true!
Since this fortune falls to you,
Be content, and seek no new.
If you be well pleased with this,
And hold your fortune for your bliss,
Turn you where your lady is,
And claim her with a loving kiss.

The Merchant of Venice, Act III. Scene II.

MOONLIGHT

How sweet the moonlight sleeps upon this bank! [music
Here will we sit, and let the sounds of Creep in our ears: soft stillness and the night
Become the touches of sweet harmony.

The Merchant of Venice, Act V. Scene I.

AMIENS SINGS

Under the greenwood tree
Who loves to lie with me,
And turn his merry note
Unto the sweet bird's throat,
Come hither, come hither, come hither;
Here shall he see
No enemy
But winter and rough weather.

Who doth ambition shun,
And loves to live i' the sun,
Seeking the food he eats,
And pleased with what he gets,
Come hither, come hither, come hither;
Here shall he see
No enemy
But winter and rough weather.

As You Like It, Act II. Scene V.

HUNTING GLEE

What shall he have that kill'd the deer?
His leather skin and horns to wear.
Then sing him home:
Take thou no scorn to wear the horn:
It was a crest ere thou wast born.
Thy father's father wore it;
And thy father bore it:
The horn, the horn, the lusty horn
Is not a thing to laugh to scorn.

As You Like It, Act IV. Scene II.

AMIENS SINGS

Blow, blow, thou winter wind,
Thou art not so unkind
As man's ingratitude;
Thy tooth is not so keen,
Because thou art not seen,
Although thy breath be rude.
Heigh-ho! sing, heigh-ho! unto the green holly: [ing mere folly:
Most friendship is feigning, most lov-
Then, heigh-ho, the holly!
This life is most jolly.

Freeze, freeze, thou bitter sky,
That dost not bite so nigh
As benefits forgot:
Though thou the waters warp,
Thy sting is not so sharp
As friend remember'd not.
Heigh-ho! sing, heigh-ho! unto the green holly, etc.

As You Like It, Act II. Scene VII.

ROSALIND

From the east to western Ind,
No jewel is like Rosalind.
Her worth, being mounted on the wind,
Through all the world bears Rosalind.
All the pictures fairest lined
Are but black to Rosalind.

Let no face be kept in mind
But the fair of Rosalind.

As You Like It, Act III. Scene II.

ROSALIND

WHY should this desert silent be?
For it is unpeopled? No;
Tongues I'll hang on every tree,
That shall civil sayings show:
Some, how brief the life of man
Runs his erring pilgrimage,
That the stretching of a span
Buckles in his sum of age;
Some, of violated vows
'Twixt the souls of friend and friend:
But upon the fairest boughs,
Or at every sentence' end,
Will I Rosalinda write;
Teaching all that read to know
The quintessence of every sprite
Heaven would in little show.
Therefore Heaven Nature charged
That one body should be fill'd
With all graces wide enlarged:
Nature presently distill'd
Helen's cheek, but not her heart;
Cleopatra's majesty;
Atalanta's better part;
Sad Lucretia's modesty.
Thus Rosalind of many parts
By heavenly synod was devised;
Of many faces, eyes, and hearts,
To have the touches dearest prized.
Heaven would that she these gifts should have,
And I to live and die her slave.

As You Like It, Act III. Scene II

IT WAS A LOVER AND HIS LASS

IT was a lover and his lass,
With a hey, and a ho, and a hey nonino,
That o'er the green corn-field did pass
In the spring time, the only pretty ring time,
When birds do sing, hey ding a ding,
Sweet lovers love the spring.

Between the acres of the rye,
These pretty country folks would lie.

This carol they began that hour,
How that a life was but a flower:

And therefore take the present time,
With a hey, and a ho, and a hey nonino;
For love is crowned with the prime
In the spring time, the only pretty ring time,
When birds do sing, hey ding a ding,
Sweet lovers love the spring.

As You Like It, Act V. Scene III.

HYMEN

WEDDING is great Juno's crown:
O blessed bond of board and bed!
'Tis Hymen peoples every town;
High wedlock then be honoured:
Honour, high honour and renown,
To Hymen, god of every town!

As You Like It, Act V. Scene IV.

A LOVE-LETTER

ART thou god to shepherd turn'd,
That a maiden's heart hath burn'd?
Why, thy godhead laid apart,
Warr'st thou with a woman's heart?
Whiles the eye of man did woo me,
That could do no vengeance to me.
If the scorn of your bright eyne
Have power to raise such love in mine,
Alack, in me what strange effect
Would they work in mild aspect!
Whiles you chid me, I did love;
How then might your prayers move!
He that brings this love to thee
Little knows this love in me:
And by him seal up thy mind;
Whether that thy youth and kind
Will the faithful offer take
Of me and all that I can make;
Or else by him my love deny,
And then I'll study how to die.

As You Like It, Act IV. Scene III.

HORTENSIO'S GAMUT

'GAMUT' I am, the ground of all accord,
'A re,' to plead Hortensio's passion;
'B mi,' Bianca, take him for thy lord,
'C fa ut,' that loves with all affection:
'D sol re,' one clef, two notes have I:
'E la mi,' show pity, or I die.

The Taming of the Shrew, Act III. Scene I.

FATE

OUR remedies oft in ourselves do lie,
Which we ascribe to heaven: the fated sky
Gives us free scope; only doth backward pull
Our slow designs when we ourselves are dull.

All's Well that Ends Well, Act I. Scene I.

THE CLOWN SINGS

For I the ballad will repeat,
Which men full true shall find;
Your marriage comes by destiny,
Your cuckoo sings by kind.

All's Well that Ends Well, Act I. Scene III.

THE CLOWN SINGS

Was this fair face the cause, quoth she,
Why the Grecians sacked Troy?
Fond done, done fond,
Was this King Priam's joy?
With that she sigh'd as she stood,
With that she sigh'd as she stood,
And gave this sentence then;
Among nine bad if one be good,
Among nine bad if one be good,
There 's yet one good in ten.

THAT STRAIN AGAIN

That strain again! it had a dying fall:
O, it came o'er my ear like the sweet sound
That breathes upon a bank of violets,
Stealing and giving odour!

Twelfth Night, Act I. Scene I.

O MISTRESS MINE

O mistress mine, where are you roaming? [coming,
O, stay and hear; your true love 's
That can sing both high and low:
Trip no further, pretty sweeting;
Journeys end in lovers meeting,
Every wise man's son doth know.

What is love? 'tis not hereafter;
Present mirth hath present laughter;
What 's to come is still unsure:
In delay there lies no plenty;
Then come kiss me, sweet-and-twenty,
Youth 's a stuff will not endure.

Twelfth Night, Act II. Scene III.

VIRTUE IS BEAUTY

In nature there 's no blemish but the mind; [unkind:
None can be call'd deform'd but the Virtue is beauty, but the beauteous-evil

THE CLOWN SINGS

When that I was and a little tiny boy,
With hey, ho, the wind and the rain,
A foolish thing was but a toy,
For the rain it raineth every day.

But when I came to man's estate,
With hey, ho, the wind and the rain,
'Gainst knaves and thieves men shut their gate,
For the rain it raineth every day.

But when I came, alas! to wive,
With hey, ho, the wind and the rain,
By swaggering could I never thrive,
For the rain it raineth every day.

But when I came unto my bed,
With hey, ho, the wind and the rain,
With toss-pots still had drunken head,
For the rain it raineth every day.

A great while ago the world begun,
With hey, ho, the wind and the rain,
But that 's all one, our play is done,
And we'll strive to please you every day.

Twelfth Night, Act V. Scene I.

COME AWAY, COME AWAY, DEATH

Come away, come away, death,
And in sad cypress let me be laid;
Fly away, fly away, breath;
I am slain by a fair cruel maid.
My shroud of white, stuck all with yew,
O, prepare it!
My part of death, no one so true
Did share it.

Not a flower, not a flower sweet,
On my black coffin let there be strown;
Not a friend, not a friend greet
My poor corpse, where my bones shall be thrown:
A thousand thousand sighs to save,
Lay me, O, where
Sad true lover never find my grave,
To weep there!

Twelfth Night, Act II. Scene IV.

AUTOLYCUS SINGS

Will you buy any tape,
Or lace for your cape,
My dainty duck, my dear-a ?
Any silk, any thread,
Any toys for your head,
Of the newest, and finest, finest wear-a ?
Come to the pedlar ;
Money 's a medler,
That doth utter all men's ware-a.

The Winter's Tale, Act IV. Scene III

AUTOLYCUS SINGS

Lawn as white as driven snow ;
Cyprus black as e'er was crow ;
Gloves as sweet as damask roses ;
Masks for faces and for noses ;
Bugle bracelet, necklace-amber,
Perfume for a lady's chamber ;
Golden quoifs and stomachers,
For my lads to give their dears ;
Pins and poking-sticks of steel,
What maids lack from head to heel :
Come buy of me, come ; come buy, come buy ;
Buy, lads, or else your lasses cry :
Come buy.

The Winter's Tale, Act IV. Scene III.

A TRIO

A. Get you hence, for I must go
Where it fits not you to know.
D. Whither ? M. O, whither ? D. Whither ?
M. It becomes thy oath full well,
Thou to me thy secrets tell.
D. Me too, let me go thither.
M. Or thou goest to the grange or mill.
D. If to either, thou dost ill.
A. Neither. D. What, neither ? A. Neither.
D. Thou hast sworn my love to be.
M. Thou hast sworn it more to me :
Then whither goest ? say, whither ?

The Winter's Tale, Act IV. Scene III.

WHEN DAFFODILS BEGIN TO PEER

When daffodils begin to peer,
With heigh ! the doxy over the dale,
Why, then comes in the sweet o' the year ;
For the red blood reigns in the winter's pale.
The white sheet bleaching on the hedge,
With heigh ! the sweet birds, O how they sing !
Doth set my pugging tooth on edge ;
For a quart of ale is a dish for a king.
The lark, that tirra-lirra chants,
With heigh ! with heigh ! the thrush and the jay,
Are summer songs for me and my aunts,
While we lie tumbling in the hay.
But shall I go mourn for that, my dear ?
The pale moon shines by night :
And when I wander here and there,
I then do most go right.
If tinkers may have leave to live,
And bear the sow-skin budget,
Then my account I well may give,
And in the stocks avouch it.
Jog on, jog on, the footpath way,
And merrily hent the stile-a :
A merry heart goes all the day,
Your sad tires in a mile-a.

The Winter's Tale, Act IV. Scene II.

FLOWERS

Daffodils,
That come before the swallow dares, and take
The winds of March with beauty ; violets, dim,
But sweeter than the lids of Juno's eyes
Or Cytherea's breath.

The Winter's Tale, Act IV. Scene III.

PATRIOTISM

Nought shall make us rue,
If England to itself do rest but true.

King John, Act V. Scene VII.

REPUTATION

The purest treasure mortal times afford
Is spotless reputation : that away,
Men are but gilded loam or painted clay.
A jewel in a ten-times-barr'd-up chest
Is a bold spirit in a loyal breast.

King Richard II. Act I. Scene I.

SWAN SONG

O, but they say the tongues of dying men
Enforce attention like deep harmony :
Where words are scarce, they are seldom spent in vain ;
For they breathe truth that breathe their words in pain.
He that no more must say is listen'd more
Than they whom youth and ease have taught to glose ;

More are men's ends mark'd, than their lives before :
The setting sun, and music at the close,
As the last taste of sweets, is sweetest last ;
Writ in remembrance more than things long past.

King Richard II. Act II. Scene I.

KINGLY CARE

HAPPY low, lie down !
Uneasy lies the head that wears a crown.

Second Part of King Henry IV. Act III. Scene I.

SILENCE SINGS

Do nothing but eat, and make good cheer,
And praise heaven for the merry year ;
When flesh is cheap and females dear,
And lusty lads roam here and there
So merrily,
And ever among so merrily.

Be merry, be merry, my wife has all ;
For women are shrews, both short and tall :
'Tis merry in hall when beards wag all,
And welcome merry Shrove-tide,
Be merry, be merry !

A cup of wine that 's brisk and fine,
And drink unto the leman mine ;
And a merry heart lives long-a.
Fill the cup, and let it come ;
I'll pledge you a mile to the bottom.

Second Part of King Henry IV. Act V. Scene III.

CONSCIENCE

CONSCIENCE is but a word that cowards use,
Devised at first to keep the strong in awe :
Our strong arms be our conscience, swords our law.

King Richard III. Act V. Scene III.

ORPHEUS

ORPHEUS with his lute made trees,
And the mountain tops that freeze,
Bow themselves when he did sing :
To his music plants and flowers
Ever sprung, as sun and showers
There had made a lasting spring.

Every thing that heard him play,
Even the billows of the sea,
Hung their heads, and then lay by.
In sweet music is such art,
Killing care and grief of heart
Fall asleep, or hearing die.

King Henry VIII. Act III. Scene I.

TRUE PRAISE

THE worthiness of praise distains his worth,
If that the praised himself bring the praise forth :
But what the repining enemy commends,
That breath fame blows ; that praise, sole pure, transcends.

TO BE WISE AND LOVE

To be wise and love
Exceeds man's might ; that dwells with gods above.

Troilus and Cressida, Act III. Scene II.

LOVE, LOVE, NOTHING BUT LOVE

LOVE, love, nothing but love, still more !
For, O, love's bow
Shoots buck and doe :
The shaft confounds,
Not that it wounds,
But tickles still the sore.

These lovers cry Oh ! oh ! they die !
Yet that which seems the wound to kill,
Doth turn oh ! oh ! to ha ! ha ! he !
So dying love lives still :
Oh ! oh ! awhile, but ha ! ha ! ha !
Oh ! oh ! groans out for ha ! ha ! ha !

Troilus and Cressida, Act III. Scene I.

O HEART, HEAVY HEART

O HEART, heavy heart,
Why sigh'st thou without breaking ?
Because thou canst not ease thy smart
By friendship nor by speaking.

Troilus and Cressida, Act IV. Scene IV.

THEY BORE HIM BAREFACED

THEY bore him barefaced on the bier;
Hey non nonny, nonny, hey nonny:
And in his grave rain'd many a tear;
You must sing a-down a-down,
An you call him a-down-a.

And will he not come again?
And will he not come again?
No, no, he is dead:
Go to thy death-bed:
He never will come again.

HAVE more than thou showest,
Speak less than thou knowest,
Lend less than thou owest,
Ride more than thou goest,
Learn more than thou trowest,
Set less than thou throwest;

THAT lord that counsell'd thee
To give away thy land,
Come place him here by me,
And do thou for him stand:

The sweet and bitter fool
Will presently appear;
The one in motley here,
The other found out there.

III.

Fools had ne'er less wit in a year;
For wise men are grown foppish,
And know not how their wits to wear,
Their manners are so apish.

IAGO'S PRAISE OF VIRTUE

She that was ever fair and never proud,
Had tongue at will and yet was never loud,
Never lack'd gold and yet went never gay,
Fled from her wish and yet said 'Now I may;'
She that, being anger'd, her revenge being nigh,
Bade her wrong stay and her displeasure fly;
She that in wisdom never was so frail
To change the cod's head for the salmon's tail;
She that could think and ne'er disclose her mind,
See suitors following and not look behind;
She was a wight,—if ever such wight were,—
To suckle fools and chronicle small beer.

DIRGE FOR FIDELE

Fear no more the heat o' the sun,
Nor the furious winter's rages;
Thou thy worldly task hast done,
Home art gone, and ta'en thy wages:
Golden lads and girls all must,
As chimney-sweepers, come to dust.

Fear no more the frown o' the great;
Thou art past the tyrant's stroke;
Care no more to clothe and eat;
To thee the reed is as the oak:
The sceptre, learning, physic, must
All follow this, and come to dust.

Fear no more the lightning-flash,
Nor the all-dreaded thunder-stone;
Fear not slander, censure rash;
Thou hast finish'd joy and moan:
All lovers young, all lovers must
Consign to thee, and come to dust.

No exorciser harm thee!
Nor no witchcraft charm thee!
Ghost unlaid forbear thee!
Nothing ill come near thee!
Quiet consummation have;
And renowned be thy grave!

Or sent to Naples: let me not,
Since I have my dukedom got
And pardon'd the deceiver, dwell
In this bare island by your spell;
But release me from my bands
With the help of your good hands.
Gentle breath of yours my sails
Must fill, or else my project fails,
Which was to please: now I want
Spirits to enforce, art to enchant;
And my ending is despair,
Unless I be relieved by prayer;
Which pierces so that it assaults
Mercy itself and frees all faults.
As you from crimes would pardon'd be,
Let your indulgence set me free.

I.

FROM fairest creatures we desire increase,
That thereby beauty's rose might never die,
But as the riper should by time decease,
His tender heir might bear his memory:
But thou, contracted to thine own bright eyes,
Feed'st thy light's flame with self-substantial fuel,
Making a famine where abundance lies,
Thyself thy foe, to thy sweet self too cruel.
Thou that art now the world's fresh ornament
And only herald to the gaudy spring,
Within thine own bud buriest thy content
And, tender churl, makest waste in niggarding.
Pity the world, or else this glutton be,
To eat the world's due, by the grave and thee.

II.

WHEN forty winters shall besiege thy brow,
And dig deep trenches in thy beauty's field,
Thy youth's proud livery, so gazed on now,
Will be a tatter'd weed, of small worth held:
Then being ask'd where all thy beauty lies,
Where all the treasure of thy lusty days,
To say, within thine own deep-sunken eyes,
Were an all-eating shame and thriftless praise.
How much more praise deserved thy beauty's use,
If thou couldst answer 'This fair child of mine
Shall sum my count and make my old excuse,'
Proving his beauty by succession thine!
This were to be new made when thou art old,
And see thy blood warm when thou feel'st it cold.

III.

LOOK in thy glass, and tell the face thou viewest
Now is the time that face should form another;
Whose fresh repair if now thou not renewest,
Thou dost beguile the world, unbless some mother.
For where is she so fair whose unear'd womb
Disdains the tillage of thy husbandry?
Or who is he so fond will be the tomb
Of his self-love, to stop posterity?
Thou art thy mother's glass, and she in thee
Calls back the lovely April of her prime:
So thou through windows of thine age shalt see,
Despite of wrinkles, this thy golden time.
But if thou live, remember'd not to be,
Die single, and thine image dies with thee.

IV.

UNTHRIFTY loveliness, why dost thou spend
Upon thyself thy beauty's legacy?
Nature's bequest gives nothing, but doth lend,
And being frank she lends to those are free,
Then, beauteous niggard, why dost thou abuse
The bounteous largess given thee to give?

Profitless usurer, why dost thou use
So great a sum of sums, yet canst not live ?
For having traffic, with thyself alone,
Thou of thyself thy sweet self dost deceive.
Then how, when Nature calls thee to be-
What acceptable audit canst thou leave ?
Thy unused beauty must be tomb'd with thee,
Which, used, lives thy executor to be.

V

Those hours, that with gentle work did frame
The lovely gaze where every eye doth dwell,
Will play the tyrants to the very same
And that unfair which fairly doth excel ;
For never-resting time leads summer on
To hideous winter and confounds him there ;
Sap check'd with frost and lusty leaves quite gone,
Beauty o'ersnow'd and bareness every where :
Then, were not summer's distillation left,
A liquid prisoner pent in walls of glass,
Beauty's effect with beauty were bereft,
Nor it, nor no remembrance what it was :
But flowers distill'd, though they with winter meet,
Leese but their show ; their substance still lives sweet.

VI.

Then let not winter's ragged hand deface
In thee thy summer, ere thou be distill'd :
Make sweet some vial ; treasure thou some place
With beauty's treasure, ere it be self-kill'd.
That use is not forbidden usury
Which happies those that pay the willing loan ; that thee,
That 's for thyself to breed another thee :
Or ten times happier, be it ten for one ;
Ten times thyself were happier than thou art,
If ten of thine ten times refigured thee :
Then what could death do, if thou shouldst depart,
Leaving thee living in posterity ?
Be not self-will'd, for thou art much too fair
To be death's conquest and make worms thine heir.

VII.

Lo ! in the orient when the gracious light
Lifts up his burning head, each eye
Doth homage to his new-appearing sight,
Serving with looks his sacred majesty ;
And having climb'd the steep-up heavenly hill,
Resembling strong youth in his middle age,
Yet mortal looks adore his beauty still,
Attending on his golden pilgrimage ;
But when from highmost pitch, with weary car,
Like feeble age, he reeleth from the day,
The eyes, 'fore duteous, now converted are
From his low tract and look another way :
So thou, thyself out-going in thy noon,
Unlook'd on diest, unless thou get a son.

VIII.

Music to hear, why hear'st thou music sadly ?
Sweets with sweets war not, joy delights in joy.
Why lovest thou that which thou receivest not gladly,
Or else receivest with pleasure thine annoy ?
If the true concord of well-tuned sounds,
By unions married, do offend thine ear,
They do but sweetly chide thee, who confounds
In singleness the parts that thou shouldst bear
Mark how one string, sweet husband to another,
Strikes each in each by mutual ordering,
Resembling sire and child and happy mother
Who all in one, one pleasing note do sing :
Whose speechless song, being many, seeming one,
Sings this to thee : ' thou single wilt prove none.'

IX.

Is it for fear to wet a widow's eye
That thou consumest thyself in single life ?
Ah ! if thou issueless shalt hap to die,
The world will wail thee, like a makeless wife ;
The world will be thy widow and still weep
That thou no form of thee hast left behind,
When every private widow well may keep,

By children's eyes, her husband's shape in mind. [doth spend
Look, what an unthrift in the world
Shifts but his place, for still the world enjoys it; [an end,
But beauty's waste hath in the world
And kept unused, the user so destroys it. [sits
No love toward others in that bosom
That on himself such murderous shame commits.

X.

For shame! deny that thou bear'st love to any,
Who for thyself art so unprovident.
Grant, if thou wilt, thou art beloved of many, [evident;
But that thou none lovest is most
For thou art so possess'd with murderous hate [to conspire,
That 'gainst thyself thou stick'st not Seeking that beauteous roof to ruinate
Which to repair should be thy chief desire. [change my mind!
O, change thy thought, that I may
Shall hate be fairer lodged than gentle love? [kind,
Be, as thy presence is, gracious and
Or to thyself at least kind-hearted prove: [me,
Make thee another self, for love of
That beauty still may live in thine or thee.

XI.

As fast as thou shalt wane, so fast thou growest [departest;
In one of thine, from that which thou

Thou mayst call thine when thou from youth convertest. [crease;

XII.

When I do count the clock that tells the time, [night;
And see the brave day sunk in hideous
When I behold the violet past prime,
And sable curls all silver'd o'er with white;
When lofty trees I see barren of leaves
Which erst from heat did canopy the herd, [sheaves
And summer's green all girded up in Borne on the bier with white and bristly beard; [make,
Then of thy beauty do I question
That thou among the wastes of time must go, [selves forsake
Since sweets and beauties do them-
And die as fast as they see others grow;
And nothing 'gainst Time's scythe can make defence
Save breed, to brave him when he takes thee hence.

XIII.

O, that you were yourself! but, love, you are [here live:
No longer yours than you yourself
Against this coming end you should prepare, [other give.
And your sweet semblance to some
So should that beauty which you hold in lease [were Find no determination; then you
Yourself again after yourself's decease,
When your sweet issue your sweet form should bear.
Who lets so fair a house fall to decay,
Which husbandry in honour might uphold [day
Against the stormy gusts of winter's
And barren rage of death's eternal cold?
O, none but unthrifts! Dear my love, you know [so.
You had a father: let your son say

XIV.

Not from the stars do I my judgment pluck;
And yet methinks I have astronomy;
But not to tell of good or evil luck,
Of plagues, of dearths, or seasons' quality; [tell,
Nor can I fortune to brief minutes
Pointing to each his thunder, rain and wind,
Or say with princes if it shall go well,
By oft predict that I in heaven find:

But from thine eyes my knowledge I derive,
And, constant stars, in them I read such art
As truth and beauty shall together thrive,
If from thyself to store thou wouldst convert;
Or else of thee this I prognosticate:
Thy end is truth's and beauty's doom and date.

XV.

When I consider every thing that grows
Holds in perfection but a little moment,
That this huge state presenteth nought but shows
Whereon the stars in secret influence comment;
When I perceive that men as plants increase,
Cheered and check'd even by the self-same sky,
Vaunt in their youthful sap, at height decrease,
And wear their brave state out of memory;
Then the conceit of this inconstant stay
Sets you most rich in youth before my sight,
Where wasteful Time debateth with Decay
To change your day of youth to sullied night;
And all in war with Time for love of you,
As he takes from you, I engraft you new.

XVI.

But wherefore do not you a mightier way
Make war upon this bloody tyrant, Time?
And fortify yourself in your decay
With means more blessed than my barren rhyme?
Now stand you on the top of happy hours,
And many maiden gardens yet unset
With virtuous wish would bear your living flowers,
Much liker than your painted counterfeit:
So should the lines of life that life repair,
Which this, Time's pencil, or my pupil pen,
Neither in inward worth nor outward fair,
Can make you live yourself in eyes of men.
To give away yourself keeps yourself still,
And you must live, drawn by your own sweet skill.

XVII.

Who will believe my verse in time to come,
If it were fill'd with your most high deserts?
Though yet, heaven knows, it is but as a tomb
Which hides your life and shows not half your parts.
If I could write the beauty of your eyes
And in fresh numbers number all your graces,
The age to come would say 'This poet lies;
Such heavenly touches ne'er touch'd earthly faces.'
So should my papers yellow'd with their age
Be scorn'd like old men of less truth than tongue,
And your true rights be term'd a poet's rage
And stretched metre of an antique song:
But were some child of yours alive that time,
You should live twice—in it and in my rhyme.

XVIII.

Shall I compare thee to a summer's day?
Thou art more lovely and more temperate:
Rough winds do shake the darling buds of May,
And summer's lease hath all too short a date:
Sometime too hot the eye of heaven shines,
And often is his gold complexion dimm'd;
And every fair from fair sometime declines,
By chance or nature's changing course untrimm'd;
But thy eternal summer shall not fade
Nor lose possession of that fair thou owest;
Nor shall Death brag thou wander'st in his shade,
When in eternal lines to time thou growest:
So long as men can breathe or eyes can see,
So long lives this; and this gives life to thee.

XIX.

Devouring Time, blunt thou the lion's paws,
And make the earth devour her own sweet brood;
Pluck the keen teeth from the fierce tiger's jaws,
And burn the long-lived phœnix in her blood;
Make glad and sorry seasons as thou fleets,
And do whate'er thou wilt, swift-footed Time,

To the wide world and all her fading sweets; [crime:
But I forbid thee one most heinous
O, carve not with thy hours my love's fair brow, [tique pen;
Nor draw no lines there with thine an-

Yet, do thy worst, old Time: de-
My love shall in my verse ever live young.

My glass shall not persuade me I am old, [date;
So long as youth and thou are of one
But when in thee time's furrows I behold, [expiate.
Then look I death my days should
For all that beauty that doth cover thee
Is but the seemly raiment of my heart,
Which in thy breast doth live, as thine in me: [art?
How can I then be elder than thou
O, therefore, love, be of thyself so wary
As I, not for myself, but for thee will;
Bearing thy heart, which I will keep so chary [ill.
As tender nurse her babe from faring
Presume not on thy heart when mine is slain;
Thou gavest me thine, not to give back again.

XXIII.

As an unperfect actor on the stage
Who with his fear is put besides his part, [much rage,
Or some fierce thing replete with too
Whose strength's abundance weakens his own heart,
So I, for fear of trust, forget to say
The perfect ceremony of love's rite,
And in mine own love's strength seem to decay, [love's might.

For at a frown they in their glory die.

After a thousand victories once foil'd,
Is from the book of honour razed quite,
And all the rest forgot for which he

Then happy I, that love and am be-
Where I may not remove nor be re-

Lord of my love, to whom in vassalage
Thy merit hath my duty strongly knit,
To thee I send this written embassage,
To witness duty, not to show my wit:
Duty so great, which wit so poor as mine [words to show it,
May make seem bare, in wanting
But that I hope some good conceit of thine [bestow it ;
In thy soul's thought, all naked, will

Then may I dare to boast how I
Till then not show my head where

Weary with toil, I haste me to my bed,

But then begins a journey in my head,
To work my mind, when body's work 's

For then my thoughts, from far where
Intend a zealous pilgrimage to thee,
And keep my drooping eyelids open

But here 's the joy; my friend and Sweet flattery! then she loves but

How would thy shadow's form form
To the clear day with thy much clearer light, [shines so!
When to unseeing eyes thy shade
How would, I say, mine eyes be blessed made
By looking on thee in the living day,
When in dead night thy fair imperfect shade [doth stay!
Through heavy sleep on sightless eyes
All days are nights to see till I see
thee,
And nights bright days when dreams do show thee me.

XLIV.

IF the dull substance of my flesh were thought, [way
Injurious distance should not stop my
For then, despite of space, I would be

But, ah! thought kills me that I am not thought, [thou art gone,
To leap large lengths of miles when

But that, so much of earth and water wrought,
I must attend time's leisure with my moan;
Receiving nought by elements so slow
But heavy tears, badges of either's woe.

XLV.

The other two, slight air and purging fire,
Are both with thee, wherever I abide;
The first my thought, the other my desire,
These, present-absent, with swift motion slide.
For when these quicker elements are gone
In tender embassy of love to thee,
My life, being made of four, with two alone
Sinks down to death, oppress'd with melancholy;
Until life's composition be recured
By those swift messengers return'd from thee,
Who even but now come back again, assured
Of thy fair health, recounting it to me:
This told, I joy; but then no longer glad,
I send them back again and straight grow sad.

XLVI.

Mine eye and heart are at a mortal war
How to divide the conquest of thy sight;
Mine eye my heart thy picture's sight would bar,
My heart mine eye the freedom of that right.
My heart doth plead that thou in him dost lie,—
A closet never pierced with crystal eyes—
But the defendant doth that plea deny,
And says in him thy fair appearance lies.
To 'cide this title is impanneled
A quest of thoughts, all tenants to the heart,
And by their verdict is determined
The clear eye's moiety and the dear heart's part:
As thus; mine eye's due is thy outward part,
And my heart's right thy inward love of heart.

XLVII.

Betwixt mine eye and heart a league is took,
And each doth good turns now unto the other:
When that mine eye is famish'd for a look,
Or heart in love with sighs himself doth smother,
With my love's picture then my eye doth feast
And to the painted banquet bids my heart;
Another time mine eye is my heart's guest
And in his thoughts of love doth share a part:
So, either by thy picture or my love,
Thyself away art present still with me;
For thou not farther than my thoughts canst move,
And I am still with them and they with thee;
Or, if they sleep, thy picture in my sight
Awakes my heart to heart's and eye's delight.

XLVIII.

How careful was I, when I took my way,
Each trifle under truest bars to thrust,
That to my use it might unused stay
From hands of falsehood, in sure wards of trust!
But thou, to whom my jewels trifles are,
Most worthy comfort, now my greatest grief,
Thou, best of dearest and mine only care,
Art left the prey of every vulgar thief.
Thee have I not lock'd up in any chest,
Save where thou art not, though I feel thou art,
Within the gentle closure of my breast,
From whence at pleasure thou mayst come and part;
And even thence thou wilt be stol'n, I fear,
For truth proves thievish for a prize so dear.

XLIX.

Against that time, if ever that time come,
When I shall see thee frown on my defects,
Whenas thy love hath cast his utmost sum,
Call'd to that audit by advised respects;
Against that time when thou shalt strangely pass
And scarcely greet me with that sun, thine eye,
When love, converted from the thing it was,
Shall reasons find of settled gravity,—
Against that time do I ensconce me here
Within the knowledge of mine own desert,

And this my hand against myself up-
rear, [part:
To guard the lawful reasons on thy
To leave poor me thou hast the

O, how much more doth beauty beau-teous seem [doth give!
By that sweet ornament which truth
The rose looks fair, but fairer we it

For that sweet odour which doth in it
The canker-blooms have full as deep a

Like as the waves make towards the pebbled shore,
So do our minutes hasten to their end;
Each changing place with that which goes before
In sequent toil all forwards do contend.

It is my love that keeps mine eye
Mine own true love that doth my rest defeat, [sake:

Sin of self-love possesseth all mine eye
And all my soul and all my every part;
And for this sin there is no remedy,
It is so grounded inward in my heart.
Methinks no face so gracious is as mine,
No shape so true, no truth of such account; [fine,
And for myself mine own worth do de-

Against my love shall be, as I am now,
With Time's injurious hand crush'd and o'erworn; [fill'd his brow
When hours have drain'd his blood and
With lines and wrinkles; when his youthful morn
Hath travell'd on to age's steepy night,
And all those beauties whereof now he's king
Are vanishing or vanish'd out of sight,
Stealing away the treasure of his spring;
For such a time do I now fortify
Against confounding age's cruel knife,
That he shall never cut from memory
My sweet love's beauty, though my lover's life: [be seen,
His beauty shall in these black lines
And they shall live, and he in them still green.

When I have seen by Time's fell hand defaced [age;
The rich proud cost of outworn buried
When sometime lofty towers I see down-razed,
And brass eternal slave to mortal rage;
When I have seen the hungry ocean gain
Advantage on the kingdom of the shore,
And the firm soil win of the watery main, [with store;
Increasing store with loss and loss
When I have seen such interchange of state,
Or state itself confounded to decay;
Ruin hath taught me thus to ruminate,
That Time will come and take my love away.
This thought is as a death, which cannot choose [to lose.
But weep to have that which it fears

LXV.

SINCE brass, nor stone, nor earth, nor boundless sea,
But sad mortality o'er-sways their power,
How with this rage shall beauty hold a plea,
Whose action is no stronger than a flower?
O, how shall summer's honey breath hold out
Against the wreckful siege of battering days,
When rocks impregnable are not so stout,
Nor gates of steel so strong, but Time decays?
O fearful meditation! where, alack,
Shall Time's best jewel from Time's chest lie hid?
Or what strong hand can hold his swift foot back?
Or who his spoil of beauty can forbid?
O, none, unless this miracle have might,
That in black ink my love may still shine bright.

LXVI.

TIRED with all these, for restful death I cry,—
As, to behold desert a beggar born,
And needy nothing trimm'd in jollity,
And purest faith unhappily forsworn,
And gilded honour shamefully misplaced,
And maiden virtue rudely strumpeted,
And right perfection wrongfully disgraced,
And strength by limping sway disabled,
And art made tongue-tied by authority,
And folly, doctor-like, controlling skill,
And simple truth miscall'd simplicity,
And captive good attending captain ill:
Tired with all these, from these would I be gone,
Save that, to die, I leave my love alone.

LXVII.

AH! wherefore with infection should he live,
And with his presence grace impiety,
That sin by him advantage should achieve
And lace itself with his society?
Why should false painting imitate his cheek
And steal dead seeing of his living hue?
Why should poor beauty indirectly seek Roses of shadow, since his rose is true?
Why should he live, now Nature bankrupt is,
Beggar'd of blood to blush through lively veins?
For she hath no exchequer now but his,
And, proud of many, lives upon his gains.
O! him she stores, to show what wealth she had
In days long since, before these last so bad.

LXVIII.

THUS is his cheek the map of days outworn,
When beauty lived and died as flowers do now,
Before these bastard signs of fair were born,
Or durst inhabit on a living brow;
Before the golden tresses of the dead,
The right of sepulchres, were shorn away,
To live a second life on second head;
Ere beauty's dead fleece made another gay:
In him those holy antique hours are seen,
Without all ornament, itself and true,
Making no summer of another's green,
Robbing no old to dress his beauty new;
And him as for a map doth Nature store,
To show false Art what beauty was of yore.

LXIX.

THOSE parts of thee that the world's eye doth view
Want nothing that the thought of hearts can mend;
All tongues, the voice of souls, give thee that due,
Uttering bare truth, even so as foes commend.
Thy outward thus with outward praise is crown'd;
But those same tongues that give thee so thine own
In other accents do this praise confound
By seeing farther than the eye hath shown.
They look into the beauty of thy mind,
And that, in guess, they measure by thy deeds;
Then, churls, their thoughts, although their eyes were kind,
To thy fair flower add the rank smell of weeds:
But why thy odour matcheth not thy show,
The solve is this, that thou dost common grow.

LXX.

THAT thou art blamed shall not be thy defect,
For slander's mark was ever yet the fair;
The ornament of beauty is suspect,
A crow that flies in heaven's sweetest prove
So thou be good, slander doth but ap-
Thy worth the greater, being woo'd of time;
For canker vice the sweetest buds doth love,
And thou present'st a pure unstained prime.
Thou hast pass'd by the ambush of young days
Either not assail'd or victor being charged;
Yet this thy praise cannot be so thy praise,
To tie up envy evermore enlarged:
If some suspect of ill mask'd not thy show,
Then thou alone kingdoms of hearts shouldst owe.

LXXI.

No longer mourn for me when I am dead
Than you shall hear the surly sullen bell
Give warning to the world that I am fled
From this vile world, with vilest worms to dwell:
Nay, if you read this line, remember not
The hand that writ it; for I love you so
That I in your sweet thoughts would be forgot
If thinking on me then should make you woe.
O, if, I say, you look upon this verse
When I perhaps compounded am with clay,
Do not so much as my poor name rehearse,
But let your love even with my life decay,
Lest the wise world should look into your moan,
And mock you with me after I am gone.

LXXII.

O, LEST the world should task you to recite
What merit lived in me, that you should love
After my death, dear love, forget me quite,
For you in me can nothing worthy prove;
Unless you would devise some virtuous lie
To do more for me than mine own desert,
And hang more praise upon deceased I
Than niggard truth would willingly impart:
O, lest your true love may seem false in this,
That you for love speak well of me untrue,
My name be buried where my body is,
And live no more to shame nor me nor you.
For I am shamed by that which I bring forth,
And so should you, to love things nothing worth.

LXXIII.

THAT time of year thou mayst in me behold
When yellow leaves, or none, or few, do hang
Upon those boughs which shake against the cold,
Bare ruin'd choirs, where late the sweet birds sang:
In me thou seest the twilight of such day
As after sunset fadeth in the west,
Which by and by black night doth take away,
Death's second self, that seals up all in rest:
In me thou seest the glowing of such fire
That on the ashes of his youth doth lie
As the death-bed whereon it must expire,
Consumed with that which it was nourish'd by:
This thou perceivest, which makes thy love more strong,
To love that well which thou must leave ere long.

BUT be contented: when that fell arrest
Without all bail shall carry me away,
My life hath in this line some interest,
Which for memorial still with thee shall stay.
When thou reviewest this, thou dost review
The very part was consecrate to thee:
The earth can have but earth, which is his due;
My spirit is thine, the better part of me:
So then thou hast but lost the dregs of life,
The prey of worms, my body being dead,
The coward conquest of a wretch's knife,
Too base of thee to be remembered.
The worth of that is that which it contains,
And that is this, and this with thee remains.

Where art thou, Muse, that thou forget'st so long [thy might?
To speak of that which gives thee all
Spend'st thou thy fury on some worthless song, [subjects light?
Darkening thy power to lend base
Return, forgetful Muse, and straight redeem
In gentle numbers time so idly spent;
Sing to the ear that doth thy lays esteem

And gives thy pen both skill and argument.
Rise, resty Muse, my love's sweet face survey,
If Time have any wrinkle graven there;
If any, be a satire to decay,
And make Time's spoils despised every where:
Give my love fame faster than Time wastes life;
So thou prevent'st his scythe and crooked knife.

CI.

O truant Muse, what shall be thy amends
For thy neglect of truth in beauty dyed?
Both truth and beauty on my love depends;
So dost thou too, and therein dignified.
Make answer, Muse: wilt thou not haply say
'Truth needs no colour, with his colour fix'd;
Beauty no pencil, beauty's truth to lay;
But best is best, if never intermix'd'?
Because he needs no praise, wilt thou be dumb?
Excuse not silence so; for it lies in thee
To make him much outlive a gilded tomb,
And to be praised of ages yet to be.
Then do thy office, Muse; I teach thee how
To make him seem long hence as he shows now.

CII.

My love is strengthen'd, though more weak in seeming;
I love not less, though less the show appear:
That love is merchandized whose rich esteeming
The owner's tongue doth publish every where.
Our love was new and then but in the spring
When I was wont to greet it with my lays,
As Philomel in summer's front doth sing
And stops her pipe in growth of riper days:
Not that the summer is less pleasant now
Than when her mournful hymns did hush the night,
But that wild music burdens every bough
And sweets grown common lose their dear delight.
Therefore like her I sometime hold my tongue;
Because I would not dull you with my song.

CIII.

Alack, what poverty my Muse brings forth,
That having such a scope to show her pride,
The argument all bare is of more worth
Than when it hath my added praise beside!
O, blame me not, if I no more can write!
Look in your glass, and there appears a face
That over-goes my blunt invention quite,
Dulling my lines and doing me disgrace.
Were it not sinful then, striving to mend,
To mar the subject that before was well?
For to no other pass my verses tend
Than of your graces and your gifts to tell;
And more, much more, than in my verse can sit
Your own glass shows you when you look in it.

CIV.

To me, fair friend, you never can be old,
For as you were when first your eye I eyed,
Such seems your beauty still. Three winters cold
Have from the forests shook three summers' pride,
Three beauteous springs to yellow autumn turn'd
In process of the seasons have I seen,
Three April perfumes in three hot Junes burn'd,
Since first I saw you fresh, which yet are green.
Ah! yet doth beauty, like a dial-hand,
Steal from his figure, and no pace perceived;
So your sweet hue, which methinks still doth stand,
Hath motion, and mine eye may be deceived:
For fear of which, hear this, thou age unbred;
Ere you were born was beauty's summer dead.

CV.

Let not my love be call'd idolatry,
Nor my beloved as an idol show,
Since all alike my songs and praises be
To one, of one, still such, and ever so.
Kind is my love to-day, to-morrow kind,
Still constant in a wondrous excellence;
Therefore my verse to constancy confined,
One thing expressing, leaves out differ-

I see their antique pen would have express'd
Even such a beauty as you master now.
So all their praises are but prophecies
Of this our time, all you prefiguring ;

So you o'er-green my bad, my good allow ? [strive
You are my all the world, and I must
To know my shames and praises from your tongue ;
None else to me, nor I to none alive,
That my steel'd sense or changes right or wrong.
In so profound abysm I throw all care
Of others' voices, that my adder's sense
To critic and to flatterer stopped are.
Mark how with my neglect I do dispense : [bred
You are so strongly in my purpose
That all the world besides methinks are dead.

CXIII.

SINCE I left you, mine eye is in my mind ;
And that which governs me to go about
Doth part his function and is partly blind,
Seems seeing, but effectually is out ;
For it no form delivers to the heart
Of bird, of flower, or shape, which it doth latch : [part,
Of his quick objects hath the mind no

For if it see the rudest or gentlest
The most sweet favour or deformed'st creature, [night,
The mountain or the sea, the day or
The crow or dove, it shapes them to your feature :
Incapable of more, replete with you,
My most true mind thus maketh mine untrue.

CXIV.

OR whether doth my mind, being crown'd with you, [flattery ?
Drink up the monarch's plague, this
Or whether shall I say, mine eye saith true, [my,
And that your love taught it this alche-

If it be poison'd, 'tis the lesser sin
That mine eye loves it and doth first begin.

CXV.

THOSE lines that I before have writ do lie, [you dearer :
Even those that said I could not love
Yet then my judgment knew no reason why [burn clearer.
My most full flame should afterwards

When I was certain o'er incertainty,
Crowning the present, doubting of the rest ? [say so,
Love is a babe ; then might I not

To give full growth to that which still doth grow?

CXVI.

Let me not to the marriage of true minds
Admit impediments. Love is not love
Which alters when it alteration finds,
Or bends with the remover to remove:
O, no! it is an ever-fixed mark
That looks on tempests and is never shaken;
It is the star to every wandering bark,
Whose worth 's unknown, although his height be taken.
Love 's not Time's fool, though rosy lips and cheeks [come;
Within his bending sickle's compass
Love alters not with his brief hours and weeks, [doom.

CXIX.

What potions have I drunk of Siren tears, [within,
Distill'd from limbecks foul as hell
Applying fears to hopes and hopes to fears,
Still losing when I saw myself to win!
What wretched errors hath my heart committed, [never!
Whilst it hath thought itself so blessed
How have mine eyes out of their spheres been fitted [fever!
In the distraction of this madding
O benefit of ill! now I find true
That better is by evil still made better;
And ruin'd love, when it is built anew,
Grows fairer than at first, more strong, far greater.
So I return rebuked to my content,
And gain by ill thrice more than I have spent.

CXX.

That you were once unkind befriends me now, [feel
And for that sorrow which I then did
Needs must I under my transgression bow, [mer'd steel,
Unless my nerves were brass or ham-
For if you were by my unkindness shaken [time,
As I by yours, you've pass'd a hell of
And I, a tyrant, have no leisure taken
To weigh how once I suffer'd in your crime. [remember'd
O, that our night of woe might have
My deepest sense, how hard true sorrow hits, [tender'd
And soon to you, as you to me, then
The humble salve which wounded bosoms fits! [a fee;
But that your trespass now becomes
Mine ransoms yours, and yours must ransom me.

CXXI.

'Tis better to be vile than vile esteem'd,

When not to be receives reproach of being, [deem'd
And the just pleasure lost which is so
Not by our feeling but by others' seeing : [eyes
For why should others' false adulterate
Give salutation to my sportive blood ?
Or on my frailties why are frailer spies,
Which in their wills count bad what I think good ? [level
No, I am that I am, and they that
At my abuses reckon up their own :
I may be straight, though they themselves be bevel ;
By their rank thoughts my deeds must not be shown ; [tain,
Unless this general evil they main-
All men are bad, and in their badness reign.

CXXII.

Thy gift, thy tables, are within my brain
Full character'd with lasting memory,
Which shall above that idle rank remain
Beyond all date, even to eternity ;
Or at the least, so long as brain and heart
Have faculty by nature to subsist ;
Till each to razed oblivion yield his part [miss'd.
Of thee, thy record never can be
That poor retention could not so much hold, [score ;
Nor need I tallies thy dear love to
Therefore to give them from me was I bold, [more :
To trust those tables that receive thee
To keep an adjunct to remember thee
Were to import forgetfulness in me.

CXXIII.

No, Time, thou shalt not boast that I do change : [might Thy pyramids built up with newer
To me are nothing novel, nothing strange ; [sight.
They are but dressings of a former
Our dates are brief, and therefore we admire [old,
What thou dost foist upon us that is
And rather make them born to our desire [them told.
Than think that we before have heard
Thy registers and thee I both defy,
Not wondering at the present nor the past, [lie,
For thy records and what we see do
Made more or less by thy continual haste. [be ;
This I do vow and this shall ever
I will be true, despite thy scythe and thee.

CXXIV.

If my dear love were but the child of state, [father'd,
It might for Fortune's bastard be un-
As subject to Time's love or to Time's hate, [flowers gather'd.
Weeds among weeds, or flowers with
No, it was builded far from accident ;
It suffers not in smiling pomp, nor falls
Under the blow of thralled discontent,
Whereto the inviting time our fashion calls :
It fears not policy, that heretic,
Which works on leases of short-numb ber'd hours,
But all alone stands hugely politic,
That it nor grows with heat nor drowns with showers. [time,
To this I witness call the fools of
Which die for goodness, who have lived for crime.

CXXV.

Were 't aught to me I bore the canopy,
With my extern the outward honouring,
Or laid great bases for eternity,
Which prove more short than waste or ruining ? [favour
Have I not seen dwellers on form and Lose all, and more, by paying too much rent, [savour
For compound sweet forgoing simple
Pitiful thrivers, in their gazing spent ?
No, let me be obsequious in thy heart,
And take thou my oblation, poor but free, [knows no art,
Which is not mix'd with seconds,
But mutual render, only me for thee.
Hence, thou suborn'd informer ! a true soul, [in thy control.
When most impeach'd, stands least

CXXVI.

O thou, my lovely boy, who in thy power [sickle, hour ;
Dost hold Time's fickle glass, his

Who hast by waning grown, and therein show'st [grow'st;
Thy lovers withering as thy sweet self
If Nature, sovereign mistress over wrack, [thee back,
As thou goest onwards, still will pluck
She keeps thee to this purpose, that her skill [utes kill.
May time disgrace and wretched min-
Yet fear her, O thou minion of her pleasure! [treasure:
She may detain, but not still keep, her
Her audit, though delay'd, answer'd must be,
And her quietus is—to render thee.

CXXVII.

In the old age black was not counted
fair, [name;
Or if it were, it bore not beauty's
But now is black beauty's successive heir, [shame:
And beauty slander'd with a bastard
For since each hand hath put on nature's power, [row'd face,
Fairing the foul with art's false bor-
Sweet beauty hath no name, no holy bower,
But is profaned, if not lives in disgrace.
Therefore my mistress' brows are raven black, [seem
Her eyes so suited, and they mourners
At such who, not born fair, no beauty lack,
Slandering creation with a false esteem:
Yet so they mourn, becoming of their woe, [should look so.
That every tongue says, beauty

CXXVIII.

How oft, when thou, my music, music
play'st, [sounds
Upon that blessed wood whose motion
With thy sweet fingers, when thou gently sway'st [founds,
The wiry concord that mine ear con-
Do I envy those jacks that nimble leap
To kiss the tender inward of thy hand, Whilst my poor lips, which should that harvest reap, [ing stand!
At the wood's boldness by thee blush-
To be so tickled, they would change their state
And situation with those dancing chips,
O'er whom thy fingers walk with gentle gait, [living lips.
Making dead wood more blest than Since saucy jacks so happy are in this, [to kiss.
Give them thy fingers, me thy lips

CXXIX.

The expense of spirit in a waste of shame
Is lust in action; and till action, lust
Is perjured, murderous, bloody, full of blame, [trust;
Savage, extreme, rude, cruel, not to
Enjoy'd no sooner but despised straight;
Past reason hunted, and no sooner had
Past reason hated, as a swallow'd bait
On purpose laid to make the taker mad;
Mad in pursuit and in possession so;
Had, having, and in quest to have,
extreme; [woe;
A bliss in proof, and proved, a very Before, a joy proposed; behind, a dream.
All this the world well knows; yet none knows well [to this hell.
To shun the heaven that leads men

CXXX.

My mistress' eyes are nothing like the sun;
Coral is far more red than her lips' red;
If snow be white, why then her breasts are dun; [her head.
If hairs be wires, black wires grow on
I have seen roses damask'd, red and white,
But no such roses see I in her cheeks;
And in some perfumes is there more delight [tress reeks.
Than in the breath that from my mis-
I love to hear her speak, yet well I know [sound;
That music hath a far more pleasing
I grant I never saw a goddess go;
My mistress, when she walks, treads on the ground: [as rare
And yet, by heaven, I think my love
As any she belied with false compare.

CXXXI.

Thou art as tyrannous, so as thou art,
As those whose beauties proudly make them cruel; [ing heart
For well thou know'st to my dear dot-
Thou art the fairest and most precious jewel. [behold
Yet, in good faith, some say that thee

Thy face hath not the power to make love groan :
To say they err I dare not be so bold,
Although I swear it to myself alone.
And, to be sure that is not false I swear, [thy face,
A thousand groans, but thinking on
One on another's neck, do witness bear
Thy black is fairest in my judgment's place. [thy deeds,
In nothing art thou black save in
And thence this slander, as I think, proceeds.

CXXXII.

THINE eyes I love, and they, as pitying me, [disdain,
Knowing thy heart torments me with
Have put on black, and loving mourners be, [pain.
Looking with pretty ruth upon my
And truly not the morning sun of heaven [the east,
Better becomes the grey cheeks of Nor that full star that ushers in the even
Doth half that glory to the sober west,
As those two mourning eyes become thy face :
O, let it then as well beseem thy heart
To mourn for me, since mourning doth thee grace,
And suit thy pity like in every part.
Then will I swear beauty herself is black [ion lack.
And all they foul that thy complex-

CXXXIII.

BESHREW that heart that makes my heart to groan [and me !
For that deep wound it gives my friend
Is 't not enough to torture me alone,
But slave to slavery my sweet'st friend must be ? [taken,
Me from myself thy cruel eye hath
And my next self thou harder hast en-gross'd : [saken ;
Of him, myself, and thee, I am for-
A torment thrice threefold thus to be cross'd. [ward,
Prison my heart in thy steel bosom's
But then my friend's heart let my poor heart bail ; [guard ;
Whoe'er keeps me, let my heart be his Thou canst not then use rigour in my gaol : [in thee,
And yet thou wilt ; for I, being pent
Perforce am thine, and all that is in me.

CXXXIV.

So, now I have confess'd that he is thine, [will,
And I myself am mortgaged to thy
Myself I'll forfeit, so that other mine
Thou wilt restore, to be my comfort still : [free,
But thou wilt not, nor he will not be
For thou art covetous and he is kind ;
He learn'd but surety-like to write for me [bind.
Under that bond that him as fast doth
The statute of thy beauty thou wilt take, [use,
Thou usurer, that put'st forth all to
And sue a friend came debtor for my sake ;
So him I lose through my unkind abuse.
Him have I lost ; thou hast both him
and me : [not free,
He pays the whole, and yet am I

CXXXV.

WHOEVER hath her wish, thou hast thy
' Will,' [overplus ;
And ' Will ' to boot, and ' Will ' in More than enough am I that vex thee still, [thus.
To thy sweet will making addition Wilt thou, whose will is large and spacious, [thine ?
Not once vouchsafe to hide my will in Shall will in others seem right gracious,
And in my will no fair acceptance shine ? [still
The sea, all water, yet receives rain
And in abundance addeth to his store ;
So thou, being rich in ' Will,' add to thy ' Will ' [' Will ' more.
One will of mine, to make thy large
Let no unkind, no fair beseechers kill ; [one ' Will.'
Think all but one, and me in that

CXXXVI.

IF thy soul check thee that I come so near, [' Will,'
Swear to thy blind soul that I was thy
And will, thy soul knows, is admitted there ; [fulfil.
Thus far for love my love-suit, sweet,
' Will ' will fulfil the treasure of thy love, [one.
Ay, fill it full with wills, and my will

In things of great receipt with ease we prove
Among a number one is reckon'd none :
Then in the number let me pass untold,
Though in thy stores' account I one must be ;
For nothing hold me, so it please thee
That nothing me, a something sweet to thee :
Make but my name thy love, and love that still,
And then thou lovest me, for my name is 'Will.'

CXXXVII.

Thou blind fool, Love, what dost thou to mine eyes,
That they behold, and see not what they see ?
They know what beauty is, see where it lies,
Yet what the best is take the worst to be.
If eyes corrupt by over-partial looks
Be anchor'd in the bay where all men ride,
Why of eyes' falsehood hast thou forged hooks,
Whereto the judgment of my heart is tied ?
Why should my heart think that a several plot
Which my heart knows the wide world's common place ?
Or mine eyes seeing this, say this is not,
To put fair truth upon so foul a face ?
In things right true my heart and eyes have err'd,
And to this false plague are they now transferr'd.

CXXXVIII.

When my love swears that she is made of truth
I do believe her, though I know she lies,
That she might think me some untutor'd youth,
Unlearned in the world's false subtleties.
Thus vainly thinking that she thinks me young,
Although she knows my days are past the best,
Simply I credit her false-speaking tongue :
On both sides thus is simple truth suppress'd.
But wherefore says she not she is unjust ?
And wherefore say not I that I am old ?
O, love's best habit is in seeming trust,
And age in love loves not to have years told :
Therefore I lie with her and she with me,
And in our faults by lies we flatter'd be.

CXXXIX.

O, call not me to justify the wrong
That thy unkindness lays upon my heart ;
Wound me not with thine eye but with thy tongue ;
Use power with power and slay me not by art.
Tell me thou lovest elsewhere, but in my sight,
Dear heart, forbear to glance thine eye aside :
What need'st thou wound with cunning when thy might
Is more than my o'er-press'd defence can bide ?
Let me excuse thee : ah ! my love well knows
Her pretty looks have been mine enemies,
And therefore from my face she turns my foes,
That they elsewhere might dart their injuries :
Yet do not so ; but since I am near slain,
Kill me outright with looks and rid my pain.

CXL.

Be wise as thou art cruel ; do not press
My tongue-tied patience with too much disdain ;
Lest sorrow lend me words and words express
The manner of my pity-wanting pain.
If I might teach thee wit, better it were,
Though not to love, yet, love, to tell me so ;
As testy sick men, when their deaths be near,
No news but health from their physicians know ;
For if I should despair, I should grow mad,
And in my madness might speak ill of thee :
Now this ill-wresting world is grown so bad,
Mad slanderers by mad ears believed be.
That I may not be so, nor thou belied,
Bear thine eyes straight, though thy proud heart go wide.

CXLI.

In faith, I do not love thee with mine eyes,
For they in thee a thousand errors note ;
But 'tis my heart that loves what they despise,
Who in despite of view is pleased to dote ;
Nor are mine ears with thy tongue's tune delighted,
Nor tender feeling, to base touches prone,
Nor taste, nor smell, desire to be invited
To any sensual feast with thee alone :

But my five wits nor my five senses can
Dissuade one foolish heart from serving thee, [man,
Who leaves unsway'd the likeness of a
Thy proud heart's slave and vassal wretch to be: [my gain,
Only my plague thus far I count
That she that makes me sin awards me pain.

CXLII.

Love is my sin and thy dear virtue hate, [loving:
Hate of my sin, grounded on sinful
O, but with mine compare thou thine own state, [proving;
And thou shalt find it merits not re-
Or, if it do, not from those lips of thine,
That have profaned their scarlet ornaments [mine,
And seal'd false bonds of love as oft as Robb'd others' beds' revenues of their rents. [those
Be it lawful I love thee, as thou lovest
Whom thine eyes woo as mine importune thee; [grows
Root pity in thy heart, that when it
Thy pity may deserve to pitied be.
If thou dost seek to have what thou dost hide, [denied!
By self-example mayst thou be

CXLIII.

Lo! as a careful housewife runs to catch [away,
One of her feather'd creatures broke
Sets down her babe and makes all swift dispatch [stay,
In pursuit of the thing she would have
Whilst her neglected child holds her in chase, [bent
Cries to catch her whose busy care is
To follow that which flies before her face, [tent;
Not prizing her poor infant's discon-
So runn'st thou after that which flies from thee, [behind;
Whilst I, thy babe, chase thee afar
But if thou catch thy hope, turn back to me, [be kind:
And play the mother's part, kiss me,
So will I pray that thou mayst have thy 'Will,' [ing still.
If thou turn back, and my loud cry-

CXLIV.

Two loves I have of comfort and despair,
Which like two spirits do suggest me still:
The better angel is a man right fair,
The worser spirit a woman colour'd ill.
To win me soon to hell, my female evil
Tempteth my better angel from my side, [devil,
And would corrupt my saint to be a
Wooing his purity with her foul pride.
And whether that my angel be turn'd fiend
Suspect I may, yet not directly tell;
But being both from me, both to each friend,
I guess one angel in another's hell:
Yet this shall I ne'er know, but live in doubt, [out.
Till my bad angel fire my good one

CXLV.

Those lips that Love's own hand did make [hate'
Breathed forth the sound that said 'I
To me that languish'd for her sake;
But when she saw my woeful state,
Straight in her heart did mercy come,
Chiding that tongue that, ever sweet,
Was used in giving gentle doom,
And taught it thus anew to greet;
'I hate' she alter'd with an end,
That follow'd it as gentle day
Doth follow night, who like a fiend
From heaven to hell is flown away;
'I hate' from hate away she threw,
And saved my life, saying 'not you.'

CXLVI.

Poor soul, the centre of my sinful earth,
Thrall to these rebel powers that thee array, [dearth,
Why dost thou pine within and suffer
Painting thy outward walls so costly gay? [lease,
Why so large cost, having so short a
Dost thou upon thy fading mansion spend?
Shall worms, inheritors of this excess,
Eat up thy charge? is this thy body's end? [vant's loss,
Then, soul, live thou upon thy ser-
And let that pine to aggravate thy store; [dross;
Buy terms divine in selling hours of
Within be fed, without be rich no more:
So shalt thou feed on Death, that feeds on men,
And Death once dead, there 's no more dying then.

CXLVII.

My love is as a fever, longing still
For that which longer nurseth the disease, [the ill,
Feeding on that which doth preserve
The uncertain sickly appetite to please.
My reason, the physician to my love,
Angry that his prescriptions are not kept, [approve
Hath left me, and I desperate now
Desire is death, which physic did except. [care,
Past cure I am, now reason is past
And frantic-mad with evermore unrest;
My thoughts and my discourse as mad-men's are, [press'd;
At random from the truth vainly ex-
For I have sworn thee fair and thought thee bright, [as night.
Who art as black as hell, as dark

CXLVIII.

O me, what eyes hath Love put in my head, [true sight!
Which have no correspondence with
Or, if they have, where is my judgment fled, [aright?
That censures falsely what they see
If that be fair whereon my false eyes dote, [so?
What means the world to say it is not
If it be not, then love doth well denote
Love's 'eye' is not so true as all men's 'no:' [be true,
How can it? O, how can Love's eye
That is so vex'd with watching and with tears? [view;
No marvel then, though I mistake my
The sun itself sees not till heaven clears. [keep'st me blind,
O cunning Love! with tears thou
Lest eyes well-seeing thy foul faults should find.

CXLIX.

Canst thou, O cruel! say I love thee not, [take?
When I against myself with thee par-
Do I not think on thee, when I forgot
Am of myself, all tyrant, for thy sake?
Who hateth thee that I do call my friend? [upon?
On whom frown'st thou that I do fawn
Nay, if thou lour'st on me, do I not spend [moan?
Revenge upon myself with present
What merit do I in myself respect,
That is so proud thy service to despise,
When all my best doth worship thy defect, [eyes?
Commanded by the motion of thine
But, love, hate on, for now I know thy mind; [I am blind.
Those that can see thou lovest, and

CL.

O, from what power hast thou this powerful might
With insufficiency my heart to sway?
To make me give the lie to my true sight, [grace the day?
And swear that brightness doth not
Whence hast thou this becoming of things ill,
That in the very refuse of thy deeds
There is such strength and warrantise of skill [exceeds?
That, in my mind, thy worst all best
Who taught thee how to make me love thee more [hate?
The more I hear and see just cause of
O, though I love what others do abhor,
With others thou shouldst not abhor my state: [me,
If thy unworthiness raised love in
More worthy I to be beloved of thee.

CLI.

Love is too young to know what conscience is; [of love?
Yet who knows not conscience is born
Then, gentle cheater, urge not my amiss, [self prove:
Lest guilty of my faults thy sweet
For, thou betraying me, I do betray
My nobler part to my gross body's treason;
My soul doth tell my body that he may
Triumph in love; flesh stays no farther reason; [thee
But, rising at thy name, doth point out
As his triumphant prize. Proud of this pride,
He is contented thy poor drudge to be,
To stand in thy affairs, fall by thy side.
No want of conscience hold it that I call [rise and fall.
Her 'love' for whose dear love I

CLII.

In loving thee thou know'st I am forsworn, [swearing,
But thou art twice forsworn, to me love
In act thy bed-vow broke and new faith torn

In vowing new hate after new love bearing.
But why of two oaths' breach do I accuse thee, [most;
When I break twenty? I am perjured
For all my vows are oaths but to misuse thee,
And all my honest faith in thee is lost;
For I have sworn deep oaths of thy deep kindness, [stancy,
Oaths of thy love, thy truth, thy con-
And, to enlighten thee, gave eyes to blindness, [they see;
Or made them swear against the thing
For I have sworn thee fair; more perjured I, [a lie!
To swear against the truth so foul

CLIII.

CUPID laid by his brand, and fell asleep:
A maid of Dian's this advantage found,
And his love-kindling fire did quickly steep [ground;
In a cold valley-fountain of that
Which borrow'd from this holy fire of Love
A dateless lively heat, still to endure,
And grew a seething bath, which yet men prove [cure.
Against strange maladies a sovereign
But at my mistress' eye Love's brand new-fired, [my breast;
The boy for trial needs would touch
I, sick withal, the help of bath desired,
And thither hied, a sad distemper'd guest, [help lies
But found no cure: the bath for my
Where Cupid got new fire—my mistress' eyes.

CLIV.

THE little Love-god lying once asleep
Laid by his side his heart-inflaming brand, [life to keep
Whilst many nymphs that vow'd chaste
Came tripping by; but in her maiden hand
The fairest votary took up that fire
Which many legions of true hearts had warm'd;
And so the general of hot desire
Was sleeping by a virgin hand disarm'd.
This brand she quenched in a cool well by, [petual,
Which from Love's fire took heat per-
Growing a bath and healthful remedy
For men diseased; but I, my mistress' thrall, [that I prove,
Came there for cure, and this by
Love's fire heats water, water cools not love.

VENUS AND ADONIS

'Vilia miretur vulgus; mihi flavus Apollo
Pocula Castalia plena ministret aqua.'

TO THE

RIGHT HONOURABLE HENRY WRIOTHESLY

EARL OF SOUTHAMPTON, AND BARON OF TICHFIELD

RIGHT HONOURABLE,

I KNOW not how I shall offend in dedicating my unpolished lines to your lordship, nor how the world will censure me for choosing so strong a prop to support so weak a burden: only, if your honour seem but pleased, I account myself highly praised, and vow to take advantage of all idle hours, till I have honoured you with some graver labour. But if the first heir of my invention prove deformed, I shall be sorry it had so noble a god-father, and never after ear so barren a land, for fear it yield me still so bad a harvest. I leave it to your honourable survey, and your honour to your heart's content; which I wish may always answer your own wish and the world's hopeful expectation.

Your honour's in all duty,
WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE.

EVEN as the sun with purple-colour'd face [morn,
Had ta'en his last leave of the weeping
Rose-cheek'd Adonis hied him to the chase; [to scorn;
Hunting he loved, but love he laugh'd
Sick-thoughted Venus makes amain unto him, [woo him.
And like a bold-faced suitor 'gins to

'Thrice-fairer than myself,' thus she began, [compare,
'The field's chief flower, sweet above
Stain to all nymphs, more lovely than a man, [are;
More white and red than doves or roses
Nature that made thee, with herself at strife, [thy life.
Saith that the world hath ending with

'Vouchsafe, thou wonder, to alight thy steed, [bow;
And rein his proud head to the saddle-
If thou wilt deign this favour, for thy meed [know:
A thousand honey secrets shalt thou
Here come and sit, where never serpent hisses, [with kisses;
And being set, I'll smother thee

'And yet not cloy thy lips with loathed satiety, [plenty,
But rather famish them amid their
Making them red and pale with fresh variety, [twenty:
Ten kisses short as one, one long as
A summer's day will seem an hour but short, [ing sport.'
Being wasted in such time-beguil-

With this she seizeth on his sweating palm,
The precedent of pith and livelihood,
And trembling in her passion, calls it balm, [dess good:
Earth's sovereign salve to do a god-
Being so enraged, desire doth lend her force [horse.
Courageoously to pluck him from his

Over one arm the lusty courser's rein,
Under her other was the tender boy,
Who blush'd and pouted in a dull disdain,
With leaden appetite, unapt to toy;
She red and hot as coals of glowing fire, [desire.
He red for shame, but frosty in

The studded bridle on a ragged bough
Nimbly she fastens:—O, how quick is love!—
The steed is stalled up, and even now
To tie the rider she begins to prove:
Backward she push'd him, as she would be thrust,
And govern'd him in strength, though not in lust.

So soon was she along as he was down,
Each leaning on their elbows and their hips: [doth he frown,
Now doth she stroke his cheek, now

And 'gins to chide, but soon she stops his lips ; [guage broken,
And kissing speaks, with lustful lan-
'If thou wilt chide, thy lips shall never open.'

He burns with bashful shame ; she with her tears [his cheeks ;
Doth quench the maiden burning of
Then with her windy sighs and golden hairs [seeks :
To fan and blow them dry again she
He saith she is immodest, blames her 'miss ; [a kiss.
What follows more she murders with

Even as an empty eagle, sharp by fast,
Tires with her beak on feathers, flesh and bone, [haste,
Shaking her wings, devouring all in
Till either gorge be stuff'd or prey be gone ; [cheek, his chin,
Even so she kissed his brow, his
And where she ends she doth anew begin.

Forced to content, but never to obey,
Panting he lies and breatheth in her face ;
She feedeth on the steam as on a prey,
And calls it heavenly moisture, air of grace ; [full of flowers,
Wishing her cheeks were gardens
So they were dew'd with such distilling showers.

Look, how a bird lies tangled in a net,
So fasten'd in her arms Adonis lies ;
Pure shame and awed resistance made him fret, [eyes :
Which bred more beauty in his angry
Rain added to a river that is rank
Perforce will force it overflow the bank.

Still she entreats, and prettily entreats,
For to a pretty ear she tunes her tale ;
Still is he sullen, still he lours and frets,
'Twixt crimson shame and anger ashy-pale ; [being white,
Being red, she loves him best ; and
Her best is better'd with a more delight.

Look how he can, she cannot choose but love ; [swears,
And by her fair immortal hand she
From his soft bosom never to remove,
Till he take truce with her contending tears,
Which long have rain'd, making her cheeks all wet ;
And one sweet kiss shall pay this countless debt.

Upon this promise did he raise his chin,
Like a dive-dapper peering through a wave, [in ;
Who, being look'd on, ducks as quickly
So offers he to give what she did crave ;
But when her lips were ready for his pay, [way.
He winks, and turns his lips another

Danger deviseth shifts; wit waits on

'For there his smell with others being mingled, [driven to doubt,
The hot scent-snuffing hounds are
Ceasing their clamorous cry till they have singled [out;
With much ado the cold fault cleanly
Then do they spend their mouths: Echo replies, [skies.
As if another chase were in the

'By this, poor Wat, far off upon a hill,
Stands on his hinder legs with listening ear,
To hearken if his foes pursue him still:
Anon their loud alarums he doth hear;
And now his grief may be compared well [ing-bell.
To one sore sick that hears the pass-

'Then shalt thou see the dew-be-dabbled wretch [the way;
Turn, and return, indenting with
Each envious brier his weary legs doth scratch, [murmur stay:
Each shadow makes him stop, each
For misery is trodden on by many,
And being low never relieved by any.

'Lie quietly, and hear a little more;
Nay, do not struggle, for thou shalt not rise: [boar,
To make thee hate the hunting of the
Unlike myself thou hear'st me moralize,
Applying this to that, and so to so;
For love can comment upon every woe.

'Where did I leave?' 'No matter where;' quoth he, [ends:
'Leave me, and then the story aptly
The night is spent.' 'Why, what of that?' quoth she. [friends;
'I am,' quoth he, 'expected of my
And now 'tis dark, and going I shall fall.' [best of all.
'In night,' quoth she, 'desire sees

'But if thou fall, O, then imagine this,
The earth, in love with thee, thy footing trips,
And all is but to rob thee of a kiss.
Rich preys make true men thieves; so do thy lips, [lorn,
Make modest Dian cloudy and for-
Lest she should steal a kiss and die forsworn.

'Now of this dark night I perceive the reason: [shine,
Cynthia for shame obscures her silver
Till forging Nature be condemn'd of treason, [were divine;
For stealing moulds from heaven that
Wherein she framed thee in high heaven's despite, [night.
To shame the sun by day and her by

'And therefore hath she bribed the Destinies [Nature,
To cross the curious workmanship of
To mingle beauty with infirmities,
And pure perfection with impure defeature,
Making it subject to the tyranny
Of mad mischances and much misery;

'As burning fevers, agues pale and faint,
Life-poisoning pestilence and frenzies wood, [attaint
The marrow-eating sickness, whose Disorder breeds by heating of the blood: [damn'd despair,
Surfeits, imposthumes, grief, and Swear Nature's death for framing thee so fair.

'And not the least of all these maladies
But in one minute's fight brings beauty under:
Both favour, savour, hue and qualities,
Whereat the impartial gazer late did wonder, [and done,
Are on the sudden wasted, thaw'd
As mountain-snow melts with the midday sun.

'Therefore, despite of fruitless chastity,
Love-lacking vestals and self-loving nuns, [city
That on the earth would breed a scar-
And barren dearth of daughters and of sons, [night
Be prodigal: the lamp that burns by Dries up his oil to lend the world his light.

'What is thy body but a swallowing grave,
Seeming to bury that posterity
Which by the rights of time thou needs must have, [scurity?
If thou destroy them not in dark ob-
If so, the world will hold thee in disdain, [slain.
Sith in thy pride so fair a hope is

'So in thyself thyself art made away;

Or theirs whose desperate hands them-

Or butcher-sire that reaves his son of life. [sure frets,
Foul-cankering rust the hidden trea-
But gold that 's put to use more gold begets.'

'Nay, then,' quoth Adon, 'you will fall again
Into your idle over-handled theme :
The kiss I gave you is bestow'd in vain,
And all in vain you strive against the stream ; [sire's foul nurse,
For, by this black-faced night, de-
Your treatise makes me like you worse and worse.

'If love have lent you twenty thousand tongues, [your own,
And every tongue more moving than Bewitching like the wanton mermaid's songs, [is blown ;
Yet from mine ear the tempting tune
For know, my heart stands armed in mine ear, [there ;
And will not let a false sound enter

'Lest the deceiving harmony should run
Into the quiet closure of my breast ;
And then my little heart were quite undone,
In his bedchamber to be barr'd of rest.
No, lady, no ; my heart longs not to groan, [sleeps alone.
But soundly sleeps, while now it

'What have you urged that I cannot reprove ? [danger :
The path is smooth that leadeth on to
I hate not love, but your device in love,
That lends embracements unto every stranger. [excuse,
You do it for increase : O strange
When Reason is the bawd to Lust's abuse !

'Call it not love, for Love to heaven is fled, [his name ;
Since sweating Lust on earth usurp'd
Under whose simple semblance he hath fed [blame ;
Upon fresh beauty, blotting it with
Which the hot tyrant stains and soon bereaves,
As caterpillars do the tender leaves.

'Love comforteth like sunshine after rain,
But Lust's effect is tempest after sun ;
Love's gentle spring doth always fresh remain, [be done ;
Lust's winter comes ere summer half
Love surfeits not, Lust like a glutton dies ; [lies.
Love is all truth, Lust full of forged

'More I could tell, but more I dare not say ;
The text is old, the orator too green.
Therefore, in sadness, now I will away ;
My face is full of shame, my heart of teen : [attended,
Mine ears, that to your wanton talk
Do burn themselves for having so offended.'

With this, he breaketh from the sweet embrace [her breast,
Of those fair arms which bound him to
And homeward through the dark laund runs apace ; [distress'd.
Leaves Love upon her back deeply
Look, how a bright star shooteth from the sky, [eye,
So glides he in the night from Venus'

Which after him she darts, as one on shore
Gazing upon a late-embarked friend,
Till the wild waves will have him seen no more, [contend :
Whose ridges with the meeting clouds
So did the merciless and pitchy night
Fold in the object that did feed her sight.

Whereat amazed, as one that unaware
Hath dropp'd a precious jewel in the flood, [are,
Or stonish'd as night-wanderers often
Their light blown out in some mistrustful wood, [lay,
Even so confounded in the dark she
Having lost the fair discovery of her way.

And now she beats her heart, whereat it groans, [ing troubled,
That all the neighbour caves, as seem-
Make verbal repetition of her moans ;
Passion on passion deeply is redoubled :
'Ay me!' she cries, and twenty times 'Woe, woe!' [so.
And twenty echoes twenty times cry

She marking them begins a wailing note
And sings extemporally a woeful ditty ;

How love makes young men thrall and old men dote ;
How love is wise in folly, foolish-witty :
Her heavy anthem still concludes in woe, [so.
And still the choir of echoes answer

Her song was tedious and outwore the night, [seeming short :
For lovers' hours are long, though
If pleased themselves, others, they think, delight [like sport :
In such-like circumstance, with such-
Their copious stories oftentimes begun [done.
End without audience and are never

For who hath she to spend the night withal
But idle sounds resembling parasites,
Like shrill-tongued tapsters answering every call,
Soothing the humour of fantastic wits ?
She says ' 'Tis so : ' they answer all
' 'Tis so ; ' [' No.'
And would say after her, if she said

Lo, here the gentle lark, weary of rest,
From his moist cabinet mounts up on high, [silver breast
And wakes the morning, from whose
The sun ariseth in his majesty ;
Who doth the world so gloriously behold [ish'd gold.
That cedar-tops and hills seem burn-

Venus salutes him with this fair good-morrow : [light,
' O thou clear god, and patron of all
From whom each lamp and shining star doth borrow [him bright,
The beauteous influence that makes
There lives a son that suck'd an earthly mother,
May lend thee light, as thou dost lend to other.'

This said, she hasteth to a myrtle grove,
Musing the morning is so much o'er-worn, [love :
And yet she hears no tidings of her
She hearkens for his hounds and for his horn :
Anon she hears them chant it lustily,
And all in haste she coasteth to the cry.

And as she runs, the bushes in the way
Some catch her by the neck, some kiss her face,
Some twine about her thigh to make her stay :
She wildly breaketh from their strict embrace, [dugs do ache,
Like a milch doe, whose swelling
Hasting to feed her fawn hid in some brake.

By this, she hears the hounds are at a bay ; [an adder
Whereat she starts, like one that spies
Wreathed up in fatal folds just in his way, [and shudder ;
The fear whereof doth make him shake
Even so the timorous yelping of the hounds [founds,
Appals her senses and her spirit con-

For now she knows it is no gentle chase,
But the blunt boar, rough bear, or lion proud,
Because the cry remaineth in one place,
Where fearfully the dogs exclaim aloud :
Finding their enemy to be so curst,
They all strain courtesy who shall cope him first.

This dismal cry rings sadly in her ear,
Through which it enters to surprise her heart ; [fear,
Who, overcome by doubt and bloodless
With cold-pale weakness numbs each feeling part :
Like soldiers, when their captain
once doth yield, [the field,
They basely fly and dare not stay.

Thus stands she in a trembling ecstasy ;
Till, cheering up her senses all dis-
may'd,
She tells them 'tis a causeless fantasy,
And childish error, that they are afraid ;
Bids them leave quaking, bids them fear no more :— [hunted boar ;
And with that word she spied the

Whose frothy mouth, bepainted all with red, [both together,
Like milk and blood being mingled
A second fear through all her sinews spread, [not whither :
Which madly hurries her she knows
This way she runs, and now she will no further, [murther.
But back retires to rate the boar for

A thousand spleens bear her a thousand ways ; [again ;
She treads the path that she untreads

Her more than haste is mated with delays, [brain,
Like the proceedings of a drunken
Full of respects, yet nought at all respecting; [effecting.
In hand with all things, nought at all

Here kennell'd in a brake she finds a hound, [master,
And asks the weary caitiff for his
And there another licking of his wound,
'Gainst venom'd sores the only sovereign plaster; [scowling,
And here she meets another sadly
To whom she speaks, and he replies with howling.

When he hath ceased his ill-resounding noise, [and grim,
Another flap-mouth'd mourner, black
Against the welkin volleys out his voice;
Another and another answer him,
Clapping their proud tails to the ground below, [as they go.
Shaking their scratch'd ears, bleeding

Look, how the world's poor people are amazed
At apparitions, signs and prodigies,
Whereon with fearful eyes they long have gazed, [cies;
Infusing them with dreadful prophe-
So she at these sad signs draws up her breath [Death.
And sighing it again, exclaims on

'Hard-favour'd tyrant, ugly, meagre, lean, [she Death,— Hateful divorce of love,'—thus chides
'Grim-grinning ghost, earth's worm, what dost thou mean [breath,
To stifle beauty and to steal his
Who when he lived, his breath and beauty set
Gloss on the rose, smell to the violet?

'If he be dead,—O no, it cannot be,
Seeing his beauty, thou shouldst strike at it:— [see,
O yes, it may; thou hast no eyes to
But hatefully at random dost thou hit.
Thy mark is feeble age, but thy false dart [infant's heart.
Mistakes that aim and cleaves an

'Hadst thou but bid beware, then he had spoke, [his power.
And, hearing him, thy power had lost
The Destinies will curse thee for this stroke; [pluck'st a flower:
They bid thee crop a weed, thou
Love's golden arrow at him should have fled, [him dead.
And not Death's ebon dart, to strike

'Dost thou drink tears, that thou provokest such weeping? [thee?
What may a heavy groan advantage
Why hast thou cast into eternal sleeping [to see?
Those eyes that taught all other eyes
Now Nature cares not for thy mortal vigour, [thy rigour.'
Since her best work is ruin'd with

Here overcome, as one full of despair,
She vail'd her eyelids, who, like sluices, stopt [cheeks fair
The crystal tide that from her two
In the sweet channel of her bosom dropt; [the silver rain,
But through the flood-gates breaks
And with his strong course opens them again.

O, how her eyes and tears did lend and borrow! [eye;
Her eyes seen in the tears, tears in her
Both crystals, where they view'd each other's sorrow, [to dry;
Sorrow that friendly sighs sought still
But like a stormy day, now wind, now rain, [them wet again,
Sighs dry her cheeks, tears make

Variable passions throng her constant woe, [her grief;
As striving who should best become
All entertain'd, each passion labours so,
That every present sorrow seemeth chief, [together,
But none is best: then join they all
Like many clouds consulting for foul weather.

By this, far off she hears some huntsman hollo; [so well:
A nurse's song ne'er pleased her babe
The dire imagination she did follow
This sound of hope doth labour to expel;
For now reviving joy bids her rejoice,
And flatters her it is Adonis' voice.

Whereat her tears began to turn their tide, [in glass;
Being prison'd in her eye like pearls

Yet sometimes falls an orient drop beside, [should pass,
While her cheek melts, as scorning it
To wash the foul face of the sluttish ground, [eth drown'd.
Who is but drunken when she seem-

O hard-believing love, how strange it seems
Not to believe, and yet too credulous!
Thy weal and woe are both of them extremes; [lous:
Despair and hope makes thee ridicu-
The one doth flatter thee in thoughts unlikely, [thee quickly.
In likely thoughts the other kills

Now she unweaves the web that she hath wrought; [blame;
Adonis lives, and Death is not to
It was not she that call'd him all-to nought: [name;
Now she adds honours to his hateful
She clepes him king of graves and grave for kings, [things.
Imperious supreme of all mortal

'No, no,' quoth she, 'sweet Death, I did but jest;
Yet pardon me I felt a kind of fear
Whenas I met the boar, that bloody beast, [vere;
Which knows no pity, but is still se-

I rail'd on thee, fearing my love's de-

Could rule them both without ten

Thus hoping that Adonis is alive,
Her rash suspect she doth extenuate;
And that his beauty may the better thrive,
With Death she humbly doth insinuate;
Tells him of trophies, statues, tombs, and stories [glories.
His victories, his triumphs and his

'O Jove,' quoth she, 'how much a fool was I
To be of such a weak and silly mind
To wail his death who lives and must not die
Till mutual overthrow of mortal kind!
For he being dead, with him is beauty slain, [again.
And, beauty dead, black chaos comes

'Fie, fie, fond love, thou art so full of fear [with thieves;
As one with treasure laden, hemm'd
Trifles, unwitnessed with eye or ear,
Thy coward heart with false bethinking grieves,' [horn,
Even at this word she hears a merry
Whereat she leaps that was but late forlorn.

As falcon to the lure, away she flies;
The grass stoops not, she treads on it so light;
And in her haste unfortunately spies
The foul boar's conquest on her fair delight; [with the view,
Which seen, her eyes, as murder'd
Like stars ashamed of day, themselves withdrew;

Or, as the snail, whose tender horns being hit, [with pain,
Shrinks backward in his shelly cave
And there, all smother'd up, in shade doth sit, [again;
Long after fearing to creep forth
So, at his bloody view, her eyes are fled [head:
Into the deep dark cabins of her

Where they resign their office and their light
To the disposing of her troubled brain;
Who bids them still consort with ugly night, [again;
And never wound the heart with looks
Who, like a king perplexed in his throne, [groan,
By their suggestion gives a deadly

This mutiny each part doth so sur-
That from their dark beds once more leap her eyes;

And, being open'd, threw unwilling light [had trench'd
Upon the wide wound that the boar

With purple tears, that his wound wept,
No flower was nigh, no grass, herb, leaf, or weed, [him to bleed.
But stole his blood and seem'd with

This solemn sympathy poor Venus noteth; [head;
Over one shoulder doth she hang her
Dumbly she passions, franticly she doteth; [dead:
She thinks he could not die, he is not
Her voice is stopt, her joints forget to bow; [wept till now.
Her eyes are mad that they have

Upon his hurt she looks so steadfastly,
That her sight dazzling makes the wound seem three; [eye,
And then she reprehends her mangling
That makes more gashes where no breach should be:
His face seems twain, each several limb is doubled;
For oft the eye mistakes, the brain being troubled.

'My tongue cannot express my grief for one, [Adons dead!
And yet,' quoth she, 'behold two
My sighs are blown away, my salt tears gone, [to lead:
Mine eyes are turn'd to fire, my heart
Heavy heart's lead, melt at mine eyes' red fire!
So shall I die by drops of hot desire.

'Alas, poor world, what treasure hast thou lost! [the viewing?
What face remains alive that's worth
Whose tongue is music now? what canst thou boast [ensuing?
Of things long since, or any thing
The flowers are sweet, their colours fresh and trim;
But true-sweet beauty lived and died with him.

'Bonnet nor veil henceforth no creature wear! [kiss you:
Nor sun nor wind will ever strive to
Having no fair to lose, you need not fear; [doth hiss you:
The sun doth scorn you and the wind
But when Adonis lived, sun and sharp air [of his fair:
Lurk'd like two thieves, to rob him

'And therefore would he put his bonnet on, [would peep;
Under whose brim the gaudy sun
The wind would blow it off and, being gone, [nis weep;
Play with his locks: then would Ado-
And straight, in pity of his tender years, [should dry his tears.
They both would strive who first

'To see his face the lion walk'd along
Behind some hedge, because he would not fear him;
To recreate himself when he hath sung,
The tiger would be tame and gently hear him; [leave his prey
If he had spoke, the wolf would
And never fright the silly lamb that day.

'When he beheld his shadow in the brook, [gills;
The fishes spread on it their golden
When he was by, the birds such pleasure took, [their bills
That some would sing, some other in
Would bring him mulberries and ripe-red cherries;
He fed them with his sight, they him with berries.

'But this foul, grim, and urchin-snouted boar, [a grave,
Whose downward eye still looketh for
Ne'er saw the beauteous livery that he wore; [gave:
Witness the entertainment that he
If he did see his face, why then I know [kill'd him so.
He thought to kiss him, and hath

''Tis true, 'tis true; thus was Adonis slain: [spear,
He ran upon the boar with his sharp
Who did not whet his teeth at him again, [him there;
But by a kiss thought to persuade
And nuzzling in his flank, the loving swine [groin.
Sheathed unaware the tusk in his soft

'Had I been tooth'd like him, I must confess, [him first;
With kissing him I should have kill'd
But he is dead, and never did he bless
My youth with his; the more am I accurst.' [she stood,
With this, she falleth in the place
And stains her face with his congealed blood.

She looks upon his lips, and they are pale;
She takes him by the hand, and that is cold;
She whispers in his ears a heavy tale,
As if they heard the woeful words she told;
She lifts the coffer-lids that close his eyes,
Where, lo, two lamps, burnt out, in darkness lies;

Two glasses, where herself herself beheld
A thousand times, and now no more reflect;
Their virtue lost, wherein they late excell'd,
And every beauty robb'd of his effect:
'Wonder of time,' quoth she, 'this is my spite,
That, thou being dead, the day should yet be light.

'Since thou art dead, lo, here I prophesy:
Sorrow on love hereafter shall attend:
It shall be waited on with jealousy,
Find sweet beginning, but unsavoury end,
Ne'er settled equally, but high or low,
That all love's pleasure shall not match his woe.

'It shall be fickle, false and full of fraud,
Bud and be blasted in a breathing-while;
The bottom poison, and the top o'erstraw'd
With sweets that shall the truest sight beguile:
The strongest body shall it make most weak,
Strike the wise dumb and teach the fool to speak.

'It shall be sparing and too full of riot,
Teaching decrepit age to tread the measures;
The staring ruffian shall it keep in quiet,
Pluck down the rich, enrich the poor with treasures;
It shall be raging-mad and silly-mild,
Make the young old, the old become a child.

'It shall suspect where is no cause of fear;
It shall not fear where it should most mistrust;
It shall be merciful and too severe,
And most deceiving when it seems most just;
Perverse it shall be where it shows most toward,
Put fear to valour, courage to the coward.

'It shall be cause of war and dire events,
And set dissension 'twixt the son and sire;
Subject and servile to all discontents,
As dry combustious matter is to fire:
Sith in his prime Death doth my love destroy,
They that love best their loves shall not enjoy.'

By this, the boy that by her side lay kill'd
Was melted like a vapour from her sight,
And in his blood that on the ground lay spill'd,
A purple flower sprung up, chequer'd with white,
Resembling well his pale cheeks and the blood
Which in round drops upon their whiteness stood.

She bows her head, the new-sprung flower to smell,
Comparing it to her Adonis' breath,
And says, within her bosom it shall dwell,
Since he himself is reft from her by death:
She crops the stalk, and in the breach appears
Green dropping sap, which she compares to tears.

'Poor flower,' quoth she, 'this was thy father's guise—
Sweet issue of a more sweet-smelling sire—
For every little grief to wet his eyes:
To grow unto himself was his desire,
And so 'tis thine; but know, it is as good
To wither in my breast as in his blood.

'Here was thy father's bed, here in my breast;
Thou art the next of blood, and 'tis thy right:
Lo, in this hollow cradle take thy rest,
My throbbing heart shall rock thee day and night:
There shall not be one minute in an hour
Wherein I will not kiss my sweet love's flower.'

Thus weary of the world, away she hies,
And yokes her silver doves; by whose swift aid
Their mistress mounted through the empty skies
In her light chariot quickly is convey'd;
Holding their course to Paphos, where their queen
Means to immure herself and not be seen.

THE RAPE OF LUCRECE

TO THE

RIGHT HONOURABLE HENRY WRIOTHESLY

EARL OF SOUTHAMPTON, AND BARON OF TICHFIELD.

THE love I dedicate to your lordship is without end; whereof this pamphlet, without beginning, is but a superfluous moiety. The warrant I have of your honourable disposition, not the worth of my untutored lines, makes it assured of acceptance. What I have done is yours; what I have to do is yours; being part in all I have, devoted yours. Were my worth greater, my duty would show greater; meantime, as it is, it is bound to your lordship, to whom I wish long life, still lengthened with all happiness.

Your lordship's in all duty,

WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE.

THE ARGUMENT

LUCIUS TARQUINIUS, for his excessive pride surnamed Superbus, after he had caused his own father-in-law Servius Tullius to be cruelly murdered, and, contrary to the Roman laws and customs, not requiring or staying for the people's suffrages, had possessed himself of the kingdom, went, accompanied with his sons and other noblemen of Rome, to besiege Ardea. During which siege the principal men of the army meeting one evening at the tent of Sextus Tarquinius, the king's son, in their discourses after supper every one commended the virtues of his own wife: among whom Collatinus extolled the incomparable chastity of his wife Lucretia. In that pleasant humour they all posted to Rome; and intending, by their secret and sudden arrival, to make trial of that which every one had before avouched, only Collatinus finds his wife, though it were late in the night, spinning amongst her maids: the other ladies were all found dancing and revelling, or in several disports. Whereupon the noblemen yielded Collatinus the victory, and his wife the fame. At that time Sextus Tarquinius being inflamed with Lucrece' beauty, yet smothering his passions for the present, departed with the rest back to the camp; from whence he shortly after privily withdrew himself, and was, according to his estate, royally entertained and lodged by Lucrece at Collatium. The same night he treacherously stealeth into her chamber, violently ravished her, and early in the morning speedeth away. Lucrece, in this lamentable plight, hastily dispatcheth messengers, one to Rome for her father, another to the camp for Collatine. They came, the one accompanied with Junius Brutus, the other with Publius Valerius; and finding Lucrece attired in mourning habit, demanded the cause of her sorrow. She, first taking an oath of them for her revenge, revealed the actor, and whole manner of his dealing, and withal suddenly stabbed herself. Which done, with one consent they all vowed to root out the whole hated family of the Tarquins; and bearing the dead body to Rome, Brutus acquainted the people with the doer and manner of the vile deed, with a bitter invective against the tyranny of the king: wherewith the people were so moved, that with one consent and a general acclamation the Tarquins were all exiled, and the state government changed from kings to consuls.

FROM the besieged Ardea all in post,
Borne by the trustless wings of false desire,
Lust-breathed Tarquin leaves the Roman host,
And to Collatium bears the lightless fire
Which, in pale embers hid, lurks to aspire
And girdle with embracing flames the waist
Of Collatine's fair love, Lucrece the chaste.

Haply that name of 'chaste' unhappily set
This bateless edge on his keen appetite;
When Collatine unwisely did not let
To praise the clear unmatched red and white
Which triumph'd in that sky of his delight,
Where mortal stars, as bright as heaven's beauties,
With pure aspects did him peculiar duties.

For he the night before, in Tarquin's tent,
Unlock'd the treasure of his happy state;
What priceless wealth the heavens had lent
In the possession of his beauteous mate;

Reckoning his fortune at such high-proud rate, [more fame,
That kings might be espoused to
But king nor peer to such a peerless dame.

O happiness enjoy'd but of a few!
And, if possess'd, as soon decay'd and done
As is the morning's silver-melting dew
Against the golden splendour of the sun! [begun:

Beauty itself doth of itself persuade
The eyes of men without an orator;
What needeth then apologies be made,
To set forth that which is so singular?
Or why is Collatine the publisher
Of that rich jewel he should keep unknown [own?
From thievish ears, because it is his

Perchance his boast of Lucrece' sovereignty
Suggested this proud issue of a king;
For by our ears our hearts oft tainted be:
Perchance that envy of so rich a thing,
Braving compare, disdainfully did sting
His high-pitch'd thoughts, that meaner men should vaunt
That golden hap which their superiors want.

But some untimely thought did instigate [those:
His all-too-timeless speed, if none of
His honour, his affairs, his friends, his state, [goes Neglected all, with swift intent he

Which of them both should underprop
When virtue bragg'd, beauty would blush for shame: [spite
When beauty boasted blushes, in de-
Virtue would stain that o'er with silver white.

But beauty, in that white intituled,
From Venus' doves doth challenge that fair field: [beauty's red,
Then virtue claims from beauty
Which virtue gave the golden age to gild [their shield;
Their silver cheeks, and call'd it then
Teaching them thus to use it in the fight, [fence the white.
When shame assail'd, the red should Argued by beauty's red and virtue's white:

Of either's colour was the other queen,
Proving from world's minority their right: [to fight;
Yet their ambition makes them still
The sovereignty of either being so great, [other's seat.
That oft they interchange each

Their silent war of lilies and of roses,
Which Tarquin view'd in her fair face's field, [encloses;
In their pure ranks his traitor eye
Where, lest between them both it should be kill'd, [yield
The coward captive vanquished doth
To those two armies that would let him go,
Rather than triumph in so false a foe.

Now thinks he that her husband's shallow tongue,— [so,—
The niggard prodigal that praised her
In that high task hath done her beauty wrong, [show:
Which far exceeds his barren skill to
Therefore that praise which Collatine doth owe [surmise,
Enchanted Tarquin answers with
In silent wonder of still-gazing eyes.

This earthly saint, adored by this devil,
Little suspecteth the false worshipper;
For unstain'd thoughts do seldom dream on evil; [fear:
Birds never limed no secret bushes
So guiltless she securely gives good cheer [guest,
And reverend welcome to her princely
Whose inward ill no outward harm express'd:

For that he colour'd with his high estate,

Hiding base sin in plaits of majesty ;
That nothing in him seem'd inordinate,
Save sometime too much wonder of his eye,
Which, having all, all could not satisfy ;
But, poorly rich, so wanteth in his store, [still for more.
That, cloy'd with much, he pineth

But she, that never coped with stranger eyes, [parling looks,
Could pick no meaning from their
Nor read the subtle-shining secrecies
Writ in the glassy margents of such books : [fear'd no hooks :
She touch'd no unknown baits, nor
Nor could she moralize his wanton sight, [the light.
More than his eyes were open'd to

He stories to her ears her husband's fame,
Won in the fields of fruitful Italy ;
And decks with praises Collatine's high name,
Made glorious by his manly chivalry
With bruised arms and wreaths of victory : [doth express,
Her joy with heaved-up hand she
And, wordless, so greets heaven for his success.

Far from the purpose of his coming hither,
He makes excuses for his being there :
No cloudy show of stormy blustering weather [pear ;
Doth yet in his fair welkin once ap-
Till sable Night, mother of Dread and Fear, [display,
Upon the world dim darkness doth
And in her vaulty prison stows the Day.

For then is Tarquin brought unto his bed,
Intending weariness with heavy spright;
For, after supper, long he questioned
With modest Lucrece, and wore out the night : [doth fight ;
Now leaden slumber with life's strength
And every one to rest themselves betake, [minds, that wake.
Save thieves, and cares, and troubled

As one of which doth Tarquin lie revolving [ing ;
The sundry dangers of his will's obtain-

Though weak-built hopes persuade him to abstaining : [ing ;
Despair to gain doth traffic oft for gain-
And when great treasure is the meed proposed, [death supposed.
Though death be adjunct, there 's no

That they prove bankrupt in this

The aim of all is but to nurse the life
With honour, wealth, and ease, in waning age ; [strife,
And in this aim there is such thwarting
That one for all, or all for one we gage ;
As life for honour in fell battle's rage ;
Honour for wealth ; and oft that wealth doth cost [lost.
The death of all, and all together

So that in venturing ill we leave to be
The things we are for that which we expect ;
And this ambitious foul infirmity,
In having much, torments us with defect [lect
Of that we have : so then we do neg-

Such hazard now must doting Tarquin make,
Pawning his honour to obtain his lust ;
And for himself himself he must forsake :
Then where is truth, if there be no self-trust ? [just,
When shall he think to find a stranger
When he himself himself confounds, betrays, [hateful days ?
To slanderous tongues and wretched

While lust and murder wake to stain [and kill.

And now this lustful lord leap'd from his bed,
Throwing his mantle rudely o'er his [arm;
Is madly toss'd between desire and dread; [eth harm;
Th' one sweetly flatters, th' other fear-
But honest fear, bewitch'd with lust's foul charm,
Doth too too oft betake him to retire,
Beaten away by brain-sick rude desire.

His falchion on a flint he softly smiteth,
That from the cold stone sparks of fire do fly; [lighteth,
Whereat a waxen torch forthwith he

And to the flame thus speaks advisedly,
'As from this cold flint I enforced this fire, [sire.'
So Lucrece must I force to my de-

Here pale with fear he doth premeditate
The dangers of his loathsome enterprise,
And in his inward mind he doth debate
What following sorrow may on this arise: [despise
Then looking scornfully, he doth

And justly thus controls his thoughts

'Fair torch, burn out thy light, and lend it not [thine:
To darken her whose light excelleth
And die, unhallow'd thoughts, before you blot [divine;

Offer pure incense to so pure a shrine:
Let fair humanity abhor the deed
That spots and stains love's modest snow-white weed.

O foul dishonour to my household's
O impious act, including all foul harms!
A martial man to be soft fancy's slave!

Then my digression is so vile, so
That it will live engraven in my face.

'Yea, though I die, the scandal will survive,
And be an eyesore in my golden coat;
Some loathsome dash the herald will contrive,
To cipher me how fondly I did dote;
That my posterity, shamed with the note, [no sin

As corn o'ergrown by weeds, so heedful fear
Is almost choked by unresisted lust.
Away he steals with open listening ear,
Full of foul hope and full of fond mistrust;
Both which, as servitors to the unjust,
So cross him with their opposite persuasion, [invasion.
That now he vows a league, and now,

Within his thought her heavenly image sits,
And in the selfsame seat sits Collatine:
That eye which looks on her confounds his wits; [divine,
That eye which him beholds, as more

By reprobate desire thus madly led,
The Roman lord marcheth to Lucrece' bed.

Now is he come unto the chamber-door
That shuts him from the heaven of his thought, [no more,
Which with a yielding latch, and with
Hath barr'd him from the blessed thing he sought.
So from himself impiety hath wrought,
That for his prey to pray he doth begin, [ance his sin.

This said, his guilty hand pluck'd up the latch, [wide.
And with his knee the door he opens
The dove sleeps fast that this night-owl will catch : [espied.
Thus treason works ere traitors be
Who sees the lurking serpent steps aside ; [such thing,
But she, sound sleeping, fearing no
Lies at the mercy of his mortal sting.

Into the chamber wickedly he stalks,
And gazeth on her yet unstained bed.
The curtains being close, about he walks,
Rolling his greedy eyeballs in his head :
By their high treason is his heart misled ; [hand full soon
Which gives the watchword to his

Look, as the fair and fiery-pointed sun,
Rushing from forth a cloud, bereaves our sight ; [begun
Even so, the curtain drawn, his eyes
To wink, being blinded with a greater light :
Whether it is that she reflects so bright,
That dazzleth them, or else some shame supposed ;
But blind they are, and keep themselves enclosed.

O, had they in that darksome prison died ! [till ;

Where, like a virtuous monument,
To be admired of lewd unhallow'd eyes.

Without the bed her other fair hand was, [white
On the green coverlet ; whose perfect

With pearly sweat, resembling dew of night. [their light,

As if between them twain there were
But that life lived in death, and death in life.

Her breasts, like ivory globes circled with blue,
A pair of maiden worlds unconquered,
Save of their lord no bearing yoke they knew,
And him by oath they truly honoured.
These worlds in Tarquin new ambition bred ;
Who, like a foul usurper, went about
From this fair throne to heave the owner out.

What could he see but mightily he noted ? [desired ?
What did he note but strongly he
What he beheld, on that he firmly doted,
And in his will his wilful eye he tired.
With more than admiration he admired
Her azure veins, her alabaster skin,
Her coral lips, her snow-white dimpled chin.

As the grim lion fawneth o'er his prey,
Sharp hunger by the conquest satisfied
So o'er this sleeping soul doth Tarquin stay,
His rage of lust by gazing qualified ;
Slack'd, not suppress'd ; for standing by her side, [strains,
His eye, which late this mutiny re-
Unto a greater uproar tempts his veins :

And they, like straggling slaves for pillage fighting,
Obdurate vassals fell exploits effecting,
In bloody death and ravishment delighting, [groans respecting,
Nor children's tears nor mothers'
Swell in their pride, the onset still expecting : [ing,
Anon his beating heart, alarum strik-
Gives the hot charge and bids them do their liking.

His drumming heart cheers up his burning eye, [hand ;
His eye commends the leading to his
His hand, as proud of such a dignity,
Smoking with pride, march'd on to make his stand [land ;
On her bare breast, the heart of all her
Whose ranks of blue veins, as his hand did scale, [and pale.
Left their round turrets destitute

Where their dear governess and lady lies,
Do tell her she is dreadfully beset,
And fright her with confusion of their cries : [lock'd-up eyes,
She, much amazed, breaks ope her
Who, peeping forth this tumult to behold, [and controll'd.
Are by his flaming torch dimm'd

Imagine her as one in dead of night
From forth dull sleep by dreadful fancy waking, [ghastly sprite,
That thinks she hath beheld some
Whose grim aspect sets every joint a-shaking ; [taking,
What terror 'tis ! but she, in worser

The sight which makes supposed ter-

Wrapp'd and confounded in a thousand fears, [lies ;
Like to a new-kill'd bird she trembling

She dares not look; yet, winking, there appears
Quick-shifting antics, ugly in her eyes:
Such shadows are the weak brain's forgeries; [their lights,
Who, angry that the eyes fly from
In darkness daunts them with more dreadful sights.

His hand, that yet remains upon her breast,— [wall!—
Rude ram, to batter such an ivory
May feel her heart—poor citizen!—distress'd, [fall,
Wounding itself to death, rise up and
Beating her bulk, that his hand shakes withal.
This moves in him more rage and lesser pity, [sweet city.
To make the breach and enter this

First, like a trumpet, doth his tongue begin
To sound a parley to his heartless foe;
Who o'er the white sheet peers her whiter chin,
The reason of this rash alarm to know,
Which he by dumb demeanour seeks to show; [urgeth still
But she with vehement prayers
Under what colour he commits this ill.

Thus he replies: 'The colour in thy face, [pale,
That even for anger makes the lily
And the red rose blush at her own disgrace, [tale:
Shall plead for me and tell my loving
Under that colour am I come to scale
Thy never-conquer'd fort: the fault is thine, [mine.
For those thine eyes betray thee unto

'Thus I forestall thee, if thou mean to chide: [night,
Thy beauty hath ensnared thee to this
Where thou with patience must my will abide; [delight,
My will that marks thee for my earth's
Which I to conquer sought with all my might; [dead,
But as reproof and reason beat it
By thy bright beauty was it newly bred.

'I see what crosses my attempt will bring; [defends;
I know what thorns the growing rose
I think the honey guarded with a sting;
All this beforehand counsel comprehends: [friends;
But will is deaf and hears no heedful
Only he hath an eye to gaze on beauty, [law or duty.
And dotes on what he looks, 'gainst

'I have debated, even in my soul,
What wrong, what shame, what sorrow I shall breed; [trol,
But nothing can affection's course con-
Or stop the headlong fury of his speed.
I know repentant tears ensue the deed,
Reproach, disdain, and deadly enmity;
Yet strive I to embrace mine infamy.'

This said, he shakes aloft his Roman blade, [skies,
Which, like a falcon towering in the
Coucheth the fowl below with his wings' shade, [mount he dies:
Whose crooked beak threats if he
So under his insulting falchion lies
Harmless Lucretia, marking what he tells [falcon's bells.
With trembling fear, as fowl hear

'Lucrece,' quoth he, 'this night I must enjoy thee: [way.
If thou deny, then force must work my
For in thy bed I purpose to destroy thee: [thine I'll slay,
That done, some worthless slave of
To kill thine honour with thy life's decay; [to place him,
And in thy dead arms do I mean
Swearing I slew him, seeing thee embrace him.

'So thy surviving husband shall remain
The scornful mark of every open eye;
Thy kinsmen hang their heads at this disdain, [tardy:
Thy issue blurr'd with nameless bas-
And thou, the author of their obloquy,
Shalt have thy trespass cited up in rhymes, [times.
And sung by children in succeeding

'But if thou yield, I rest thy secret friend: [unacted;
The fault unknown is as a thought
A little harm done to a great good end
For lawful policy remains enacted.
The poisonous simple sometimes is compacted [applied,
In a pure compound; being so
His venom in effect is purified.

'Then, for thy husband and thy children's sake, [their lot
Tender my suit: bequeath not to
The shame that from them no device can take,
The blemish that will never be forgot;
Worse than a slavish wipe or birth-hour's blot:
For marks descried in men's nativity
Are nature's faults, not their own infamy.'

Here with a cockatrice' dead-killing eye
He rouseth up himself and makes a pause;
While she, the picture of pure piety,
Like a white hind under the grype's sharp claws, [laws,

Tears harden lust, though marble wear with raining.

Her pity-pleading eyes are sadly fix'd
In the remorseless wrinkles of his face;
Her modest eloquence with sighs is mix'd,
Which to her oratory adds more grace.
She puts the period often from his place;
And midst the sentence so her accent breaks, [she speaks.
That twice she doth begin ere once

She conjures him by high almighty Jove, [friendship's oath,
By knighthood, gentry, and sweet
By her untimely tears, her husband's love,
By holy human law, and common troth,
By heaven and earth, and all the power of both, [retire,
That to his borrow'd bed he make
And stoop to honour, not to foul desire.

Quoth she, 'Reward not hospitality
With such black payment as thou hast pretended; [to thee;
Mud not the fountain that gave drink
Mar not the thing that cannot be amended; [ended;

Thou look'st not like deceit; do not

Thou art not what thou seem'st; and
Thou seem'st not what thou art, a god, a king; [every thing.
For kings like gods should govern

'How will thy shame be seeded in thine age,

When thus thy vices bud before thy spring!
If in thy hope thou darest do such outrage, [art a king?
What darest thou not when once thou

The cedar stoops not to the base
But low shrubs wither at the cedar's root.

'So let thy thoughts, low vassals to thy state'— [will not hear thee:
'No more,' quoth he; 'by heaven, I
Yield to my love; if not, enforced hate, [tear thee;
Instead of love's coy touch, shall rudely
That done, despitefully I mean to bear thee [groom,
Unto the base bed of some rascal
To be thy partner in this shameful doom.'

This said, he sets his foot upon the light,
For light and lust are deadly enemies:

Shame folded up in blind concealing night, [tyrannize.
When most unseen, then most doth
The wolf hath seized his prey, the poor lamb cries; [voice controll'd
Till with her own white fleece her
Entombs her outcry in her lips' sweet fold:

For with the nightly linen that she wears [head;
He pens her piteous clamours in her
Cooling his hot face in the chastest tears [shed.
That ever modest eyes with sorrow
O, that prone lust should stain so pure a bed! [purify,
The spots whereof could weeping
Her tears should drop on them perpetually.

But she hath lost a dearer thing than life, [again:
And he hath won what he would lose
This forced league doth force a further strife; [pain;
This momentary joy breeds months of
This hot desire converts to cold disdain:
Pure Chastity is rifled of her store,
And Lust, the thief, far poorer than before.

Look, as the full-fed hound or gorged hawk, [flight,
Unapt for tender smell or speedy
Make slow pursuit, or altogether balk
The prey wherein by nature they delight; [night:
So surfeit-taking Tarquin fares this
His taste delicious, in digestion souring, [devouring.
Devours his will, that lived by foul

O, deeper sin than bottomless conceit
Can comprehend in still imagination!
Drunken Desire must vomit his receipt,
Ere he can see his own abomination.
While Lust is in his pride, no exclamation [desire,
Can curb his heat or rein his rash
Till like a jade Self-will himself doth tire.

And then with lank and lean discolour'd cheek,
With heavy eye, knit brow, and strengthless pace, [meek,
Feeble Desire, all recreant, poor, and
Like to a bankrupt beggar wails his case: [fight with Grace,
The flesh being proud, Desire doth
For there it revels; and when that decays,
The guilty rebel for remission prays.

So fares it with this faultful lord of Rome, [chased;

'Let my good name, that senseless reputation,
For Collatine's dear love be kept unspotted:
If that be made a theme for disputation,
The branches of another root are rotted,
And undeserved reproach to him allotted
That is as clear from this attaint of mine
As I, ere this, was pure to Collatine.

'O unseen shame! invisible disgrace!
O unfelt sore! crest-wounding, private scar!
Reproach is stamp'd in Collatinus' face,
And Tarquin's eye may read the mot afar,
How he in peace is wounded, not in war.
Alas, how many bear such shameful blows,
Which not themselves, but he that gives them knows!

'If, Collatine, thine honour lay in me,
From me by strong assault it is bereft.
My honey lost, and I, a drone-like bee,
Have no perfection of my summer left,
But robb'd and ransack'd by injurious theft:
In thy weak hive a wandering wasp hath crept,
And suck'd the honey which thy chaste bee kept.

'Yet am I guilty of thy honour's wrack;
Yet for thy honour did I entertain him;
Coming from thee, I could not put him back,
For it had been dishonour to disdain him:
Besides, of weariness he did complain him,
And talk'd of virtue: O unlook'd-for evil,
When virtue is profaned in such a devil!

'Why should the worm intrude the maiden bud?
Or hateful cuckoos hatch in sparrows' nests?
Or toads infect fair founts with venom mud?
Or tyrant folly lurk in gentle breasts?
Or kings be breakers of their own behests?
But no perfection is so absolute,
That some impurity doth not pollute.

'The aged man that coffers-up his gold
Is plagued with cramps and gouts and painful fits;
And scarce hath eyes his treasure to behold,
But like still-pining Tantalus he sits,
And useless barns the harvest of his wits;
Having no other pleasure of his gain
But torment that it cannot cure his pain.

'So then he hath it when he cannot use it,
And leaves it to be master'd by his young;
Who in their pride do presently abuse it:
Their father was too weak, and they too strong,
To hold their cursed-blessed fortune long.
The sweets we wish for turn to loathed sours
Even in the moment that we call them ours.

'Unruly blasts wait on the tender spring;
Unwholesome weeds take root with precious flowers;
The adder hisses where the sweet birds sing;
What virtue breeds iniquity devours:
We have no good that we can say is ours,
But ill-annexed Opportunity
Or kills his life or else his quality.

'O Opportunity, thy guilt is great!
'Tis thou that executest the traitor's treason:
Thou set'st the wolf where he the lamb may get;
Whoever plots the sin, thou 'point'st the season;
'Tis thou that spurn'st at right, at law, at reason;
And in thy shady cell, where none may spy him,
Sits Sin, to seize the souls that wander by him.

'Thou makest the vestal violate her oath;
Thou blow'st the fire when temperance is thaw'd;
Thou smother'st honesty, thou murder'st troth;
Thou foul abettor! thou notorious bawd!
Thou plantest scandal and displacest laud:
Thou ravisher, thou traitor, thou false thief,
Thy honey turns to gall, thy joy to grief!

'Thy secret pleasure turns to open shame,
Thy private feasting to a public fast,
Thy smoothing titles to a ragged name,
Thy sugar'd tongue to bitter wormwood taste:

Thy violent vanities can never last.
How comes it then, vile Opportu-

Time's office is to fine the hate of foes;
To eat up errors by opinion bred,

pilgrimage, [amends?
Unless thou couldst return to make

Would purchase thee a thousand thou-

'Thou ceaseless lackey to eternity,
With some mischance cross Tarquin in his flight:
Devise extremes beyond extremity,
To make him curse this cursed crimeful night:
Let ghastly shadows his lewd eyes affright;
And the dire thought of his committed evil
Shape every bush a hideous shapeless devil.

'Disturb his hours of rest with restless trances,
Afflict him in his bed with bedrid groans;
Let there bechance him pitiful mischances,
To make him moan; but pity not his moans:
Stone him with harden'd hearts, harder than stones;
And let mild women to him lose their mildness,
Wilder to him than tigers in their wildness.

'Let him have time to tear his curled hair,
Let him have time against himself to rave,
Let him have time of Time's help to despair,
Let him have time to live a loathed slave,
Let him have time a beggar's orts to crave,
And time to see one that by alms doth live
Disdain to him disdained scraps to give.

'Let him have time to see his friends his foes,
And merry fools to mock at him resort;
Let him have time to mark how slow time goes
In time of sorrow, and how swift and short
His time of folly and his time of sport;
And ever let his unrecalling crime
Have time to wail the abusing of his time.

'O Time, thou tutor both to good and bad,
Teach me to curse him that thou taught'st this ill!
At his own shadow let the thief run mad,
Himself himself seek every hour to kill!
Such wretched hands such wretched blood should spill;
For who so base would such an office have
As slanderous deathsman to so base a slave?

'The baser is he, coming from a king,
To shame his hope with deeds degenerate:
The mightier man, the mightier is the thing
That makes him honour'd, or begets him hate;
For greatest scandal waits on greatest state.
The moon being clouded presently is miss'd,
But little stars may hide them when they list.

'The crow may bathe his coal-black wings in mire,
And unperceived fly with the filth away;
But if the like the snow-white swan desire,
The stain upon his silver down will stay.
Poor grooms are sightless night, kings glorious day:
Gnats are unnoted wheresoe'er they fly,
But eagles gazed upon with every eye.

'Out, idle words, servants to shallow fools!
Unprofitable sounds, weak arbitrators!
Busy yourselves in skill-contending schools;
Debate where leisure serves with dull debaters;
To trembling clients be you mediators:
For me, I force not argument a straw,
Since that my case is past the help of law.

'In vain I rail at Opportunity,
At Time, at Tarquin, and uncheerful Night;
In vain I cavil with mine infamy,
In vain I spurn at my confirm'd despite:
This helpless smoke of words doth me no right.
The remedy indeed to do me good
Is to let forth my foul-defiled blood.

'Poor hand, why quiver'st thou at this decree?
Honour thyself to rid me of this shame;
For if I die, my honour lives in thee;
But if I live, thou livest in my defame:
Since thou couldst not defend thy loyal dame,
And wast afeard to scratch her wicked foe,
Kill both thyself and her for yielding so.'

This said, from her be-tumbled couch she starteth,
To find some desperate instrument of death:

But this no slaughterhouse no tool imparteth [breath;
To make more vent for passage of her
Which, thronging through her lips, so vanisheth [consumes,
As smoke from Ætna, that in air
Or that which from discharged cannon fumes.

'In vain,' quoth she, 'I live, and seek in vain [life.

But when I fear'd I was a loyal wife:

'O, that is gone for which I sought to live, [die.
And therefore now I need not fear to
To clear this spot by death, at least I give
A badge of fame to slander's livery;
A dying life to living infamy:

Nor fold my fault in cleanly-coin'd excuses;
My sable ground of sin I will not paint,
To hide the truth of this false night's abuses:

My tongue shall utter all; mine eyes, like sluices,
As from a mountain-spring that feeds a dale, [impure tale.'
Shall gush pure streams to purge my

By this, lamenting Philomel had ended
The well-tuned warble of her nightly sorrow, [descended
And solemn night with slow sad gait
To ugly hell; when, lo, the blushing morrow [will borrow:
Lends light to all fair eyes that light
But cloudy Lucrece shames herself to see, [cloister'd be.
And therefore still in night would

Revealing day through every cranny spies, [sits weeping;
And seems to point her out where she
To whom she sobbing speaks: 'O eye of eyes, [leave thy peeping:
Why pry'st thou through my window?
Mock with thy tickling beams eyes that are sleeping: [piercing light,
Brand not my forehead with thy
For day hath nought to do what's done by night.'

Thus cavils she with every thing she sees:
True grief is fond and testy as a child,
Who wayward once, his mood with nought agrees: [them mild;
Old woes, not infant sorrows, bear
Continuance tames the one; the other wild, [ing still,
Like an unpractised swimmer plung-
With too much labour drowns for want of skill.

So she, deep-drenched in a sea of care,
Holds disputation with each thing she views, [pare;
And to herself all sorrow doth com-
No object but her passion's strength renews; [sues;
And as one shifts, another straight en-
Sometime her grief is dumb and hath no words; [affords.
Sometime 'tis mad and too much talk

The little birds that tune their morning's joy [melody:
Make her moans mad with their sweet
For mirth doth search the bottom of annoy;
Sad souls are slain in merry company;
Grief best is pleased with grief's society:

True sorrow then is feelingly sufficed
When with like semblance it is sympathized.

'Tis double death to drown in ken of shore;
He ten times pines that pines beholding food;
To see the salve doth make the wound ache more;
Great grief grieves most at that would do it good;
Deep woes roll forward like a gentle flood,
Who, being stopp'd, the bounding banks o'erflows;
Grief dallied with nor law nor limit knows.

'You mocking birds,' quoth she, 'your tunes entomb
Within your hollow-swelling feather'd breasts,
And in my hearing be you mute and dumb:
My restless discord loves no stops nor rests;
A woeful hostess brooks not merry guests:
Relish your nimble notes to pleasing ears;
Distress likes dumps when time is kept with tears.

'Come, Philomel, that sing'st of ravishment,
Make thy sad grove in my dishevell'd hair:
As the dank earth weeps at thy languishment,
So I at each sad strain will strain a tear,
And with deep groans the diapason bear;
For burden-wise I'll hum on Tarquin still,
While thou on Tereus descant'st better skill.

'And whiles against a thorn thou bear'st thy part,
To keep thy sharp woes waking, wretched I,
To imitate thee well, against my heart
Will fix a sharp knife to affright mine eye;
Who, if it wink, shall thereon fall and die.
These means, as frets upon an instrument,
Shall tune our heart-strings to true languishment.

'And for, poor bird, thou sing'st not in the day,
As shaming any eye should thee behold,
Some dark deep desert, seated from the way,
That knows not parching heat nor freezing cold,
Will we find out; and there we will unfold
To creatures stern sad tunes, to change their kinds:
Since men prove beasts, let beasts bear gentle minds.'

As the poor frighted deer, that stands at gaze,
Wildly determining which way to fly,
Or one encompass'd with a winding maze,
That cannot tread the way out readily;
So with herself is she in mutiny,
To live or die which of the twain were better,
When life is shamed, and death reproach's debtor.

'To kill myself,' quoth she, 'alack, what were it,
But with my body my poor soul's pollution?
They that lose half with greater patience bear it
Than they whose whole is swallow'd in confusion,
That mother tries a merciless conclusion.
Who, having two sweet babes, when death takes one,
Will slay the other and be nurse to none.

'My body or my soul, which was the dearer,
When the one pure, the other made divine?
Whose love of either to myself was nearer,
When both were kept for heaven and Collatine?
Ay me! the bark peel'd from the lofty pine,
His leaves will wither and his sap decay;
So must my soul, her bark being peel'd away.

'Her house is sack'd, her quiet interrupted,
Her mansion batter'd by the enemy;
Her sacred temple spotted, spoil'd, corrupted,
Grossly engirt with daring infamy:
Then let it not be call'd impiety,
If in this blemish'd fort I make some hole
Through which I may convey this troubled soul.

'Yet die I will not till my Collatine
Have heard the cause of my untimely death;
That he may vow, in that sad hour of mine,
Revenge on him that made me stop my breath.
My stained blood to Tarquin I'll bequeath,

Which by him tainted shall for him be spent,
And as his due writ in my testament.

'My honour I'll bequeath unto the knife
That wounds my body so dishonoured.
'Tis honour to deprive dishonour'd life;
The one will live, the other being dead:
So of shame's ashes shall my fame be bred; [scorn:
For in my death I murder shameful
My shame so dead, mine honour is new-born.

'Dear lord of that dear jewel I have lost,
What legacy shall I bequeath to thee?
My resolution, love, shall be thy boast,
By whose example thou revenged mayst be. [me:
How Tarquin must be used, read it in Myself, thy friend, will kill myself, thy foe, [Tarquin so.
And for my sake serve thou false

'This brief abridgement of my will I make: [ground;
My soul and body to the skies and
My resolution, husband, do thou take;
Mine honour be the knife's that makes my wound; [confound;
My shame be his that did my fame
And all my fame that lives disbursed be [shame of me.
To those that live, and think no

'Thou, Collatine, shalt oversee this will; [see it!
How was I overseen that thou shalt
My blood shall wash the slander of mine ill; [shall free it.
My life's foul deed, my life's fair end
Faint not, faint heart, but stoutly say "So be it:"
Yield to my hand; my hand shall conquer thee: [victors be.'
Thou dead, both die, and both shall

This plot of death when sadly she had laid, [bright eyes,
And wiped the brinish pearl from her
With untuned tongue she hoarsely calls her maid, [hies;
Whose swift obedience to her mistress
For fleet-wing'd duty with thought's feathers flies. [seem so
Poor Lucrece' cheeks unto her maid
As winter meads when sun doth melt their snow.

Her mistress she doth give demure good-morrow, [of modesty,
With soft-slow tongue, true mark
And sorts a sad look to her lady's sorrow,
For why her face wore sorrow's livery;
But durst not ask of her audaciously
Why her two suns were cloud-eclipsed so, [with woe.
Nor why her fair cheeks over-wash'd

But as the earth doth weep, the sun being set, [eye;
Each flower moisten'd like a melting
Even so the maid with swelling drops gan wet
Her circled eyne, enforced by sympathy
Of those fair suns set in her mistress' sky, [their light,
Who in a salt-waved ocean quench
Which makes the maid weep like the dewy night.

A pretty while these pretty creatures stand, [ing:
Like ivory conduits coral cisterns fill:
One justly weeps; the other takes in hand [spilling:
No cause, but company, of her drops
Their gentle sex to weep are often willing; [others' smarts,
Grieving themselves to guess at
And then they drown their eyes or break their hearts.

For men have marble, women waxen, minds, [ble will;
And therefore are they form'd as mar-
The weak oppress'd, the impression of strange kinds [or skill:
Is form'd in them by force, or fraud,
Then call them not the authors of their ill,
No more than wax shall be accounted evil [a devil.
Wherein is stamp'd the semblance of

Their smoothness, like a goodly champaign plain, [creep;
Lays open all the little worms that
In men, as in a rough-grown grove, remain
Cave-keeping evils that obscurely sleep:
Through crystal walls each little mote will peep: [bold stern looks,
Though men can cover crimes with Poor women's faces are their own faults' books.

No man inveigh against the wither'd flower,
But chide rough winter that the flower hath kill'd :
Not that devour'd, but that which doth devour,
Is worthy blame. O, let it not be hild
Poor women's faults, that they are so fulfill'd
With men's abuses : those proud lords, to blame,
Make weak-made women tenants to their shame.

The precedent whereof in Lucrece view,
Assail'd by night with circumstances strong
Of present death, and shame that might ensue
By that her death, to do her husband wrong :
Such danger to resistance did belong.
That dying fear through all her body spread ;
And who cannot abuse a body dead ?

By this, mild patience bid fair Lucrece speak
To the poor counterfeit of her complaining :
'My girl,' quoth she, 'on what occasion break
Those tears from thee, that down thy cheeks are raining ?
If thou dost weep for grief of my sustaining,
Know, gentle wench, it small avails my mood :
If tears could help, mine own would do me good.

'But tell me, girl, when went'—and there she stay'd
Till after a deep groan—'Tarquin from hence ?'
'Madam, ere I was up,' replied the maid,
'The more to blame my sluggard negligence :
Yet with the fault I thus far can dispense ;
Myself was stirring ere the break of day,
And, ere I rose, was Tarquin gone away.

'But, lady, if your maid may be so bold,
She would request to know your heaviness.'
'O, peace !' quoth Lucrece : 'if it should be told,
The repetition cannot make it less ;
For more it is than I can well express :
And that deep torture may be call'd a hell
When more is felt than one hath power to tell.

'Go, get me hither paper, ink, and pen :
Yet save that labour, for I have them here.
What should I say ? One of my husband's men
Bid thou be ready, by and by, to bear
A letter to my lord, my love, my dear :
Bid him with speed prepare to carry it ;
The cause craves haste, and it will soon be writ.'

Her maid is gone, and she prepares to write,
First hovering o'er the paper with her quill :
Conceit and grief an eager combat fight ;
What wit sets down is blotted straight with will ;
This is too curious-good, this blunt and ill :
Much like a press of people at a door,
Throng her inventions, which shall go before.

At last she thus begins : 'Thou worthy lord
Of that unworthy wife that greeteth thee,
Health to thy person ! next vouchsafe t' afford—
If ever, love, thy Lucrece thou wilt see—
Some present speed to come and visit me.
So, I commend me from our house in grief :
My woes are tedious, though my words are brief.'

Here folds she up the tenour of her woe,
Her certain sorrow writ uncertainly.
By this short schedule Collatine may know
Her grief, but not her grief's true quality :
She dares not thereof make discovery,
Lest he should hold it her own gross abuse,
Ere she with blood had stain'd her stain'd excuse.

Besides, the life and feeling of her passion
She hoards, to spend when he is by to hear her ;
When sighs and groans and tears may grace the fashion
Of her disgrace, the better so to clear her
From that suspicion which the world might bear her.
To shun this blot, she would not blot the letter
With words, till action might become them better.

To see sad sights moves more than hear them told ;
For then the eye interprets to the ear
The heavy motion that it doth behold.

When every part a part of woe doth bear. [hear;
'Tis but a part of sorrow that we
Deep sounds make lesser noise than shallow fords, [wind of words.

Her letter now is seal'd, and on it writ
'At Ardea to my lord with more than haste.'
The post attends, and she delivers it,

Imagine every eye beholds their blame; [see her shame:
For Lucrece thought he blush'd to

When, silly groom! God wot, it was defect
Of spirit, life, and bold audacity.
Such harmless creatures have a true respect
To talk in deeds, while others saucily
Promise more speed, but do it leisurely:
Even so this pattern of the worn-out age [words to gage.
Pawn'd honest looks, but laid no

His kindled duty kindled her mistrust,
That two red fires in both their faces blazed; [Tarquin's lust,
She thought he blush'd, as knowing
And, blushing with him, wistly on him gazed; [amazed:
Her earnest eye did make him more
The more she saw the blood his cheeks replenish, [some blemish.
The more she thought he spied in her

But long she thinks till he return again,
And yet the duteous vassal scarce is gone.
The weary time she cannot entertain,
For now 'tis stale to sigh, to weep, and groan: [moan,
So woe hath wearied woe, moan tired

That she her plaints a little while doth stay, [newer way.
Pausing for means to mourn some

At last she calls to mind where hangs a piece [Troy;
Of skilful painting, made for Priam's
Before the which is drawn the power of Greece,
For Helen's rape the city to destroy,
Threatening cloud-kissing Ilion with annoy; [so proud,
Which the conceited painter drew
As heaven, it seem'd, to kiss the turrets bow'd.

A thousand lamentable objects there,
In scorn of nature, art gave lifeless life:
Many a dry drop seem'd a weeping tear,
Shed for the slaughter'd husband by the wife: [painter's strife;
The red blood reek'd, to show the
And dying eyes gleam'd forth their ashy lights, [nights.
Like dying coals burnt out in te l ous

There might you see the labouring pioneer [with dust;
Begrimed with sweat, and smeared all
And from the towers of Troy there would appear [holes thrust,
The very eyes of men through loop-
Gazing upon the Greeks with little lust:
Such sweet observance in this work was had, [eyes look sad.
That one might see those far-off

In great commanders grace and majesty [their faces,;
You might behold, triumphing in
In youth, quick bearing and dexterity;
And here and there the painter interlaces [ling paces;
Pale cowards, marching on with tremb-
Which heartless peasants did so well resemble, [quake and tremble.
That one would swear he saw them

In Ajax and Ulysses, O, what art
Of physiognomy might one behold!
The face of either cipher'd either's heart; [pressly told:
Their face their manners most ex-
In Ajax' eyes blunt rage and rigour roll'd; [lent
But the mild glance that sly Ulysses
Show'd deep regard and smiling government.

There pleading might you see grave Nestor stand, [fight;
As 'twere encouraging the Greeks to Making such sober action with his hand, [the sight:
That it beguiled attention, charm'd
In speech, it seem'd, his beard, all silver white, [lips did fly
Wagg'd up and down, and from his
Thin winding breath, which purl'd up to the sky.

About him were a press of gaping faces,
Which seem'd to swallow up his sound advice; [graces,
All jointly listening, but with several
As if some mermaid did their ears entice, [so nice;
Some high, some low, the painter was
The scalps of many, almost hid behind, [the mind.
To jump up higher seem'd, to mock

Here one man's hand lean'd on another's head, [bour's ear;
His nose being shadow'd by his neigh-
Here one being throng'd bears back, all boll'n and red; [swear;
Another smother'd seems to pelt and
And in their rage such signs of rage they bear, [words,
As, but for loss of Nestor's golden
It seem'd they would debate with angry swords.

For much imaginary work was there;
Conceit deceitful, so compact, so kind,
That for Achilles' image stood his spear, [hind,
Griped in an armed hand; himself, be-
Was left unseen, save to the eye of mind: [head,
A hand, a foot, a face, a leg, a
Stood for the whole to be imagined.

And from the walls of strong-besieged Troy [march'd to field,
When their brave hope, bold Hector,
Stood many Trojan mothers, sharing joy [pons wield;
To see their youthful sons bright wea-
And to their hope they such odd action yield, [to appear,
That through their light joy seemed
Like bright things stain'd, a kind of heavy fear.

And from the strand of Dardan, where they fought, [ran,
To Simois' reedy banks the red blood
Whose waves to imitate the battle sought [began
With swelling ridges; and their ranks
To break upon the galled shore, and than [ranks,
Retire again, till, meeting greater
They join and shoot their foam at Simois' banks.

To this well-painted piece is Lucrece come, [stell'd.
To find a face where all distress is
Many she sees where cares have carved some, [dwell'd,
But none where all distress and dolour
Till she despairing Hecuba beheld,
Staring on Priam's wounds with her old eyes, [proud foot lies.
Which bleeding under Pyrrhus'

In her the painter had anatomized
Time's ruin, beauty's wreck, and grim care's reign: [were disguised;
Her cheeks with chaps and wrinkles
Of what she was no semblance did remain: [every vein,
Her blue blood changed to black in Wanting the spring that those shrunk pipes had fed, [dead.
Show'd life imprison'd in a body

On this sad shadow Lucrece spends her eyes, [woes,
And shapes her sorrow to the beldam's
Who nothing wants to answer her but cries, [foes:
And bitter words to ban her cruel
The painter was no god to lend her those; [did her wrong,
And therefore Lucrece swears he
To give her so much grief and not a tongue.

'Poor instrument,' quoth she, 'without a sound, [tongue;
I'll tune thy woes with my lamenting
And drop sweet balm in Priam's painted wound, [him wrong;
And rail on Pyrrhus that hath done
And with my tears quench Troy that burns so long;
And with my knife scratch out the angry eyes [enemies.
Of all the Greeks that are thine

'Show me the strumpet that began this stir, [tear.
That with my nails her beauty I may
Thy heat of lust, fond Paris, did incur

This load of wrath that burning Troy doth bear [here ;
Thy eye kindled the fire that burneth
And here in Troy, for trespass of thine eye, [daughter die.
The sire, the son, the dame, and

'Why should the private pleasure of some one [moe ?
Become the public plague of many
Let sin, alone committed, light alone
Upon his head that hath transgressed so ; [woe :
Let guiltless souls be freed from guilty
For one's offence why should so many fall,
To plague a private sin in general ?

'Lo, here weeps Hecuba, here Priam dies, [swounds,
Here manly Hector faints, here Troilus
Here friend by friend in bloody channel lies, [wounds,
And friend to friend gives unadvised
And one man's lust these many lives confounds : [desire,
Had doting Priam check'd his son's
Troy had been bright with fame and not with fire.'

Here feelingly she weeps Troy's painted woes :
For sorrow, like a heavy-hanging bell,
Once set on ringing, with his own weight goes ; [ful knell :
Then little strength rings out the dole-
So Lucrece, set a-work, sad tales doth tell [sorrow ;
To pencill'd pensiveness and colour'd
She lends them words, and she their looks doth borrow.

She throws her eyes about the painting round, [lament.
And whom she finds forlorn she doth
At last she sees a wretched image bound, [herds lent :
That piteous looks to Phrygian shep-
His face, though full of cares, yet show'd content ; [swains he goes,
Onward to Troy with the blunt
So mild, that Patience seem'd to scorn his woes.

In him the painter labour'd with his skill [show
To hide deceit, and give the harmless
An humble gait, calm looks, eyes wailing still, [come woe ;
A brow unbent, that seem'd to welCheeks neither red nor pale, but mingled so [stance gave,
That blushing red no guilty in-
Nor ashy pale the fear that false hearts have.

But, like a constant and confirmed devil,
He entertain'd a show so seeming just,
And therein so ensconced his secret evil,
That jealousy itself could not mistrust
False-creeping craft and perjury should thrust [faced storms,
Into so bright a day such black-
Or blot with hell-born sin such saint-like forms.

The well-skill'd workman this mild image drew [story
For perjured Sinon, whose enchanting
The credulous old Priam after slew ;
Whose words like wildfire burnt the shining glory [sorry,
Of rich-built Ilion, that the skies were
And little stars shot from their fixed places, [view'd their faces.
When their glass fell wherein they

This picture she advisedly perused,
And chid the painter for his wondrous skill, [abused ;
Saying, some shape in Sinon's was
So fair a form lodged not a mind so ill :
And still on him she gazed ; and gazing still, [she spied,
Such signs of truth in his plain face
That she concludes the picture was belied.

'It cannot be,' quoth she, 'that so much guile'— [a look ;'
She would have said 'can lurk in such
But Tarquin's shape came in her mind the while, [' cannot ' took :
And from her tongue 'can lurk' from
'It cannot be' she in that sense forsook, [I find,
And turn'd it thus, 'It cannot be,
But such a face should bear a wicked mind :

'For even as subtle Sinon here is painted,
So sober-sad, so weary, and so mild,
As if with grief or travail he had fainted,
To me came Tarquin armed ; so beguiled
With outward honesty, but yet defiled

With inward vice: as Priam him did cherish, [perish.
So did I Tarquin; so my Troy did

'Look, look, how listening Priam wets his eyes, [sheds!
To see those borrow'd tears that Sinon
Priam, why art thou old and yet not wise? [bleeds:
For every tear he falls a Trojan
His eye drops fire, no water thence proceeds; [move thy pity,
Those round clear pearls of his, that
Are balls of quenchless fire to burn thy city.

'Such devils steal effects from lightless hell; [cold,
For Sinon in his fire doth quake with
And in that cold hot-burning fire doth dwell;
These contraries such unity do hold,
Only to flatter fools and make them bold: [doth flatter,
So Priam's trust false Sinon's tears
That he finds means to burn his Troy with water.'

Here, all enraged, such passion her assails, [breast.
That patience is quite beaten from her
She tears the senseless Sinon with her nails,
Comparing him to that unhappy guest
Whose deed hath made herself herself detest: [o'er;
At last she smilingly with this gives
'Fool, fool!' quoth she, 'his wounds will not be sore.'

Thus ebbs and flows the current of her sorrow, [complaining.
And time doth weary time with her
She looks for night, and then she longs for morrow, [remaining:
And both she thinks too long with her
Short time seems long in sorrow's sharp sustaining: [sleeps;
Though woe be heavy, yet it seldom
And they that watch see time how slow it creeps.

Which all this time hath overslipp'd her thought, [spent;
That she with painted images hath
Being from the feeling of her own grief brought
By deep surmise of others' detriment;
Losing her woes in shows of discontent.
It easeth some, though none it ever cured, [dured.
To think their dolour others have en-

Which when her sad-beholding husband saw,
Amazedly in her sad face he stares:
Her eyes, though sod in tears, look'd red and raw, [cares.
Her lively colour kill'd with deadly
He hath no power to ask her how she fares: [a trance,
Both stood, like old acquaintance in
Met far from home, wondering each other's chance.

At last he takes her by the bloodless hand, [event
And thus begins: 'What uncouth ill

Sweet love, what spite hath thy fair colour spent? [tent?
Why art thou thus attired in discon-

From that, alas, thy Lucrece is not

'For in the dreadful dead of dark midnight, [came
With shining falchion in my chamber
A creeping creature, with a flaming

And softly cried "Awake, thou Roman
And entertain my love; else lasting

On thee and thine this night I will
If thou my love's desire do contra-slaughter thee [fulfil

And swear I found you where you did
The loathsome act of lust, and so did

The lechers in their deed: this act
My fame and thy perpetual infamy."

'With this I did begin to start and cry;
And then against my heart he sets his sword,
Swearing, unless I took all patiently,
I should not live to speak another word;
So should my shame still rest upon record,
And never be forgot in mighty Rome
The adulterate death of Lucrece and her groom.

'Mine enemy was strong, my poor self weak, [fear:
And far the weaker with so strong a

this abuse,
Immaculate and spotless is my mind;
That was not forced; that never was

To accessary yieldings, but still pure

Lo, here, the hopeless merchant of this loss, [up with woe,
With head declined, and voice damm'd
With sad set eyes, and wretched arms across, [blow
From lips new-waxen pale begins to
The grief away that stops his answer
so: [vain;
But, wretched as he is, he strives in What he breathes out his breath drinks up again.

As through an arch the violent roaring tide [haste,
Outruns the eye that doth behold his
Yet in the eddy boundeth in his pride
Back to the strait that forced him on so fast; [past:
In rage sent out, recall'd in rage, being Even so his sighs, his sorrows, make a saw, [grief draw.
To push grief on, and back the same

Which speechless woe of his poor she attendeth,
And his untimely frenzy thus awaketh:
'Dear lord, thy sorrow to my sorrow
lendeth [slaketh.
Another power; no flood by raining
My woe too sensible thy passion mak-eth [suffice
More feeling-painful: let it then
To drown one woe, one pair of weeping eyes.

'And for my sake, when I might charm thee so, [attend me:
For she that was thy Lucrece, now
Be suddenly revenged on my foe,
Thine, mine, his own: suppose thou dost defend me
From what is past: the help that thou shalt lend me
Comes all too late, yet let the traitor die;
For sparing justice feeds iniquity.

'But ere I name him, you fair lords,' quoth she,
Speaking to those that came with Col-[latine,
'Shall plight your honourable faiths to me,
With swift pursuit to venge this wrong of mine;
For 'tis a meritorious fair design
To chaste injustice with revengeful arms:
Knights, by their oaths, should right [poor ladies' harms.'

At this request, with noble disposition
Each present lord began to promise aid,
As bound in knighthood to her imposition,
Longing to hear the hateful foe be-[wray'd.
But she, that yet her sad task hath not said,
The protestation stops. 'O, speak,' [quoth she,
'How may this forced stain be wiped from me?

'What is the quality of mine offence,
Being constrain'd with dreadful circum-[dispense,
May my pure mind with the foul act
My low-declined honour to advance?
May any terms acquit me from this
The poison'd fountain clears itself [chance?
And why not I from this compelled [again;
stain?'

With this, they all at once began to
Her body's stain her mind untainted [clears;
While with a joyless smile she turns
The face, that map which deep impres-[away
Of hard misfortune, carved in it with [sion bears
'No no' quoth she, 'no dame here-[tears.
By my excuse shall claim excuse's [after living, giving.'

Here with a sigh, as if her heart would
She throws forth Tarquin's name: ['He, he,' she says,
But more than 'he' her poor tongue [break,
Till after many accents and delays,
Untimely breathings, sick and short
She utters this, 'He, he, fair lords, ['tis he,
That guides this hand to give this wound to me.' [assays,

Even here she sheathed in her harmless
A harmful knife, that thence her soul [breast unsheathed:
That blow did bail it from the deep un-[breathed:
Of that polluted prison where it [rest
Her contrite sighs unto the clouds be-[wounds doth fly queathed
Her winged sprite, and through her
Life's lasting date from cancell'd [wounds destiny.

Stone-still, astonish'd with this deadly
Stood Collatine and all his lordly crew; [deed,
Till Lucrece' father, that beholds her
Himself on her self-slaughter'd body [bleed,
And from the purple fountain Brutus [threw;
drew
The murderous knife, and, as it left [the place,
Her blood, in poor revenge, held it
in chase;

And bubbling from her breast, it doth
In two slow rivers, that the crimson [divide
Circles her body in on every side,
Who, like a late-sack'd island, vastly [blood
Bare and unpeopled in this fearful [stood
Some of her blood still pure and red remain'd,
And some look'd black, and that false [Tarquin stain'd.

About the mourning and congealed face
Of that black blood a watery rigol goes,
Which seems to weep upon the tainted
And ever since, as pitying Lucrece' [place:
Corrupted blood some watery token [woes,
shows;
And blood untainted still doth red
Blushing at that which is so putre-[abide, fied.

'Daughter, dear daughter,' old Lucretius cries, [here deprived.
'That life was mine which thou hast
If in the child the father's image lies,
Where shall I live now Lucrece is un-[derived.
lived?
Thou wast not to this end from me
If children pre-decease progenitors,
We are their offspring, and they none of ours.

'Poor broken glass, I often did behold
In thy sweet semblance my old age new born; [old,
But now that fresh fair mirror, dim and

Shows me a bare-boned death by time outworn :
O, from thy cheeks my image thou hast torn,
And shiver'd all the beauty of my glass,
That I no more can see what once I was !

'O Time, cease thou thy course and last no longer,
If they surcease to be that should survive.
Shall rotten death make conquest of the stronger
And leave the faltering feeble souls alive ?
The old bees die, the young possess their hive :
Then live, sweet Lucrece, live again and see
Thy father die, and not thy father thee ! '

By this, starts Collatine as from a dream,
And bids Lucretius give his sorrow place ;
And then in key-cold Lucrece' bleeding stream
He falls, and bathes the pale fear in his face,
And counterfeits to die with her a space ;
Till manly shame bids him possess his breath
And live to be revenged on her death.

The deep vexation of his inward soul
Hath served a dumb arrest upon his tongue ;
Who, mad that sorrow should his use control,
Or keep him from heart-easing words so long,
Begins to talk ; but through his lips do throng
Weak words, so thick come in his poor heart's aid,
That no man could distinguish what he said.

Yet sometime 'Tarquin' was pronounced plain,
But through his teeth, as if the name he tore.
This windy tempest, till it blow up rain,
Held back his sorrow's tide, to make it more ;
At last it rains, and busy winds give o'er :
Then son and father weep with equal strife
Who should weep most, for daughter or for wife.

The one doth call her his, the other his,
Yet neither may possess the claim they lay.
The father says 'She 's mine.' 'O, mine she is,'
Replies her husband : 'do not take away
My sorrow's interest ; let no mourner say
He weeps for her, for she was only mine,
And only must be wail'd by Collatine.'

'O,' quoth Lucretius, 'I did give that life
Which she too early and too late hath spill'd.
'Woe, woe,' quoth Collatine, 'she was my wife,
I owed her, and 'tis mine that she hath kill'd.'
'My daughter' and 'my wife' with clamours fill'd
The dispersed air, who, holding Lucrece' life,
Answer'd their cries, 'my daughter' and 'my wife.'

Brutus, who pluck'd the knife from Lucrece' side,
Seeing such emulation in their woe,
Began to clothe his wit in state and pride,
Burying in Lucrece' wound his folly's show.
He with the Romans was esteemed so
As silly-jeering idiots are with kings,
For sportive words and uttering foolish things :

But now he throws that shallow habit by,
Wherein deep policy did him disguise ;
And arm'd his long-hid wits advisedly,
To check the tears in Collatinus' eyes.
'Thou wronged lord of Rome,' quoth he, 'arise :
Let my unsounded self, supposed a fool,
Now set thy long-experienced wit to school.

'Why, Collatine, is woe the cure for woe ?
Do wounds help wounds, or grief help grievous deeds ?
Is it revenge to give thyself a blow
For his foul act by whom thy fair wife bleeds ?
Such childish humour from weak minds proceeds :
Thy wretched wife mistook the matter so,
To slay herself, that should have slain her foe.

'Courageous Roman, do not steep thy heart
In such relenting dew of lamentations ;
But kneel with me and help to bear thy part,
To rouse our Roman gods with invocations,
That they will suffer these abominations,
Since Rome herself in them doth stand disgraced,

By our strong arms from forth her fair streets chased.

'Now, by the Capitol that we adore,
And by this chaste blood so unjustly
stain'd, [earth's store,
By heaven's fair sun that breeds the fat
By all our country rights in Rome maintain'd, [complain'd
And by chaste Lucrece' soul that late
Her wrongs to us, and by this bloody knife, [true wife.'
We will revenge the death of this

This said, he struck his hand upon his breast, [vow;
And kiss'd the fatal knife, to end his
And to his protestation urged the rest,
Who, wondering at him, did his words
allow: [they bow;
Then jointly to the ground their knees
And that deep vow, which Brutus made before, [swore.
He doth again repeat, and that they

When they had sworn to this advised doom, [crece thence;
They did conclude to bear dead Lu-
To show her bleeding body thorough
Rome, [offence:
And so to publish Tarquin's foul
Which being done with speedy diligence, [sent
The Romans plausibly did give con-
To Tarquin's everlasting banishment.

A LOVER'S COMPLAINT

FROM off a hill whose concave womb re-worded
A plaintful story from a sistering vale,
My spirits to attend this double voice accorded, [tale;
And down I laid to list the sad-tuned
Ere long espied a fickle maid full pale,
Tearing of papers, breaking rings a-twain, [and rain.
Storming her world with sorrow's wind

Upon her head a platted hive of straw,
Which fortified her visage from the sun,
Whereon the thought might think sometime it saw [done:
The carcass of a beauty spent and
Time had not scythed all that youth begun, [ven's fell rage,
Nor youth all quit; but, spite of hea-
Some beauty peep'd through lattice of sear'd age.

Oft did she heave her napkin to her eyne,
Which on it had conceited characters,
Laundering the silken figures in the brine [tears,
That season'd woe had pelleted in
And often reading what contents it bears;
As often shrieking undistinguish'd woe
In clamours of all size, both high and low.

Sometimes her levell'd eyes their carriage ride, [intend;
As they did battery to the spheres
Sometime diverted their poor balls are tied [do extend
To the orbed earth; sometimes they
Their view right on; anon their gazes lend [fix'd,
To every place at once, and, nowhere
The mind and sight distractedly commix'd.

Her hair, nor loose nor tied in formal plat, [pride;
Proclaim'd in her a careless hand of
For some, untuck'd, descended her sheaved hat, [beside;
Hanging her pale and pined cheek

Some in her threaden fillet still did bide,
And true to bondage would not break from thence, [gence.
Though slackly braided in loose negli-
A thousand favours from a maund she drew
Of amber, crystal, and of beaded jet,
Which one by one she in a river threw,
Upon whose weeping margent she was set;
Like usury, applying wet to wet,
Or monarch's hands that let not bounty fall [excess begs all.
Where want cries some, but where
Of folded schedules had she many a one, [gave the flood;
Which she perused, sigh'd, tore, and
Crack'd many a ring of posied gold and bone, [mud;
Bidding them find their sepulchres in
Found yet moe letters sadly penn'd in blood,
With sleided silk feat and affectedly
Enswathed, and seal'd to curious secrecy.

These often bathed she in her fluxive eyes, [tear;
And often kiss'd, and often 'gan to
Cried 'O false blood, thou register of lies, [bear!
What unapproved witness dost thou
Ink would have seem'd more black and damned here!' [rents,
This said, in top of rage the lines she
Big discontent so breaking their contents.

A reverend man that grazed his cattle nigh— [knew
Sometime a blusterer, that the ruffle
Of court, of city, and had let go by
The swiftest hours, observed as they flew— [drew,
Towards this afflicted fancy fastly
And, privileged by age, desires to know
In brief the grounds and motives of her woe.

So slides he down upon his grained bat,

And comely-distant sits he by her side;
When he again desires her, being sat,
Her grievance with his hearing to divide:
If that from him there may be aught applied
Which may her suffering ecstasy assuage,
'Tis promised in the charity of age.

'Father,' she says, 'though in me you behold
The injury of many a blasting hour,
Let it not tell your judgment I am old;
Not age, but sorrow, over me hath power:
I might as yet have been a spreading flower,
Fresh to myself, if I had self-applied
Love to myself and to no love beside.

'But, woe is me! too early I attended
A youthful suit—it was to gain my grace—
Of one by nature's outwards so commended,
That maidens' eyes stuck over all his face:
Love lack'd a dwelling, and made him her place;
And when in his fair parts she did abide,
She was new lodged and newly deified.

'His browny locks did hang in crooked curls;
And every light occasion of the wind
Upon his lips their silken parcels hurls.
What's sweet to do, to do will aptly find:
Each eye that saw him did enchant the mind,
For on his visage was in little drawn
What largeness thinks in Paradise was sawn.

'Small show of man was yet upon his chin;
His phœnix down began but to appear
Like unshorn velvet on that termless skin
Whose bare out-bragg'd the web it seem'd to wear:
Yet show'd his visage by that cost more dear;
And nice affections wavering stood in doubt
If best were as it was, or best without.

'His qualities were beauteous as his form,
For maiden-tongued he was, and thereof free;
Yet, if men moved him, was he such a storm
As oft 'twixt May and April is to see,
When winds breathe sweet, unruly though they be.
His rudeness so with his authorized youth
Did livery falseness in a pride of truth.

'Well could he ride, and often men would say
"That horse his mettle from his rider takes:
Proud of subjection, noble by the sway,
What rounds, what bounds, what course, what stop he makes!"
And controversy hence a question takes,
Whether the horse by him became his deed,
Or he his manage by the well-doing steed.

'But quickly on this side the verdict went:
His real habitude gave life and grace
To appertainings and to ornament,
Accomplish'd in himself, not in his case:
All aids, themselves made fairer by their place,
Came for additions; yet their purposed trim
Pieced not his grace, but were all graced by him.

'So on the tip of his subduing tongue
All kind of arguments and question deep,
All replication prompt, and reason strong,
For his advantage still did wake and sleep:
To make the weeper laugh, the laugher weep,
He had the dialect and different skill,
Catching all passions in his craft of will.

'That he did in the general bosom reign
Of young, of old; and sexes both enchanted,
To dwell with him in thoughts, or to remain
In personal duty, following where he haunted:
Consents bewitch'd, ere he desire, have granted;
And dialogued for him what he would say,
Ask'd their own wills, and made their wills obey.

'Many there were that did his picture get,
To serve their eyes, and in it put their mind;
Like fools that in the imagination set
The goodly objects which abroad they find
Of lands and mansions, theirs in thought assign'd;
And labouring in moe pleasures to bestow them
Than the true gouty landlord which doth owe them:

' So many have, that never touch'd his hand, [heart.
Sweetly supposed them mistress of his
My woeful self, that did in freedom stand, [part,
And was my own fee-simple, not in
What with his art in youth, and youth in art, [power,
Threw my affections in his charmed
Reserved the stalk and gave him all my flower.

' Yet did I not, as some my equals did,
Demand of him, nor being desired yielded ;
Finding myself in honour so forbid,
With safest distance I mine honour shielded : [builded
Experience for me many bulwarks
Of proofs new-bleeding, which remain'd the foil [spoil.
Of this false jewel, and his amorous

' But, ah, who ever shunn'd by precedent
The destined ill she must herself assay ?
Or forced examples, 'gainst her own content,
To put the by-pass'd perils in her way ?
Counsel may stop awhile what will not stay ;
For when we rage, advice is often seen
By blunting us to make our wits more keen.

' Nor gives it satisfaction to our blood,
That we must curb it upon others' proof ; [good,
To be forbid the sweets that seem so
For fear of harms that preach in our behoof. [aloof !
O appetite, from judgment stand
The one a palate hath that needs will taste, [thy last."
Though Reason weep, and cry " It is

' For further I could say " This man 's untrue," [guiling ;
And knew the patterns of his foul be-
Heard where his plants in others' orchards grew, [smiling ;
Saw how deceits were gilded in his
Knew vows were ever brokers to defiling ; [but art,
Thought characters and words merely
And bastards of his foul adulterate heart.

' And long upon these terms I held my city, [maid,
Till thus he 'gan besiege me : " Gentle
Have of my suffering youth some feeling pity,
And be not of my holy vows afraid :
That 's to ye sworn to none was ever said ; [unto,
For feasts of love I have been call'd
Till now did ne'er invite, nor never woo.

' " All my offences that abroad you see
Are errors of the blood, none of the mind ; [may be,
Love made them not : with acture they
Where neither party is nor true nor kind : [shame did find ;
They sought their shame that so their
And so much less of shame in me remains, [contains.
By how much of me their reproach

' " Among the many that mine eyes have seen, [as warm'd,
Not one whose flame my heart so much
Or my affection put to the smallest teen,
Or any of my leisures ever charm'd :
Harm have I done to them, but ne'er was harm'd ; [was free,
Kept hearts in liveries, but mine own
And reign'd, commanding in his monarchy.

' " Look here, what tributes wounded fancies sent me, [blood ;
Of paled pearls and rubies red as
Figuring that they their passions likewise lent me
Of grief and blushes, aptly understood
In bloodless white and the encrimson'd mood ;
Effects of terror and dear modesty,
Encamp'd in hearts, but fighting outwardly.

' " And, lo, behold these talents of their hair, [pleach'd,
With twisted metal amorously im-
I have received from many a several fair, [seech'd,
Their kind acceptance weepingly be-
With the annexions of fair gems enrich'd, [amplify
And deep-brain'd sonnets that did
Each stone's dear nature, worth, and quality.

'"The diamond,—why, 'twas beautiful and hard, [tend;
Whereto his invised properties did
The deep-green emerald, in whose fresh regard [amend;
Weak sights their sickly radiance do
The heaven-hued sapphire and the opal blend [stone,
With objects manifold: each several
With wit well blazon'd, smiled or made some moan.

'"Lo, all these trophies of affections hot, [tender,
Of pensived and subdued desires the Nature hath charged me that I hoard them not, [render,
But yield them up where I myself must
That is, to you, my origin and ender;
For these, of force, must your oblations be,
Since I their altar, you enpatron me.

'"O, then, advance of yours that phraseless hand,
Whose white weighs down the airy scale of praise; [command,
Take all these similes to your own
Hallow'd with sighs that burning lungs did raise;
What me your minister, for you obeys,
Works under you; and to your audit comes [sums.

'"Lo, this device was sent me from a nun,
Or sister sanctified, of holiest note;
Which late her noble suit in court did shun, [soms dote;
Whose rarest havings made the blos-
For she was sought by spirits of richest coat, [remove,
But kept cold distance, and did thence
To spend her living in eternal love.

'"But, O my sweet, what labour is 't to leave [not strives,
The thing we have not, mastering what
Paling the place which did no form receive, [gyves?
Playing patient sports in unconstrained
She that her fame so to herself contrives, [flight,
The scars of battle 'scapeth by the
And makes her absence valiant, not her might.

'"O, pardon me, in that my boast is true: [eye
The accident which brought me to her
Upon the moment did her force subdue,
And now she would the caged cloister fly;
Religious love put out Religion's eye:
Not to be tempted, would she be immured, [cured.
And now, to tempt all, liberty pro-

'"How mighty then you are, O, hear me tell!
The broken bosoms that to me belong
Have emptied all their fountains in my well, [among:
And mine I pour your ocean all
I strong o'er them, and you o'er me being strong,
Must for your victory us all congest,
As compound love to physic your cold breast.

'"My parts had power to charm a sacred nun,
Who, disciplined, ay, dieted in grace,
Believed her eyes when they to assail begun, [place:
All vows and consecrations giving
O most potential love! vow, bond, nor space, [confine,
In thee hath neither sting, knot, nor
For thou art all, and all things else are thine.

'"When thou impressest, what are precepts worth [inflame,
Of stale example? When thou wilt
How coldly those impediments stand forth [fame!
Of wealth, of filial fear, law, kindred,
Love arms our peace 'gainst rule, 'gainst sense, 'gainst shame,
And sweetens, in the suffering pangs it bears, [fears.
The aloes of all forces, shocks, and

'"Now all these hearts that do on mine depend, [they pine;
Feeling it break, with bleeding groans
And supplicant their sighs to you extend, ['gainst mine,
To leave the battery that you make
Lending soft audience to my sweet design, [bonded oath
And credent soul to that strong-
That shall prefer and undertake my troth."

'This said, his watery eyes he did dismount, [my face;
Whose sights till then were levell'd on
Each cheek a river running from a fount [apace:
With brinish current downward flow'd
O, how the channel to the stream gave grace! [glowing roses
Who glazed with crystal gate the
That flame through water which their hue encloses.

'O father, what a hell of witchcraft lies
In the small orb of one particular tear!
But with the inundation of the eyes
What rocky heart to water will not wear? [here?
What breast so cold that is not warmed
O cleft effect! cold modesty, hot wrath,
Both fire from hence and chill extincture hath.

'For, lo, his passion, but an art of craft, [tears;
Even there resolved my reason into
There my white stole of chastity I daff'd, [fears;
Shook off my sober guards and civil
Appear to him, as he to me appears,
All melting; though our drops this difference bore, [restore.
His poison'd me, and mine did him

In him a plenitude of subtle matter,
Applied to cautels, all strange forms receives, [water,
Of burning blushes, or of weeping
Or swooning paleness; and he takes and leaves,
In either's aptness, as it best deceives,
To blush at speeches rank, to weep at woes, [shows:
Or to turn white and swoon at tragic

'That not a heart which in his level came, [aim,
Could 'scape the hail of his all-hurting
Showing fair nature is both kind and tame; [he would maim:
And, veil'd in them, did win whom
Against the thing he sought he would exclaim; [luxury,
When he most burn'd in heart-wish'd
He preach'd pure maid, and praised cold chastity.

'Thus merely with the garment of a Grace [cover'd;
The naked and concealed fiend he
That the unexperient gave the tempter place, [hover'd.
Which like a cherubin above them
Who, young and simple, would not be so lover'd? [make Ay me! I fell; and yet do question
What I should do again for such a sake.

'O, that infected moisture of his eye,
O, that false fire which in his cheek so glow'd, [did fly,
O, that forced thunder from his heart
O, that sad breath his spongy lungs bestow'd, [owed,
O, all that borrow'd motion seeming
Would yet again betray the fore-betray'd,
And new pervert a reconciled maid!'

THE PASSIONATE PILGRIM

I.

When my love swears that she is made of truth, [lies,
I do believe her, though I know she
That she might think me some untutor'd youth,
Unskilful in the world's false forgeries.
Thus vainly thinking that she thinks me young, [best,
Although I know my years be past the
I smiling credit her false-speaking tongue, [rest.
Outfacing faults in love with love's ill
But wherefore says my love that she is young? [old?
And wherefore say not I that I am
O, love's best habit is a soothing tongue,
And age, in love, loves not to have years told. [love with me,
Therefore I'll lie with love, and
Since that our faults in love thus smother'd be.

II.

Two loves I have, of comfort and despair, [still;
That like two spirits do suggest me
My better angel is a man right fair,
My worser spirit a woman colour'd ill.
To win me soon to hell, my female evil
Tempteth my better angel from my side, [devil,
And would corrupt my saint to be a
Wooing his purity with her fair pride.
And whether that my angel be turn'd fiend,
Suspect I may, yet not directly tell:
For being both to me, both to each friend,
I guess one angel in another's hell;
The truth I shall not know, but live in doubt, [out.
Till my bad angel fire my good one

III.

Did not the heavenly rhetoric of thine eye, [hold argument,
'Gainst whom the world could not
Persuade my heart to this false perjury?
Vows for thee broke deserve not punishment.
A woman I forswore; but I will prove,
Thou being a goddess, I forswore not thee: [love;
My vow was earthly, thou a heavenly
Thy grace being gain'd cures all disgrace in me. [vapour is;
My vow was breath, and breath a
Then, thou fair sun, that on this earth doth shine,
Exhale this vapour vow; in thee it is:
If broken, then it is no fault of mine.
If by me broke, what fool is not so wise
To break an oath, to win a paradise?

IV.

Sweet Cytherea, sitting by a brook
With young Adonis, lovely, fresh, and green, [look,
Did court the lad with many a lovely
Such looks as none could look but beauty's queen.
She told him stories to delight his ear;
She show'd him favours to allure his eye; [and there:
To win his heart, she touch'd him here
Touches so soft still conquer chastity.
But whether unripe years did want conceit, [fer,
Or he refused to take her figured prof-
The tender nibbler would not touch the bait, [offer:
But smile and jest at every gentle
Then fell she on her back, fair queen, and toward: [froward!
He rose and ran away; ah, fool too

V.

If love make me forsworn, how shall I swear to love?
O never faith could hold, if not to beauty vow'd:
Though to myself forsworn, to thee I'll constant prove;
Those thoughts, to me like oaks, to thee like osiers bow'd.
Study his bias leaves, and makes his book thine eyes,

Where all those pleasures live that art can comprehend.
If knowledge be the mark, to know thee shall suffice ; [thee commend ;
Well learned is that tongue that well can
All ignorant that soul that sees thee without wonder ;
Which is to me some praise, that I thy parts admire :
Thine eye Jove's lightning seems, thy voice his dreadful thunder,
Which, not to anger bent, is music and sweet fire. [that wrong,
Celestial as thou art, O do not love
To sing heaven's praise with such an earthly tongue.

Scarce had the sun dried up the dewy morn, [for shade,
And scarce the herd gone to the hedge
When Cytherea, all in love forlorn,
A longing tarriance for Adonis made
Under an osier growing by a brook,
A brook where Adon used to cool his spleen : [look
Hot was the day ; she hotter that did
For his approach, that often there had been. [by,
Anon he comes, and throws his mantle
And stood stark naked on the brook's green brim : [ous eye,
The sun look'd on the world with glori-
Yet not so wistly as this queen on him.
He, spying her, bounced in, whereas he stood : [I a flood ! '
' O Jove,' quoth she, ' why was not

VII.

Fair is my love, but not so fair as fickle ;
Mild as a dove, but neither true nor trusty ; [brittle ;
Brighter than glass, and yet, as glass is,
Softer than wax, and yet, as iron, rusty :
A lily pale, with damask dye to grace her, [her.
None fairer, nor none falser to deface

Her lips to mine how often hath she join'd, [love swearing !
Between each kiss her oaths of true
How many tales to please me hath she coin'd, [fearing !
Dreading my love, the loss thereof still
Yet in the midst of all her pure protestings, [all were jestings.
Her faith, her oaths, her tears, and
She burn'd with love, as straw with fire flameth ; [out-burneth ;
She burn'd out love, as soon as straw
She framed the love, and yet she foil'd the framing ; [turning.
She bade love last, and yet she fell a-
Was this a lover, or a lecher whether?
Bad in the best, though excellent in neither.

VIII.

If music and sweet poetry agree,
As they must needs, the sister and the brother, [and me,
Then must the love be great 'twixt thee
Because thou lovest the one, and I the other. [venly touch
Dowland to thee is dear, whose hea-
Upon the lute doth ravish human sense ; [such Spenser to me, whose deep conceit is
As, passing all conceit, needs no defence.
Thou lovest to hear the sweet melodious sound [makes ;
That Phœbus' lute, the queen of music,
And I in deep delight am chiefly drown'd
Whenas himself to singing he betakes.
One god is god of both, as poets feign ; [thee remain.
One knight loves both, and both in

IX.

Fair was the morn when the fair queen of love,
[1] * * * * *
Paler for sorrow than her milk-white dove, [and wild ;
For Adon's sake, a youngster proud
Her stand she takes upon a steep-up hill : [hounds ;
Anon Adonis comes with horn and
She, silly queen, with more than love's good will, [those grounds :
Forbade the boy he should not pass
' Once,' quoth she, ' did I see a fair sweet youth [a boar,
Here in these brakes deep-wounded with Deep in the thigh, a spectacle of ruth !
See, in my thigh,' quoth she, ' here was the sore.' [wounds than one,
She showed hers : he saw more
And blushing fled, and left her all alone.

Sweet rose, fair flower, untimely pluck'd, soon faded,
Pluck'd in the bud, and faded in the spring!
Bright orient pearl, alack, too timely shaded!
Fair creature, kill'd too soon by death's sharp sting!
Like a green plum that hangs upon a tree,
And falls, through wind, before the fall should be.
I weep for thee, and yet no cause I have;
For why thou left'st me nothing in thy will:
And yet thou left'st me more than I did crave;
For why I craved nothing of thee still:
O yes, dear friend, I pardon crave of thee,
Thy discontent thou didst bequeath to me.

xi.

Venus, with young Adonis sitting by her
Under a myrtle shade, began to woo him:
She told the youngling how god Mars did try her,
And as he fell to her, so fell she to him.
'Even thus,' quoth she, 'the warlike god embraced me,'
And then she clipp'd Adonis in her arms;
'Even thus,' quoth she, 'the warlike god unlaced me,'
As if the boy should use like loving charms;
'Even thus,' quoth she, 'he seized on my lips,'
And with her lips on his did act the seizure:
And as she fetched breath, away he skips,
And would not take her meaning nor her pleasure.
Ah, that I had my lady at this bay,
To kiss and clip me till I run away!

xii.

Crabbed age and youth cannot live together:
Youth is full of pleasance, age is full of care;
Youth like summer morn, age like winter weather;
Youth like summer brave, age like winter bare.
Youth is full of sport, age's breath is short;
Youth is nimble, age is lame;
Youth is hot and bold, age is weak and cold;
Youth is wild, and age is tame.
Age, I do abhor thee; youth, I do adore thee;
O, my love, my love is young!
Age, I do defy thee: O, sweet shepherd, hie thee,
For methinks thou stay'st too long.

xiii.

Beauty is but a vain and doubtful good;
A shining gloss that fadeth suddenly;
A flower that dies when first it 'gins to bud;
A brittle glass that's broken presently:
A doubtful good, a gloss, a glass, a flower,
Lost, faded, broken, dead within an hour.
And as goods lost are seld or never found,
As faded gloss no rubbing will refresh,
As flowers dead lie wither'd on the ground,
As broken glass no cement can redress,
So beauty blemish'd once 's for ever lost,
In spite of physic, painting, pain and cost.

xiv.

Good night, good rest. Ah, neither be my share:
She bade good night that kept my rest away;
And daff'd me to a cabin hang'd with care,
To descant on the doubts of my decay.
'Farewell,' quoth she, 'and come again to-morrow.'
Fare well I could not, for I supp'd with sorrow.
Yet at my parting sweetly did she smile,
In scorn or friendship, nill I construe whether:
'T may be, she joy'd to jest at my exile,
'T may be, again to make me wander thither:
'Wander,' a word for shadows like myself,
As take the pain, but cannot pluck the pelf.

xv.

Lord, how mine eyes throw gazes to the east!
My heart doth charge the watch; the morning rise
Doth cite each moving sense from idle eyes,
Not daring trust the office of mine rest.
While Philomela sits and sings, I sit and mark,
And wish her lays were tuned like the lark;

For she doth welcome daylight with her ditty,
And drives away dark dismal-dreaming night:
The night so pack'd, I post unto my pretty;
Heart hath his hope, and eyes their wished sight;
Sorrow changed to solace, solace mix'd with sorrow;
For why, she sigh'd, and bade me come to-morrow.

Were I with her, the night would post too soon;
But now are minutes added to the hours;
To spite me now, each minute seems a moon;
Yet not for me, shine sun to succour flowers!
Pack night, peep day; good day, of night now borrow:
Short, night, to-night, and length thyself to-morrow.

SONNETS TO SUNDRY NOTES OF MUSIC

I.

It was a lording's daughter, the fairest one of three, [well might be,
That liked of her master as well as Till looking on an Englishman, the fair'st that eye could see,
Her fancy fell a-turning.
Long was the combat doubtful that love with love did fight,
To leave the master loveless, or kill the gallant knight: [a spite
To put in practice either, alas, it was Unto the silly damsel!
But one must be refused; more mickle was the pain
That nothing could be used to turn them both to gain,
For of the two the trusty knight was wounded with disdain:
Alas, she could not help it!
Thus art with arms contending was victor of the day, [the maid away:
Which by a gift of learning did bear
Then, lullaby, the learned man hath got the lady gay;
For now my song is ended.

II.

On a day, alack the day!
Love, whose month was ever May,
Spied a blossom passing fair,
Playing in the wanton air:
Through the velvet leaves the wind,
All unseen, 'gan passage find;
That the lover, sick to death,
Wish'd himself the heaven's breath.
'Air,' quoth he, 'thy cheeks may blow;
Air, would I might triumph so!
But, alas! my hand hath sworn
Ne'er to pluck thee from thy thorn:
Vow, alack! for youth unmeet:
Youth, so apt to pluck a sweet.
Thou for whom Jove would swear
Juno but an Ethiope were;
And deny himself for Jove,
Turning mortal for thy love.'

III.

My flocks feed not,
My ewes breed not,
My rams speed not,
All is amiss:
Love 's denying,
Faith 's defying,
Heart 's renying,
Causer of this.
All my merry jigs are quite forgot,
All my lady's love is lost, God wot:
Where her faith was firmly fix'd in love,
There a nay is placed without remove.
One silly cross
Wrought all my loss; [dame!
O frowning Fortune, cursed, fickle
For now I see
Inconstancy
More in women than in men remain.

In black mourn I,
All fears scorn I,
Love hath forlorn me,
Living in thrall:
Heart is bleeding,
All help needing,
O cruel speeding,
Fraughted with gall.
My shepherd's pipe can sound no deal;
My wether's bell rings doleful knell;
My curtail dog, that wont to have play'd,
Plays not at all, but seems afraid;
My sighs so deep
Procure to weep, [plight.
In howling wise, to see my doleful
How sighs resound
Through heartless ground,
Like a thousand vanquish'd men in bloody fight!

Clear wells spring not,
Sweet birds sing not,
Green plants bring not
Forth their dye;
Herds stand weeping,
Flocks all sleeping,
Nymphs back peeping
Fearfully: [swains,
All our pleasure known to us poor
All our merry meetings on the plains,
All our evening sport from us is fled,
All our love is lost, for Love is dead.
Farewell, sweet lass,

Thy like ne'er was [my moan :
For a sweet content, the cause of all
Poor Corydon
Must live alone ; [is none.
Other help for him I see that there

IV.

Whenas thine eye hath chose the dame,
And stall'd the deer that thou wouldst strike,
Let reason rule things worthy blame,
As well as fancy, partial wight :
Take counsel of some wiser head,
Neither too young nor yet unwed.

And when thou comest thy tale to tell,
Smooth not thy tongue with filed talk,
Lest she some subtle practice smell,—
A cripple soon can find a halt ;—
But plainly say thou lovest her well,
And set thy person forth to sell.

And to her will frame all thy ways ;
Spare not to spend, and chiefly there
Where thy desert may merit praise,
By ringing in thy lady's ear :
The strongest castle, tower, and town,
The golden bullet beats it down.

Serve always with assured trust,
And in thy suit be humble true ;
Unless thy lady prove unjust,
Seek never thou to choose anew :
When time shall serve, be thou not slack [back.
To proffer, though she put thee

What though her frowning brows be bent,
Her cloudy looks will clear ere night :
And then too late she will repent
That thus dissembled her delight ;
And twice desire, ere it be day,
That which with scorn she put away.

What though she strive to try her strength,
And ban and brawl, and say thee nay,
Her feeble force will yield at length,
When craft hath taught her thus to say,
'Had women been so strong as men,
In faith, you had not had it then.'

The wiles and guiles that women work,
Dissembled with an outward show,
The tricks and toys that in them lurk,
The cock that treads them shall not know.
Have you not heard it said full oft,
A woman's nay doth stand for nought ?

Think, women love to match with men,
And not to live so like a saint :
Here is no heaven ; they, holy then,
Begin when age doth them attaint.
Were kisses all the joys in bed,
One woman would another wed.

But, soft ! enough, too much, I fear ;
For if my mistress hear my song,
She will not stick to ring mine ear,
To teach my tongue to be so long :
Yet will she blush, here be it said,
To hear her secrets so bewray'd.

V.

Live with me, and be my love,
And we will all the pleasures prove
That hills and valleys, dales and fields,
And all the craggy mountains yields.

There will we sit upon the rocks,
And see the shepherds feed their flocks,
By shallow rivers, to whose falls
Melodious birds sing madrigals.

There will I make thee a bed of roses,
With a thousand fragrant posies,
A cap of flowers, and a kirtle
Embroider'd all with leaves of myrtle.

A belt of straw and ivy buds,
With coral clasps and amber studs ;
And if these pleasures may thee move,
Then live with me and be my love.

LOVE'S ANSWER.

If that the world and love were young,
And truth in every shepherd's tongue,
These pretty pleasures might me move
To live with thee and be thy love.

VI.

As it fell upon a day
In the merry month of May,
Sitting in a pleasant shade
Which a grove of myrtles made,
Beasts did leap, and birds did sing,
Trees did grow, and plants did spring ;
Every thing did banish moan,
Save the nightingale alone ;
She, poor bird, as all forlorn,
Lean'd her breast up-till a thorn,
And there sung the dolefull'st ditty,
That to hear it was great pity :
'Fie, fie, fie,' now would she cry ;
'Tereu, tereu !' by and by ;

That to hear her so complain,
Scarce I could from tears refrain;
For her griefs, so lively shown,
Made me think upon mine own.
Ah, thought I, thou mourn'st in vain!
None takes pity on thy pain:
Senseless trees they cannot hear thee;
Ruthless beasts they will not cheer thee:
King Pandion he is dead;
All thy friends are lapp'd in lead;
All thy fellow birds do sing,
Careless of thy sorrowing.
Even so, poor bird, like thee,
None alive will pity me.
Whilst as fickle Fortune smiled,
Thou and I were both beguiled.

Every one that flatters thee
Is no friend in misery.
Words are easy, like the wind;
Faithful friends are hard to find:
Every man will be thy friend
Whilst thou hast wherewith to spend;
But if store of crowns be scant,
No man will supply thy want.
If that one be prodigal,
Bountiful they will him call,
And with such-like flattering,
'Pity but he were a king;'
If he be addict to vice,
Quickly him they will entice;
If to women he be bent,
They have at commandement:
But if Fortune once do frown,
Then farewell his great renown;
They that fawn'd on him before
Use his company no more.
He that is thy friend indeed,
He will help thee in thy need:
If thou sorrow, he will weep;
If thou wake, he cannot sleep;
Thus of every grief in heart
He with thee doth bear a part.
These are certain signs to know
Faithful friend from flattering foe.

THE PHŒNIX AND THE TURTLE

LET the bird of loudest lay,
On the sole Arabian tree,
Herald sad and trumpet be,
To whose sound chaste wings obey.

But thou shrieking harbinger,
Foul precurrer of the fiend,
Augur of the fever's end,
To this troop come thou not near!

From this session interdict
Every fowl of tyrant wing,
Save the eagle, feather'd king:
Keep the obsequy so strict.

Let the priest in surplice white,
That defunctive music can,
Be the death-divining swan,
Lest the requiem lack his right.

And thou treble-dated crow,
That thy sable gender makest
With the breath thou givest and takest,
'Mongst our mourners shalt thou go.

Here the anthem doth commence:
Love and constancy is dead;
Phœnix and the turtle fled
In a mutual flame from hence.

So they loved, as love in twain
Had the essence but in one;
Two distincts, division none:
Number there in love was slain.

Hearts remote, yet not asunder;
Distance, and no space was seen
'Twixt the turtle and his queen:
But in them it were a wonder.

So between them love did shine,
That the turtle saw his right
Flaming in the phœnix' sight;
Either was the other's mine.

Property was thus appall'd,
That the self was not the same;
Single nature's double name
Neither two nor one was call'd.

Reason, in itself confounded,
Saw division grow together;
To themselves yet either neither,
Simple were so well compounded,

That it cried, 'How true a twain
Seemeth this concordant one!
Love hath reason, reason none,
If what parts can so remain.'

Whereupon it made this threne
To the phœnix and the dove,
Co-supremes and stars of love,
As chorus to their tragic scene.

THRENOS.

Beauty, truth, and rarity,
Grace in all simplicity,
Here enclosed in cinders lie.

Death is now the phœnix' nest;
And the turtle's loyal breast
To eternity doth rest,

Leaving no posterity:
'Twas not their infirmity,
It was married chastity.

Truth may seem, but cannot be;
Beauty brag, but 'tis not she;
Truth and beauty buried be.

To this urn let those repair
That are either true or fair;
For these dead birds sigh a prayer.
